Col. McMullen Found Guilty Of Accepting Tax Fight Fee

Former Patent Division Chief Is Allowed Freedom on Bail.

Sentence Stayed; Appeal Planned

Veteran Officer Shows No Emotion When Verdict Is Read.

Col. Joseph I. McMullen, former chief of the patents section of the War Department, last night was found guilty in the District Supreme Court of accepting a fee from a private firm while in the Army.

The maximum penalty for the offense is two years' imprisonment, a $10,000 fine, and disqualification for further Government service.

The jury was given the case at 6:30 p. m. It brought in its guilty verdict at 10:50 p. m.

Assistant District Attorney David A. Pine, who, with John J. Wilson, prosecuted Col. McMullen, told Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue that since there was a substantial question of law involved, it wouldn't be fair to commit the veteran officer at this time.

$2,000 Bond.

Thereupon Justice O'Donoghue set bond at $2,000.

William E. Leahy, defense attorney, announced that he would seek a new trial or appeal the case.

Col. McMullen showed no emotion when the verdict was announced. With him at the time was his son, Bruce McMullen, a lawyer, who had been aiding defense counsel.

McMullen, who several months ago was "deeply censured," fined and demoted for accepting two round-trip tickets to California from a dealer in surplus Army goods, was tried under section 113 of the criminal code, which prohibits Government officers from accepting compensation from a private firm in relation to matters in which the United States is interested.

McMullen was accused of accepting a $1,500 fee from the Cuban-American Manganese Corporation, while on active duty with the War Department.

Four-Day Trial.

Officials of this company testified in the course of the four-day trial that McMullen had been paid $1,000 for his aid in defeating a proposed tax on manganese imports in April, 1932. They said he accepted an additional $500 as his retainer for May and June.

McMullen, taking the stand in his own defense, admitted accepting the firm's check, but insisted that it was a "retainer for future services." He said no part of the money was accepted for his work against the proposed tax on manganese imports.

McMullen conceded that he had not actually performed any services for the Cuban-American Corporation at a later date.

Paid by Check.

Leahy, in his closing argument, said that for 40 years McMullen was a trusted War Department official. He opposed the tax measure, Leahy said, solely because of the importance of manganese to the national defense.

Leahy and William J. Hughes asked Justice O'Donoghue to direct a verdict of not guilty. They cited numerous cases in which they contended superior courts had held that a check was not compensation. (Col. McMullen was paid by check.) The attorneys argued that there was no actual compensation until the money was credited to Col. McMullen's bank account.

Justice O'Donoghue refused to direct a not guilty verdict, and then, in a surprise move, ordered a night session of the court to await the jury's verdict.

Girl Slain in Home; Assailant Escapes

Her assailant, an unidentified man, escaped on foot. He brandished a revolver in his hand. Police broadcast his description. His arrest was expected momentarily.

The girl was taken to Casualty Hospital, where she was pronounced dead.

A cloak of secrecy was thrown about the case by homicide squad detectives. The motive remained to be disclosed.

Murder Charge Voided Against Loeb's Slayer

Joliet, Ill., April 30 (AP).—A charge of murder against James Day, 22-year-old convict, who admitted killing Richard Loeb with a razor in a Stateville prison bathroom, was stricken by Judge Edwin Wilson today, with leave to reinstate.

State's Attorney William R. McCabe, who made the motion, said the State lacked witnesses to substantiate the murder charge.

Loeb and Nathan Leopold, sons of wealthy Chicago families, were sentenced to life and 99 years for the thrill murder of 14-year-old Bobby Franks in 1924. Day was sentenced for robbery.

Miss Marianna Dunn Is Wed To Count de Baillet-Latour

Diplomats, Official and Resident Society Throng St. Matthew's Church for Marriage of State Department Aid's Daughter.

By Francesca McKenney.

Miss Marianna Dunn, beautiful daughter of the Special Assistant to the Secretary of State and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, was married yesterday to Count Guy de Baillet-Latour, son of a distinguished Belgian family.

The marriage, one of the outstanding social events of the season, was performed in St. Matthew's Church by the rector, Mgr. Edward L. Buckey, who afterward celebrated a nuptial mass.

A notable gathering, representative of the Diplomatic Corps and official and resident society, witnessed the ceremony that made the young American girl a bride and a countess.

Palms Form Background.

St. Matthew's, famed for its interior of varicolored marble, was decorated with tall cedar trees and Australian ferns, which formed a screen at the back of the altar.

The altar was massed with Madonna lilies and likewise the communion rail. A white carpet ran the length of the church.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of ivory satin made on simple lines, with a high cowl neckline and tight-fitting sleeves. The wide circular train, many yards in length, fell from the waistline. A tulle veil, which extended to the end of the train, was bordered with a band of rare Belgian lace. She carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Bridegroom In Uniform.

The bridegroom wore his uniform of the "Guides," or Household Cavalry, in which regiment he is a lieutenant in the reserve corps. The tunic and breeches were of khaki with gold epaulettes, scarlet triangles on the rolled collar, and a black belt.

Miss Cynthia Dunn, young sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and only attendant. She wore a picture frock of ivory-colored organza splashed with French blue and deep peach flowers. It was fashioned with a tight bodice and a very full skirt to the floor, short puffed sleeves and a belt of deep peach velvet ribbon which marked the natural waistline. Her small off-the-face hat of ivory-colored horsehair had a tiny bunch of cornflowers in front. She carried an arm bouquet of delphinium and African daisies of a deep peach shade.

Zioncheck, on Honeymoon, Seized in Virginia as Speeder

Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, of Washington, who "settled down" to a quiet married life three days ago, was arrested again yesterday, this time in historic Alexandria, Va.

He was charged with going 62 miles an hour in his 12-cylinder roadster and with disorderly conduct.

The latter charge was based on Zioncheck's alleged cursing of George Ellmore, the Alexandria motorcycle policeman who arrested him.

"He called me a dirty name," said Ellmore.

The epithet, Ellmore explained, consists of what in Virginia are known as "fighting words," unless they are followed with a smile.

Mrs. Zioncheck, who before her runaway marriage Tuesday was Ruby Louise Nix, a PWA stenographer, was in the car when they were halted on the Mount Vernon boulevard just inside the southern limits of Alexandria.

Although his bride wished to spend her marriage trip in Bermuda, Zioncheck revealed in a note he left for a Post reporter at his apartment that Florida was their destination. This note, in the nature of a prepared statement for The Post, will be seen in full below.

In another Zioncheckian gesture, the Representative convulsed the House by presenting a written request for an indefinite leave of absence to conduct "official business." The House laughted as it granted the request, amused because members always take "leave" without asking.

The night before Mrs. Zioncheck had said:

"He can't sit still a minute. I am going to get an anchor for the car so we can't go so fast."

But there was no anchor on the big roadster when it came through Alexandria on the way South yesterday.

Policeman Ellmore spied the car just as it entered a 25-mile-an-hour zone and began pacing it.

Ellmore said his speedometer was registering 62 miles an hour when he stopped Zioncheck. This was 8 miles shy of the speed Zioncheck

World Faces Another War, Hull Warns

2,000 C. of C. Delegates Hear Trade Treaties Called Peace Aid.

By Sidney Olson.

Warning that there is "a rising danger of a new world catastrophe" such as the World War, Secretary of State Cordell Hull told 2,000 delegates to the United States Chamber of Commerce meeting yesterday that only through such means as the Administration's reciprocal trade agreements can the threat be averted.

Asking understanding and cooperation by business and industry of the Administration's efforts to promote the freer flow of international commerce, the Secretary gravely outlined the "appalling implications of the tragic picture," saying:

"In the past few months we have witnessed a swift increase in the international political tension; a recrudescense of the military spirit, which sees no goal in life except triumph by force; an expansion of standing armies; a sharp increase of military budgets, and actual warfare in some portions of the globe.

"Human and material resources are being shifted, on a truly alarming scale, in a military direction rather than one of peace and peace pursuits."

Approves Trade Pacts.

The chamber, which applauded the Secretary's address, approved the reciprocal trade agreements in two resolutions, one on agriculture and one on foreign trade, with some qualifications.

In the foreign-trade resolution "the need of redoubled attention to the problems of foreign-trade policy" was stressed; "the great need for reasonable stabilization, which will permit business transactions to go forward without the hazards of speculation" was emphasized, and steps to bring about such stabilization urged.

In the agriculture resolution the Chamber members agreed that it "appears most timely that committees of the agricultural and foreign trade departments of the Chamber should collaborate in arriving at joint recommendations of policy which would at once protect our agriculture in the home markets which it has long occupied and permit the continued use of reciprocal trade agreements based upon removal of restrictions which are arbitrary and do not serve a true economic purpose."

The resolution, however, recommended a "complete investigation of the effects of trade agreements in generalizing concessions to other countries, and steps taken at once to put an end to effects of this kind prejudicial to agriculture or any other field of enterprise."

Doubts Treaties.

But another speaker, Fred W. Sargent, president of the Chicago and North Western Railway Co., of Chicago, expressing strong doubt that the decline in American farm exports can be corrected, "no matter how well-intentioned our foreign trade advocates may be," went on to say:

"We may indulge here and there in altruistic reciprocal treaties, hoping that other nations will see the light and will open up the markets to our farmers, but I have little faith in any immediate, successful consummation of such a policy."

Assailing the imports of foreign products "on an enormous scale" and saying it was "amazing" that the "United States has for the last decade imported more foodstuffs than it exported," Sargent demanded that there be "less emphasis on foreign trade" and that the remedy for the present economic situation would be in a three-point program, as follows:

"1. Preserve the American market for the American farmer.

"2. Assist him through Government aid in the cultivation of new crops or substitute crops in place of agricultural commodities now imported from foreign lands.

"3. Advance the industrial use of American farm products through applied science."

Sargent, in one of several adverse references to the Administration, said:

"I have never been able to grasp that new economic philosophy which would have us believe that we can have more wealth to dis-

3 Dead, 50 Hurt In Iowa Tornado

Milford, Iowa, April 30 (AP).—A tornado ripped a quarter-mile-wide path of destruction through northwestern Iowa and southwestern Minnesota late today, killing at least 3 persons and injuring at least 50 others.

The twister struck near Sheldon, Iowa, hedge-hopped in a northeasterly direction through Everly, Terrace Park on West Okoboji Lake, and Estherville, Iowa, and then raced northward into Minnesota.

George Roskins, about 30, hired farm hand, was killed on a farm southwest of Milford. Mrs. Julius Heuer, a farm woman living near Everly, was also killed.

In Iowa at least 24 persons were known to have been injured at Milford and Estherville.

Early reports from Fairmont said at least 25 were known to have been hurt and a few minutes later advices said hospitals were crowded with injured.

Slash Costs, C. of C. Plea To New Deal

Resolutions Ask U. S. to Stop Attempts at Business Control.

Rail Head Denounces Office Holders and Political System.

Insisting that the Government reduce expenditures, stop attempts to control production, cease competition with private industry and allow business to work out its own social security plan, delegates to the United States Chamber of Commerce Conference yesterday joined, 1,999 strong, in vigorous approval of 15 resolutions.

The 2,000 delegate, Edwin L. Rickert, executive secretary of the Better Connersville Association, of Connersville, Ind., uttered a lone but firm "No" on one resolution, that on "Business and social security," declaring it "far too reactionary to be any good."

The resolutions, quietly approved in comparison with their tumultous revision last year when speakers from the floor insisted that they be strongly revised to criticize the Administration more severely, included the following points:

Re-employment—The chamber approved the action of the board of directors in providing for the appointment of a special committee to survey the re-employment possibilities in private enterprise throughout the country.

Social Security.

Business and social security—The chamber said: "When Government attempts by legislative means or executive fiat to impose upon business rules of conduct pertaining to such matters as wages, hours, conditions and terms of employment, or other restrictive measures interferring with the free play of economic forces, it retards both the material and spiritual progress of the Nation. Business would ignore its gravest responsibility if it failed to provide the greatest possible degree of economic security for the individual. The attainment of this end so necessary to the furtherance of American ideals will require not only the maintenance of high wages, but a constructive solution to the complex problem of security to the individual when he or she has outlived his capacity to earn a comfortable living. Here again interference by Government in attempts to reduce the whole complex problem to one of legislative formula can only postpone the final solution.

Government control of production—The chamber indicated that the "proposed Federal legislation intended to bring about Government control over hours and wages in enterprises performing work on Government contracts would involve the imposition of codes in a most objectionable form.

Asks Investigation.

Government competition—The Chamber stated its "opposition to Government competition with the lawful enterprise of its citizens" and reiterated the Chamber's "advocacy of legislation to require every Federal agency engaging in such competitive activities to keep and to disclose to the public a record of its costs."

The judiciary—The Chamber repeated its traditional opposition to "every proposal tending to deprive the Supreme Court of the United States of its functions to determine the validity of Congressional action; or tending to minimize the power

Weather Bureau forecasters said today would continue warm with skies partly overcast.

Deficit Near 6 Billion, Tax Bill Inadequate, Morgenthau Declares

House Inflation Vote Forced By Pennsylvania WPA Clash

Berlin Indorses Frazier-Lemke Act, Says New Deal Opposed Him.

The long static inflation issue was unexpectedly revived in the House yesterday by a series of swift developments that promised to force an early House vote on the $3,000,000,000 Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill.

A petition on the highly inflationary measure was fully signed by a majority, 218, of House members shortly after the chamber convened at noon. Action was precipitated by new charges of politics in Pennsylvania WPA relief administration.

The petition automatically operates to discharge the House Rules Committee from consideration of the bill, already favorably reported by the House Agricultural Committee, and to compel House consideration on the second or fourth Monday of this month.

Left-wing expansionists, led by Representative William Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, were jubilant over the development, but House Democratic Whip Patrick Boland, who has a record of canny vote forecasts, insisted the bill can be defeated easily.

After months of successful Administration maneuvering to keep the measure off the floor, and feverish leadership activity to persuade Democrats to withdraw their signatures, a row with the Administration, growing out of the Pennsylvania Democratic primaries, finally catapulted the bill from the Speaker's desk.

It was Representative William M. Berlin (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, recently defeated for renomination in the Pennsylvania primaries, who attached the last signature to the Frazier-Lemke petition. He said he had influenced earlier signatures by some of his friends.

Berlin charged the Administration

Reaguer Jurors Fail to Agree; Are Locked Up

Panel Put Under Guard After 7-Hour Deadlock in Murder Case.

After deliberating more than seven hours, the jury of 12 men weighing the fate of William H. Reaguer, Culpeper (Va.) undertaker, charged with the penknife murder of Willie Mae Wood, was locked up for the night at 10:19 p. m.

When word that the venire had failed to reach a verdict was brought to the mortician in his cell at the District Supreme Court last night, he smiled wearily and prepared for his return to his cell at the jail.

The grim-faced jurymen, who have it in their power to send the defendant to the electric chair, will return to their chambers from the Continental Hotel today at 10 a. m. and resume deliberations.

Reaguer stoically received the news that he would not know his future until today, at least.

Most of last night Reaguer spent in his cell playing solitaire. He sometimes talked and joked with the deputy marshals on duty. Apparently he had pulled himself together after his supper.

Mrs. Andrew Perrow, one of Reaguer's married daughters, and his wife, Mrs. Bessie Reaguer, visited him last night, as did his attorneys.

As night fell the 57-year-old prisoner, father of two married daughters and once a leader in his Virginia community; puffed cigaret after cigaret.

Justice Oscar Luhring, who has presided at the prolonged trial, finished his 35-minute charge to the jury just before 3 p. m.

The jury could return one of three possible verdicts in the case of the Government against William H. Reaguer, Justice Luhring tersely said.

Under the law, Reaguer might be guilty of first-degree murder, for which death by electrocution is mandatory. He might be guilty of second-degree murder and sent to

Italians Near, Addis Ababa's Chieftains Flee

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Addis Ababi, April 30.—The Ethiopian imperial government evacuated Addis Ababa tonight when runners and refugee foreign Red Cross workers arrived to report Italian camp fires twinkling behind the hills ringing the capital.

Utmost confusion prevailed here. All available men in Addis Ababa were rushed into the mountains between the capital and Debra Birhan in preparation for a last desperate effort to stem the Italian advance, but their movements resulted in even greater confusion.

Emperor Haile Selassie ordered troops going forward to fall back. His Majesty ordered 3,000 of his own men back of Addis Ababa not to fight for possession of the city. He hoped for a bloodless occupation. Resistance, he feared, might cost the lives of many noncombatants and endangers foreigners.

Ethiopian police commanders were ordered to remain at their posts with their men until the last possible moment in order to maintain public order.

Hope that Ethiopia could hold Addis Ababa was abandoned when the British Red Cross announced that more than 2,000 Italian infantrymen were advancing rapidly only 10 miles north of Debra Birhan, 60 miles from Addis Ababa on the Imperial Highway from Dessye. Debra Birhan is one of Ethiopia's largest grain centers.

Selassie in Conference With American Consul

Addis Ababa, April 30 (AP).—Emperor Haile Selassie returned suddenly today to his doomed capital while high officials and natives fled in panic against the approach of conquering Roman legions.

The little ruler of Africa's last empire, who has waged a losing seven-month fight against the Italians, came from the northern front and entered a conference with the American minister-resident and consul general, Cornelius Van H. Engert.

Afterward he announced:

"Ethiopia is not defeated. It will carry on its fight to the last man."

Forest Fire Near Woodring Estate

A forest fire, which spread over hundreds of acres in nearby Maryland late yesterday, endangered the historic Hale estate, now the home of Assistant Secretary of War Harry A. Woodring.

Another famous estate,—Dower House, now the property of Mrs. Eleanor Patterson—is about a mile away from the fire.

Volunteer firemen from several Maryland towns and a force of Civilian Conservation Camp workers were engaged in battling the fire.

4 Legionnaires Barricade Hall In Fight Against Paris Eviction

By the Associated Press.

Paris, (Friday), May 1.—Ten prominent members of the Paris American Legion "barricaded" themselves in their headquarters last night after the building committee called police to put them out, and early today four of them still held their places, saying they would not leave until tonight.

Members of the legion's Paris post had assembled to hold a meeting last evening, but the building committee, which had already ordered that the $500,000 structure, Pershing Hall, be closed because the treasury is empty, called a police riot car to clear the building.

Police refused to eject the legionnaires forcibly without a court order. The four who remained—saying it would take more than police and the building committee to put them out—were James Macalese, post secretary, of Fargo N. Dak.; Peter McKay, of Brooklyn; John Hunter, of Great Falls, Mont., and Julius R. Snowhill, of Quincy, Ill.

Smith asserted the group was "almost ready" to stay in Pershing Hall until the building committee apologized for calling French police to "throw American Legionnaires out of their own home."

Others in the group included Dr. James V. Sparks, prominent dentist, formerly of Indianapolis; Albert L. Dodge, of Wichita, Kans., the post commander; James L. McCann, past commander, of Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Joseph Walsh, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and E. L. Murphy, of Boston. Smith's home is Coatesville, Pa.

The board of directors on April 9 ordered the doors of Pershing Hall closed April 30. It is headquarters of Paris Post No. 1 and of other organizations.

There are three-cornered differences in the situation, involving the United States Treasury, the American Legion and Pershing Hall stockholders.

Added 337 Million Is Needed Over 3 Years, Secretary Says.

Bonus, AAA Ruling Force Rise, He Says

By Robert C. Albright.

Blaming AAA invalidation and the soldiers' bonus for a Treasury deficit he said would reach the all-time high of $5,966,600,000 for the current fiscal year, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday told the Senate Finance Committee it must find more revenue than is provided in the House tax bill.

The Finance Committee responded by calling on the Treasury to combine complex tax tables furnished House tax draftsmen into one simplified corporate tax schedule that could be better understood, and more easily applied. Chairman Pat Harrison agreed to look for another $337,000,000 in revenue, which Morgenthau said was needed over next three-year period.

The Treasury Secretary reached his $5,966,600,000 1936 deficit estimate by adding the full cost of the bonus ($2,237,000,000), and $405,100,000 in expenses "due to AAA decision," to the $3,234,500,000 the President had estimated his 1936 deficit would be. Some Senators said this would pyramid the total deficit to a new high above $37,000,000,000 in 1937.

Recalls Process Tax Plea.

Allowing for estimated revenues contained in the House draft of the tax bill, offset by the $1,500,000,000 pending relief bill and $524,300,000 in next year's AAA expenditures, Morgenthau told the committee the annual deficit for the next fiscal year would be only $2,675,000,000. But he said that $337,000,000 in additional "temporary" revenue must be found to tide over the two succeeding years. And he reminded the committee that the President asked revival of processing taxes to supply this revenue.

The House purposely left processing taxes out of its own bill, and the Senate does not appear to be kindly disposed toward them. Chairman Harrison hinted he has a plan of his own for applying new taxes, which may not involve processing levies, but he declined to throw further light on the matter.

Cool to La Follette.

The only other substantial revenue substitute put forward in the committee is the proposal of Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, to glean more from individual incomes by lowering exemptions and hiking rates. Morgenthau indicated yesterday that the Administration is not yet kindly disposed to such a plan.

Charging the present system of corporate taxatoin provides large runways for revenue leakage, Morgenthau told the committee:

"With tax avoidance occurring on the scale indicated by the figures I have cited, I do not see how any increase in individual income tax rates or other general or continuing taxation could be justified until this leak in our tax system is stopped."

Appearing with Morgenthau before the committee as public tax hearings opened were Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering and George C. Haas, Treasury research and statistics director, who explained with professional preciseness details of the House tax bill, and undertook to answer arguments directed against it.

Bewildered at the complexity of the measure, the committee has made up its mind to one thing—and that is to simplify the text by all possible means. As a starter, Harrison directed that four corporate-tax schedules and one intermediate formula carried in the House bill be combined into one clearer table.

The Mississippian threw out hints that he favors tax exemption of $1,000 to $2,000 for small-income corporations. He joined with Senator La Follette in asking that the new tables apply the graduated tax rates directly to earnings withheld from distribution, rather than to total earnings, based on dividends withheld from distribution.

Borah Assails 'Favorite Sons' In Ohio Speech

Columbus, Ohio, April 30.—Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, swung into his campaign for Ohio Presidential convention delegates with a speech tonight attacking the "favorite son" plan of choosing delegates and monopolistic interests.

He also attacked oil companies and what he called "other monopolies," termed them his chief opponents for the Presidential nomination, and declared they might succeed in defeating him, "but they will not change my position."

Saying that probably most Negro voters were opposed to his candidacy, Borah challenged other Republican Presidential candidates or possible candidates to state their position on the Costigan anti-lynching bill, which he opposed on the ground of unconstitutionality.

"I would like Mr. Taft to state to the people of Ohio if he thinks the Costigan anti-lynching bill is constitutional," he said.

Charges Monopoly Aid.

Senator Borah asserted the State Republican organization backing the "favorite son" movement is connected with monopolistic interests, which he said were attempting to control the party's national convention.

"Of course Walter Brown (former Postmaster General), and Ed Schoor (State party chairman) are just the men to lead the Republican Party back to power," he said.

"They have led it so near destruction that it's about time for them to turn around and go back to private business."

The "favorite son" plan is "just a blind," he claimed, adding that Taft—"is not in any sense a candidate for President. The great name of Taft si in very bad company."

Follows Bitter Clash.

The address followed a bitter word battle during the day over expenditure of Republican campaign funds as Borah forces and "favorite son" advocates jockeyed for positions in the State's May 12 primary.

To the National Republican Committee went a protest that funds collected for the party's fall campaign are being expended now "to the detriment of one of the Republican candidates seeking nomination for President."

Aired by Willard Miller, president of the Central Ohio Borah-for-President Club, the charge immediately brought a sharp "it's a lie" from Chairman Schorr of the Republican State committee.

Borah in Columbus.

Borah arrived here this afternoon from Washington for the second of his scheduled series of Ohio campaign speeches. He will return to the Capital tonight, but come back into Ohio Monday for a week's "stump tour" of this political pivotal State.

Borah's rival, Taft, for Ohio's 52 important delegates to the Republican National Convention, outlined in Concord, N. H., today his 16-point proposal for a party platform.

Miller, asserting that sample ballots were marked against Borah and that expenditures to assist Taft had been traced to Schorr, asked: "Will the National Committee disavow these practices?"

Schorr declared "it is true" the organization sought to defeat Borah in accordance with its decision to support a "favorite-son" plan.

"Our only trouble is that we are not receiving enough money to do all which should be done and which we would like to do to bring about the election of our 'favorite-son' candidates for delegate and alternate and the defeat of the 'Borah' candidates for delegate and alternate," Schorr added.

Florida to Vote Under Unit Rule

Orlando, Fla., April 30 (AP).—Florida's 12 votes at the Republican National Convention at Cleveland, June 9 will be cast as a unit by a delegation consisting of nine uninstructed representatives and three pledged to support the Presidential nomination of Gov. Alf Landon, of Kansas.

The State party convention today imposed the unit vote rule on the delegation after refusing to instruct the six delegates at large to support Landon, but recommending that the entire delegation consider the candidacy of the Kansan.

J. Leonard Replogle, of Palm Beach, was indorsed for the Vice Presidency after he had refused to be nominated for national committeeman, by William J. Howey, twice candidate for Governor of Florida.

John F. Harris, of Palm Beach, Florida's national Republican committeeman, was unanimously nominated for re-election at Cleveland after Howey, who made a strong bid for the post, withdrew and tried to nominate Replogle, Harris' friend and associate.

Mrs. Myra Brown, of Tampa, the Florida Republican national committeewoman, was nominated for re-election, defeating Mrs. Clara C. Grace, of St. Petersburg.

Guyer Acclaims Victory by Landon

By the Associated Press.

Representative Guyer (Republican), Kansas, said in a statement yesterday that the Massachusetts primary election "has demonstrated that Gov. Landon has captured the imagination of the people of the United States."

"It was just the clear expression of the Yankee Republicans," he said, "as to who they thought was the logical Republican candidate who would be the answer to the record, history and yearnings of the brain trust and the Roosevelt Administration.

"I believe the dignified, modest and highly sensible attitude of Gov. Landon toward such an exalted office has met the popular idea of the eternal fitness of things."

Dempsey's Restaurant Robbed, Suspect Held

New York, April 30 (AP).—A cashier in the barroom of Jack Dempsey's restaurant, on Eighth avenue, opposite Madison Square Garden, was robbed at gunpoint of a cash box containing $145.50 late today. The robber marched George Garfinkle, the cashier, through the room while 20 unsuspecting patrons drank at the bar.

A suspicious bartender cried out as they neared the door. The robber turned and ordered all to remain in their places. Outside he took the cash box from Garfinkle. A prizefighter, protege of the former heavyweight champion, ran for police. They arrested a man a block away who identified himself as John Downing. They said that they took from him the cash box, still intact, and that they found a loaded pistol in his possession.

Victory in California Primary Tuesday May Clinch Nomination for Landon.

By Franklyn Waltman

GOV. ALF M. LANDON'S extraordinary achievement in Massachusetts has intensified interest in the Republican primary in California next Tuesday. No other election contest held this year has been watched so carefully as that one will be and the result may definitely decide the winner in the race for the Republican Presidential nomination.

WALTMAN

Should Gov. Landon win there, other aspirants for the nomination might as well concede victory to him, since he already has established his towering strength in other sections. But a defeat in California would not necessarily take Gov. Landon out of the running, although it might have a psychologically bad effect on his prospects. Even should he be decisively beaten, which is improbable, he still would remain the leading contender, barring unforeseen developments.

* * *

The California Republican situation is so complicated that prudence commands caution in undertaking to appraise the significance of the outcome—unless it is a clear-cut victory for the Landon-instructed ticket. Although, there are in the field two tickets of delegates to the Cleveland convention—one pledged openly to the Kansan and the other known as the Earl Warren or uninstructed delegation ticket—it is not a simple, straight-out Landon and anti-Landon fight.

The so-called Landon ticket of delegates was put into the race by William Randolph Hearst and Gov. Frank F. Merriam, without the approval of Gov. Landon—although it is true he has not repudiated that action. The uninstructed delegation was sponsored by a group of California Republican leaders, including some Landon enthusiasts, and now is supported by a large part of the California Republican press and by Herbert Hoover.

* * *

Not only are Landon adherents supporting the Earl Warren ticket—so named because nominally it is pledged to the Republican State chairman of that name, who, however, has promised to release the entire delegation the day it is elected—but the backers of that slate have been making appeals for support to the rank and file of Republicans partial to Gov. Landon.

* * *

For instance, the Los Angeles Times, supporting the Earl Warren ticket, last week, in an editorial addressed to "The Friends of Landon," contended that "the many sincere California friends and supporters of Gov. Landon's candidacy will do it and him no service by voting for the Hearst-sponsored ticket of Landon delegates," adding that "the slate is unauthorized by Gov. Landon and contrary to his specifically expressed desire to stay out of any Republican contest in California."

Pointing out that should Gov. Landon be nominated as a result of the "Hearst named" delegates at Cleveland, "he will carry into the hottest campaign since Bryan a terrific handicap," the Los Angeles Times pleads that "those who have the Kansan's best interests genuinely at heart should support the free ticket of California delegates and clear Gov. Landon of the imputation that has been thrust upon him." All the venom of the editorial is against Hearst; none is directed at Gov. Landon.

* * *

Even in its campaign literature, the Earl Warren ticket makes Hearst and Gov. Merriam the issue—not Gov. Landon. Indeed, friendliness is expressed toward the Kansan. Illustrating this, there appears in a pamphlet of the Earl Warren ticket, explaining its objectives, the following questions and answers:

"What is Landon's attitude toward the Hearst-Merriam ticket pledged to him?

"He neither affirmed nor repudiated it.

"Are all Landon people in California for the Hearst-Merriam ticket pledged to Landon?

"Why should people who are for Landon vote for the Earl Warren uninstructed delegation?

"Because to vote for the Hearst-Merriam delegation using Landon's name would place the Republican Party in California in the hands of the Hearst and Merriam interests. On the other hand, true friends of Gov. Landon are members of the Earl Warren uninstructed delegation and his interests will be given fair and just consideration.

"Is the Earl Warren uninstructed delegation secretly pledged to Herbert Hoover?

"By no means."

* * *

Thus, as the fight draws near its close, it becomes clear that the issue projected, even by those in direct opposition to the Landon-pledged delegates, is not Gov. Landon, but William Randolph Hearst and Gov. Merriam.

The Kansan by the peculiarities of politics has been made the pawn in a violent Republican factional fight in California. Of course, should the Hearst-Merriam ticket win, their victory would be Gov. Landon's—but their defeat is not necessarily his defeat; it might be a victory for him in demonstrating that Hearst is a greater handicap than a help to him.

Boiled down, the California battle is in reality, first, a journalistic fight, with Hearst against the Los Angeles Times, the San Francisco Chronicle, the Oakland Tribune and several other Republican newspapers, all of which resent the Democratic Hearst attempting to dictate the Republican nominee and some of which feel friendly toward Gov. Landon; secondly, it is a battle of the old Republican organization against Hearst trying to dominate affairs in their party; and thirdly, it is a fight between Mr. Hoover and Gov. Merriam, between Mr. Hoover and Hearst, and also between Mr. Hoover and Gov. Landon—but the last aspect is not the factor which gives heat to the battle.

Successful in their attempt to see President Roosevelt and present their plans for earmarking $700,000,000 out of the proposed $1,500,000,000 new relief appropriation, House Democrats, led by Representative Alfred F. Beiter, New York, announced yesterday that at the President's suggestion, they will outline their program this morning to Relief Administrators Ickes and Hopkins.

Beiter and his committee of seven, including Representatives Dies, Texas; Dempsey, New Mexico; Kramer, California; Dobbins, Illinois; McFarlane, Texas; Lambeth, North Carolina, and Randolph, West Virginia, oppose spending the entire relief appropriation on non-permanent WPA projects. They are backed by a House petition signed by 154 House members.

They advocate earmarking a substantial part of relief funds to be spent by Public Works Administrator Ickes on his more permanent, but allegedly more expensive, program. Specifically, they seek an "arrangement" to take care of 6,130 municipal projects pending in the Public Works Administration, for which no money is available.

"We oppose the idea of spending the entire new relief appropriation on work relief as set up under Administrator Hopkins," Beiter said. "We believe that at least a part of the money should be spent on permanent improvements, even though it does cost a little more."

Completed Projects.

The plan approved by Beiter and his followers provides that the Public Works Administration, under the supervision of Secretary Ickes, shall certify to the President PWA projects to employ the required number of men, and at the same time, projects that can be completed in the time required under the appropriation.

Further, they would have the President transfer funds from the appropriation sufficient to cover 45 per cent of the projects, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would be empowered to make loans on the remaining 55 per cent of each project. A proviso of the plan stipulates that the RFC shall be resorted to only in case private lending organizations decline to supply the 55 per cent.

The American Federation of Labor, through J. W. Williams, president of the Building Trades Department, has joined with Representative Beiter and his associates in urging the PWA program.

Must Accept Help.

Another development on the relief front yesterday was the announcement by the Works Progress Administration that the needy must accept help of farm or other private employment when it is available, else they will be removed from relief rolls.

With the return of the spring planting season, Administrator Hopkins said he expected that a large share of the 300,000 persons now being dropped would be absorbed in farm work. Another 400,000 are expected to find employment on PWA, highway and other Government financed projects.

British Questionnaire To Hitler Meets Delay

London, April 30 (AP).—A British questionnaire to be sent to Reichsfuehrer Hitler was unexpectedly delayed today when the cabinet failed to complete its examination of a draft of the document.

The cabinet will meet tomorrow for the third time in three days to study the memorandum, drawn up in tentative form by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

Authoritative sources said the questionnaire, which will seek clarification of points of Hitler's substitute Locarno peace proposals, thought obscure by the British, French and Belgian governments, will be conveyed to Berlin early next week.

Man Who Quit Cruise For 'Insults' Returns

San Pedro, Calif., April 30 (AP).—A. T. Simonds, Boston manufacturer, who left the round the world cruise liner Reliance, at Manila, because of what he termed insults from fellow passengers, arrived today, with Mrs. Simonds, on the liner Malolo.

Simonds attributed the insults to an interview he gave in Singapore, in which he said "no nation should agree with Germany on anything because Germany regards all agreements as scraps of paper." Simonds said Nazi sympathizers on the German liner made things unendurable for himself and his wife. They planned to leave tonight for Boston by train.

Senate Passes Bill to Prevent Price 'Favors'

By the Associated Press.

A bill intended to bar the award or acceptance of price discriminations was passed yesterday by the Senate and sent to the House, where similar legislation is pending.

The Senate reversed itself by first voting down, among other amendments, one offered by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, to exempt industrial production from the scope of the bill and later voting to accept the proposal.

Majority Leader Robinson, of Arkansas, author of the bill, and other proponents told the Senate that the legislation was "complicated" and might best be smoothed into final shape in conference.

Provisions of Bill.

The Senate bill, as passed, would prohibit price discriminations between purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality; ban fake promotional allowances, brokerage fees and commissions, and give the Federal Trade Commission authority to limit quantity discounts in certain instances.

The Vandenberg amendment proposed that nothing in the bill should prevent discrimination in price by reason of differences in quantity in manufacturing.

Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, who assisted Robinson in the floor fight, expressed fear that if the exemption were made "we would run into difficulty at the Supreme Court."

Accepted After Conference.

The amendment was defeated, after Vandenberg returned to the subject; Robinson and Logan consulted hurriedly and finally Robinson said he would withdraw his objection, expressing the view that the conference could study the proposal. The amendment then was accepted.

Acceptance of discriminating prices was proposed in an amendment by Copeland (Democrat), New York, which was accepted.

Robinson also agreed to adoption of an amendment by King (Democrat), Utah, to exempt the mining industry from the bill's provisions adding, however, "I don't like it" and again saying the conference could best take care of it.

Record Peace Naval Building Bill Introduced

House May Vote Tomorrow on 531 Million for Navy 'Second to None.'

By the Associated Press.

A peace-time record, $531,068,707 naval appropriation bill, formally labeled as aimed toward "a Navy second to none," yesterday was started through the House.

Authorizing construction of two new battleships at $51,000,000 apiece—provided any other signatory to the 1930 London agreement should start building such capital ships—and allowing for generous increases in the Navy's man-power and airplane strength, the big measure would bring the naval funds to be available in the 1937 fiscal year to $592,237,707.

Moreover, this added money—made up of $27,169,000 still available in relief allotments and $34,000,000 of current appropriations expected to be left—did not include another $13,000,000 in contract authorizations for airplane building.

Thus a $605,237,707 Navy program for the coming year would be possible.

British Program Noted.

Particular note was taken of the battleship building authorization, with its provisional clause, because of the announced intention of Great Britain to build two such ships. Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy, said on Wednesday that the British plans constituted sufficient justification for the United States to go ahead.

The new Navy bill, taken up under general debate and scheduled for passage tomorrow, would:

1. Authorize the commencement of replacements for the Arkansas, the Texas or the New York, "only in the event that capital replacement construction is commenced by any of the other signatory powers to the treaty for the limitation and reduction of naval armament signed at London April 22, 1930."

12 Destroyers Planned.

2. Provide funds for building 12 new destroyers and 6 new submarines, and for continuing construction on 84 vessels now building, to a total of $168,500,000.

3. Permit purchase of 333 more airplanes.

4. Increase the naval enlisted strength from 93,500 to 100,000 men by June 30, 1937—within 10,000 of full treaty strength.

5. Boost the Marine Corps enlisted force from 16,000 to 17,000 by the end of the next fiscal year.

6. Appropriate $5,000,000 for building up reserves of strategic war minerals—turned down last year by the Senate in the amount of $7,500,000.

The Navy bill was $49,337,328 above the 1936 appropriations, but $18,522,592 under the $549,591,299 budget estimates.

The Appropriations Committee, which had listened to naval experts summarize maritime programs of others nations and heard charges of subversive activities "threatening the security of our fleet," insisted, however, that the amount recommended would be some $11,000,000 less than 1936 expenditures. This took into account larger carryovers than last year.

The committee also said a $31,000,000 larger appropriation was necessary for 1937 than would be needed when a treaty-navy was attained, because of the current shipbuilding program.

Rear Admiral J. K. Taussig, acting chief of naval operations, told the committee that virtually none of the other major powers had taken any steps to curtail naval expenditures.

Rain Cuts Short Blossom Fete At Winchester

15,000 See Coronation of Queen; Program to Be Completed Today.

By Elizabeth K. Read.
A Staff Correspondent.

Winchester, Va., April 30.—The ceremony of the crowning of Queen Shenandoah XIII of the Shenandoah apple blossom festival, was cut short by showers today.

Immediately following the coronation of Miss Cornelia Larus, on the esplanade of Handley High School, in front of the natural amphitheater of the impressive colonial building, in which were crowded about 15,000 persons, the first rain began to fall.

As the bejeweled diadem was placed on her head by Senator John G. Townsend, of Delaware, and she was pronounced the thirteenth queen of the fertile Shenandoah Valley with its 11,000,000 apple trees now in pink blossom, the sun broke through a gray sky for a moment. Then the clouds began to gather more blackly.

Storm breezes blew her white satin skirts around her as she descended the long flight of steps from the school building to her throne in the amphitheater, facing the esplanade, where a pageant of 1,000 school children was begun immediately in her honor.

The rain fell more heavily, but she merely settled her new crown on her bobbed hair and pulled a raincoat around the gold mantle of royalty, with which she had just been vested.

Audience Begins to Run.

She lifted her face to the raindrops and smiled, ready to stay, though the rain was falling harder and the audience had begun to run for automobiles parked around the grounds. Newspapers were used for temporary umbrellas to protect new spring finery, but the queen and her court of 38 pink clad young girls from the schools of the valley sat watching the players continue with the pageant in the rain.

"Well, the rain is what brings the blossoms into fruit," was the queen's comment, as she pulled her raincoat a little closer.

Miss Larus, the 20-year-old Richmond debutante, who this afternoon became the newest crowned queen in the world, looked around at her attendants and smiled. Then, like the twentieth century girl she is, she shrugged her shoulders and spread her hands with a little gesture, as if to say, "I guess we stay in the rain."

Perhaps because the pageant is scheduled to be repeated at 11 a. m. tomorrow for the closing day of the festival, there was a hurried conference of officials, and the outdoor ceremonies for the rest of the day were postponed. This included the remainder of the pageant, and the aerial show at the Admiral Byrd Airport, near town.

When the announcement was made, the queen was as quick as any of her subjects in reaching shelter, for she gathered her train in one hand and ran with her maids of honor and her princesses in waiting to cars parked nearby.

But her coronation was as impressive and as full of charm as the fragrance of the apple blossoms that hangs over the valley. With pageantry, parade and joyous spirit thousands of people today paid tribute to the chief crop of the valley.

Promptly at 3 p. m. the ceremonies of crowing the queen, the high point of the opening day of the thirteenth annual festival, began. From behind the pillars of the facade of the school building marched the blue-clad military escort of the queen, troops from Massanutten Military Academy.

Then came the queen's chorus, the Glee Club of State Teachers College at Harrisonburg, Va., clad in green surplices. Then the dance of the pink petals—then girls in filmy pink skirts that swirled around them. Tiny Peyton Marshall, the crown bearer, with the diadem on a white satin cushion, walked stiffly through the portals, his attention divided between the responsibility of the royal insignia and the difficulty for his short legs to negotiate the flight of steps to the first landing, where the ceremonies took place.

Then the queen's attendants in their blossom-like pink, followed by the dignitaries who were to administer the queen's oath of allegiance to the Shenandoah, and finally the queen herself, her train held by two small girls, whose long skirts were a little difficult for them to manage.

The dignitaries of the occasion, Mayor Dr. C. R. Anderson, Col. D. M. Roszel, minister to the crown of the Shenandoah kingdom, Senator Townsend and the Rev. George Earl Owens of the Church of Christ, Winchester, grouped themselves around the youthful queen. Impressively they swore her to loyalty to the apple kingdom and pledged her to keep faith with the spring and the blossoms and to rule her domain with prudence.

Crown Placed on Head.

"Cornelia Larus, I am proud to name you Queen Shenandoah XIII," Senator Townsend said as he placed the crown on her head. The queen acknowledged her new realm by saying she would try to reign well over such a beautiful valley and felt honored by being chosen its queen.

Preceding her court, the new queen and Senator Townsend walked down the remaining steps and he handed her onto her golden throne. The court maidens grouped themselves around her and a special place of honor was given to the crown bearer near her feet.

Seated nearby were some of the leading citizens of the State, who gathered for the colorful yearly spectacle of honoring King Apple. Lieut. Gov. James H. Price, representing Gov. George C. Peery, who is attending the dogwood festival at Bristol, Va., to crown the queen there, was among those on the front row of the crowded amphitheater. Near him sat Senator and Mrs. William G. McAdoo, of California.

Others Watch Ceremony.

Henry G. Shirley, the State highway commissioner, and John P. Rhodes, commissioner of motor vehicles, were with Lieut. Gov. Price. Senator Harry F. Byrd, scheduled to attend the ceremonies, was unable to be present because of illness, but his brother, Thomas Byrd, was among those in the front row. His mother, Mrs. Richard Evelyn Byrd, sr., hostess to the Shanandoah's new queen, was seated among the honor guests, as were Senator Aubrey G. Weaver and R. Gray Williams, Winchester attorney prominent in the State.

The queen's parents—Mr. and Mrs. Lewis G. Larus—smiled over the advent of royalty in their family circle.

A bright and sunny morning preceded the showery afternoon and the usually quiet little town was in gala mood. Even before the beginning of the parade at 10 o'clock of 4,000 school children from all over Frederick County, this town was jammed with visitors.

Gay, Friendly Crowd.

It was a gay and friendly crowd that moved up and down the streets from early this morning, hurrying for food, demanding sleeping accommodations which already had been booked, and paying lighthearted tribute to the apple blossom season.

Three squares on the main street of the town were roped off from traffic for full play of the carnival spirit. An impromptu county fair had been set up on the main business thoroughfare.

Beneath the pink, green and white banners, the colors of the springtime in apple blossom country, hot-dog stands stood beside the traveling ventriliquist's chair, the man who guaranteed a full pound of apple candy if he failed to guess a frolicker's weight, or that of a piano and banjo group. A church bazaar booth selling homemade cakes, candies and pies had a place beside the woman whose fingers worked like lightning making flavored spun candy, and a doll vendor and a pennant hawk shouted above the din, "Remember the kiddies at home."

Parade Opens Fete.

Through the streets moved dowagers gleaming with diamonds, farmers in faded blue overalls and wide straw hats, small girls in their best starched skirts and big hair ribbons, men in immaculate white linen suits, even a few gentlemen in frock coats and toppers and a generous number of men in uniforms of all kinds and descriptions, from those of the village band players to the stripes and gold braid of Uncle Sam's Navy.

The festival day began with ohs and ahs from a crowd of thousands that lined the streets ten deep in places, that hung from windows and crowded porch railings to glimpse the school children's parade that officially opened the celebration of the apple blossoms.

The parade of children, ranging from the littlest ones whose teachers had to guide them down the streets to the lanky ones of almost college age, marched by for more than an hour in paper costumes that swished and rattled in the sunny breezes. Their story was plainly told by their gay apparel. It was the tale of the coming of spring from the first green shoots and the early birds of the season to the days of the trees in full fruit.

The hsitoric streets of Winchester resounded to the march of young feet and to the sound of band music. First in line of march was a division devoted to the dead leaves and last snow drops of winter soon to give way to colorful spring. King Sol himself led the group showing the coming of the sun and following him were lines of children dressed to represent the first flowers and the early birds. Then Spring herself marched along, a queen almost rivaling the importance of the valley queen.

Clowns Delight Children.

The school children's parade has become one of the outstanding features of the yearly celebration, each season growing more elaborate and important in the schedule of entertainment for the visitors.

From a nearby traveling circus, ponies decked in the blossom colors were loaned and a band of clowns went through their antics to the delight of the children, not only those in the parade who turned their heads from in front of the clowns but those who lined the streets. As a compliment to the professionals in their midst, a number of the school children also were dressed as clowns and cavorted on bicycles and with little express wagons.

Tomorrow, for the closing day of the festival, additional thousands are expected to pour into Winchester. While 15,000 persons jammed the amphitheater, other thousands remained in the town and it was estimated by festival officials that the opening day had brought more than 25,000 to Winchester.

Tonight the queen and her attendants attended two balls in their honor. The annual reception of the princesses was given at the George Washington Hotel in Winchester and a dance in honor of the queen took place later at the Winchester Golf Club.

Liner Normandie Loses Propeller in Channel

Le Havre, April 30 (AP).—The French liner Normandie, returning from speed trials in the English Channel, lost one of her new 35-ton propellers today.

The liner went into drydock after her arrival here, while two tugs began dragging for the propeller, one of those lately installed in an effort to overcome vibration.

Franco-U. S. Trade Treaty Due May 2

Paris, April 30 (AP).—An agreement between the United States and France on a trade treaty is expected this week in official circles.

It will follow long negotiations, with an exchange of signatories likely on May 2.

French officials indicated today they would accept the latest United States figures for an apple and peach quota which was said to be the last outstanding difficulty.

The figures were not divulged, but they were said to be a compromise between what the United States asked France to buy and what France offered to import.

Weiss, Wendel Suspect, Tries Suicide in Jail

Necktie Hanging Prevented by Guards; Another Suspect Seized.

By the United Press.

New York, April 30.—Harry Weiss, the taxicab driver who lived in fear of death by bullets because of his part in the kidnaping of Paul H. Wendel tried to kill himself today with a necktie.

Guards, hurrying down the corridor of Brooklyn City Prison, got to him before he could hang himself. They immediately clapped handcuffs on him and posted a guard outside the cell.

Weiss came back from Ohio two days ago to surrender and confess his part in the fantastic kidnaping of Wendel, a disbarred Trenton attorney who was forced to "confess" that he murdered the Lindbergh baby at a time when New Jersey was ready to execute Bruno Richard Hauptmann for that crime.

He was in City Prison because District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan feared somebody—presumably the "higher-ups" who are alleged to be implicated—might make an attempt on his life. To make sure that Weiss stayed away from harm, his bail was fixed at $50,000.

Bookmaker Is Arrested.

New York authorities moved across the New Jersey line to Trenton today to make their latest arrest in the Wendel affair. Out of bed they hauled a man who takes bets on baseball games and the races and put him in jail to join the odd assortment of persons—arrested and missing—who allegedly are involved in the abduction and torture of Wendel.

The technical charge against Sol Marcus, 32, was that he was "an accessory after the fact." He is accused of conceiving and executing the kidnaping. Marcus denied everything, and said he would fight extradition to New York.

Mrs. Murray Bleefeld, wife of one of the men still being sought in the Wendel case, gave police the information which led to Marcus' arrest.

"Our information, Geoghan said, "is that Marcus supplied money to Mrs. Bleefeld, which she in turn sent on to her husband. We are searching for one John Arbutelli. We are told that it was his money that Marcus gave to Mrs. Bleefeld.

"I expect that the Kings County grand jury will hand up another indictment tomorrow."

Parker Still Fugitive.

Ellis Parker, jr., described by Weiss as the moving spirit in the Wendel kidnaping, still is a fugitive from justice. He is under indictment in Kings County, New York, on a charge of kidnaping and second-degree assault. He is the son of the chief of Burlington County detectives—the man who delivered Wendel to Trenton authorities and succeeded in delaying the execution of Hauptmann for three days.

Martin Schlossman is free on $7,500 bail, but also has been indicted.

Marcus is in jail in Trenton.

Arbutelli, proprietor of a small Trenton hotel, is being sought, but no charge has been placed against him.

Geoghan, jubilant over the whirlwind arrests he has been making, predicted he shortly would be ready to move against the "high New Jersey officials" who are alleged to be behind the Wendel case.

Capt. Clinton Ends His Life At West Point

Academy Instructor Was Native of Washington; in Ill Health.

Capt. James W. Clinton, 33, native of Washington and a mathematics instructor at the United States Military Academy at West Point, was found dead yesterday in his quarters of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, the Associated Press reported.

Save that he had been in ill health recently, fellow officers at the academy, could ascribe no motive for the shooting. In an announcement of his death here yesterday, the War Department said that his wife, Mrs. Dorothy L. Clinton, is the only survivor.

The son of an Army officer and grandson of another, Capt. Clinton was destined for an Army career almost from birth. His grandfather on his mother's side was Col. Daniel Lane Howell, who fought in the Spanish-American War and patrolled the Mexican border in 1917; while his father was the late Lieut. Col. James W. Clinton.

Capt. Clinton received his West Point appointment in 1921 from Missouri, being graduated in 1925. His first service was at the Presidio of San Francisco, Calif., with the Thirtieth Infantry. Later he served as aide de camp to Maj. Gen. Joseph D. Leitch, now retired, at Vancouver Barracks and Fort Lewis, Wash., and then on a tour of the Philippines.

Zioncheck Arrested Again

was accused of making when he was arrested in Washington recently.

Policeman Ellmore said Zioncheck became "very abusive" after he was stopped.

Nearly Run Down.

On the way to police headquarters, the Alexandria officer said, Zioncheck almost ran down his motorcycle while turning a corner.

Bailiff Parke Ticer, after booking Zioncheck for speeding and disorderly conduct, told him to post $200 collateral for his appearance in police court this morning.

The 35-year-old Poland-born Zioncheck found himself again embarrassed for funds.

Also he was loath to appear in court this morning.

He telephoned to Louis Weinstein, a professional bondsman of this city, who hurried to Alexandria and posted the $200 for him.

Then Zioncheck retained a lawyer—Maurice L. Rosenberg—who is Alexandria's representative in the Virginia House of Delegates.

Zioncheck appeared angry and nervous in the station, according to police.

"Can't you appear for me tomorrow morning and waive a preliminary hearing?" he asked Rosenberg.

Rosenberg said he would appear for him.

"My attorney will appear for me. I don't care wat the judge thinks about it; I am thinking about the law, and the law will permit me to be represented by counsel."

Bride Awaits in Car.

It turned out that Zioncheck, just after his arrival at the police station, had telephoned Police Court Judge James R. Duncan to ask for a continuance of the case. But Duncan declined to talk to him.

Zioncheck wanted to have his case tried before a jury in the Corporation Court. Hence, his insistence on a continuance.

When Ticer, who also talked to Judge Duncan, explained that he was expected to appear this morning, Zioncheck said:

"Remind the judge that tomorrow, May 1, is Labor Day for the Communists."

From a good source, it was learned last night that unless Zioncheck appears in Police Court this morning, his $200 collateral will be forfeited.

While Zioncheck was waiting for his release yesterday, Mrs. Zioncheck was sitting in the big roadster outside.

A short distance away, Zioncheck fairly jumped on the brakes. He has almost run headlong into another machine.

Message for The Post.

"Congressman Marion A. Zioncheck, with his bride, the former Rubye Nix, took leave for Florida this afternoon at 3:30.

"The Congressman, attired in a natty brown suit, and his bride in white spring ensemble, left their fashionable Harvard Hall apartment in secret.

"Zioncheck said Tampa would be their probable destination because of the excellent golf facilities where he could show the natives some real golf.

"He also stated that the warm Florida weather would do his bride good as she has been pretty cold here in the District.

"They intend to make their stay about two weeks and intrusted his three terrapins to his friend."

Borah Assails 'Favorite Sons' In Ohio Speech

Columbus, Ohio, April 30.—Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, swung into his campaign for Ohio Presidential convention delegates with a speech tonight attacking the "favorite son" plan of choosing delegates and monopolistic interests.

He also attacked oil companies and what he called "other monopolies," termed them his chief opponents for the Presidential nomination, and declared they might succeed in defeating him, "but they will not change my position."

Saying that probably most Negro voters were opposed to his candidacy, Borah challenged other Republican Presidential candidates or possible candidates to state their position on the Costigan anti-lynching bill, which he opposed on the ground of unconstitutionality.

"I would like Mr. Taft to state to the people of Ohio if he thinks the Costigan anti-lynching bill is constitutional," he said.

Charges Monopoly Aid.

Senator Borah asserted the State Republican organization backing the "favorite son" movement is connected with monopolistic interests, which he said were attempting to control the party's national convention.

"Of course Walter Brown (former Postmaster General), and Ed Schoor (State party chairman) are just the men to lead the Republican Party back to power," he said.

"They have led it so near destruction that it's about time for them to turn around and go back to private business."

The "favorite son" plan is "just a blind," he claimed, adding that Taft "is not in any sense a candidate for President. The great name of Taft si in very bad company."

Follows Bitter Clash.

The address followed a bitter word battle during the day over expenditure of Republican campaign funds as Borah forces and "favorite son" advocates jockeyed for positions in the State's May 12 primary.

To the National Republican Committee went a protest that funds collected for the party's fall campaign are being expended now "to the detriment of one of the Republican candidates seeking nomination for President."

Aired by Willard Miller, president of the Central Ohio Borah-for-President Club, the charge immediately brought a sharp "it's a lie" from Chairman Schorr of the Republican State committee.

Borah in Columbus.

Borah arrived here this afternoon from Washington for the second of his scheduled series of Ohio campaign speeches. He will return to the Capital tonight, but come back into Ohio Monday for a week's "stump tour" of this political pivotal State.

Borah's rival, Taft, for Ohio's 52 important delegates to the Republican National Convention, outlined in Concord, N. H., today his 16-point proposal for a party platform.

Miller, asserting that sample ballots were marked against Borah and that expenditures to assist Taft had been traced to Schorr, asked: "Will the National Committee disavow these practices?"

Schorr declared "it is true" the organization sought to defeat Borah in accordance with its decision to support a "favorite-son" plan.

"Our only trouble is that we are not receiving enough money to do all which should be done and which we would like to do to bring about the election of our 'favorite-son' candidates for delegate and alternate and the defeat of the 'Borah' candidates for delegate and alternate," Schorr added.

Florida to Vote Under Unit Rule

Orlando, Fla., April 30 (AP).—Florida's 12 votes at the Republican National Convention at Cleveland, June 9 will be cast as a unit by a delegation consisting of nine uninstructed representatives and three pledged to support the Presidential nomination of Gov. Alf Landon, of Kansas.

The State party convention today imposed the unit vote rule on the delegation after refusing to instruct the six delegates at large to support Landon, but recommending that the entire delegation consider the candidacy of the Kansan.

J. Leonard Replogle, of Palm Beach, was indorsed for the Vice Presidency after he had refused to be nominated for national committeeman, by William J. Howey, twice candidate for Governor of Florida.

John F. Harris, of Palm Beach, Florida's national Republican committeeman, was unanimously nominated for re-election at Cleveland after Howey, who made a strong bid for the post, withdrew and tried to nominate Replogle, Harris' friend and associate.

Mrs. Myra Brown, of Tampa, the Florida Republican national committeewoman, was nominated for re-election, defeating Mrs. Clara C. Grace, of St. Petersburg.

Guyer Acclaims Victory by Landon

By the Associated Press.

Representative Guyer (Republican), Kansas, said in a statement yesterday that the Massachusetts primary election "has demonstrated that Gov. Landon has captured the imagination of the people of the United States."

"It was just the clear expression of the Yankee Republicans," he said, "as to who they thought was the logical Republican candidate who would be the answer to the record, history and yearnings of the brain trust and the Roosevelt Administration.

"I believe the dignified, modest and highly sensible attitude of Gov. Landon toward such an exalted office has met the popular idea of the eternal fitness of things."

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

GOV. ALF M. LANDON'S extraordinary achievement in Massachusetts has intensified interest in the Republican primary in California next Tuesday. No other election contest held this year has been watched so carefully as that one will be and the result may definitely decide the winner in the race for the Republican Presidential nomination.

WALTMAN

Should Gov. Landon win there, other aspirants for the nomination might as well concede victory to him, since he already has established his towering strength in other sections. But a defeat in California would not necessarily take Gov. Landon out of the running, although it might have a psychologically bad effect on his prospects. Even should he be decisively beaten, which is improbable, he still would remain the leading contender, barring unforeseen developments.

* * *

The California Republican situation is so complicated that prudence commands caution in undertaking to appraise the significance of the outcome—unless it is a clear-cut victory for the Landon-instructed ticket. Although, there are in the field two tickets of delegates to the Cleveland convention—one pledged openly to the Kansan and the other known as the Earl Warren or uninstructed delegation ticket—it is not a simple, straight-out Landon and anti-Landon fight.

The so-called Landon ticket of delegates was put into the race by William Randolph Hearst and Gov. Frank F. Merriam, without the approval of Gov. Landon—although it is true he has not repudiated that action. The uninstructed delegation was sponsored by a group of California Republican leaders, including some Landon enthusiasts, and now is supported by a large part of the California Republican press and by Herbert Hoover.

* * *

Not only are Landon adherents supporting the Earl Warren ticket—so named because nominally it is pledged to the Republican State chairman of that name, who, however, has promised to release the entire delegation the day it is elected—but the backers of that slate have been making appeals for support to the rank and file of Republicans partial to Gov. Landon.

* * *

For instance, the Los Angeles Times, supporting the Earl Warren ticket, last week, in an editorial addressed to "The Friends of Landon," contended that "the many sincere California friends and supporters of Gov. Landon's candidacy will do it and him no service by voting for the Hearst-sponsored ticket of Landon delegates," adding that "the slate is unauthorized by Gov. Landon and contrary to his specifically expressed desire to stay out of any Republican contest in California."

Pointing out that should Gov. Landon be nominated as a result of the "Hearst named" delegates at Cleveland, "he will carry into the hottest campaign since Bryan a terrific handicap," the Los Angeles Times pleads that "those who have the Kansan's best interests genuinely at heart should support the free ticket of California delegates and clear Gov. Landon of the imputation that has been thrust upon him." All the venom of the editorial is against Hearst; none is directed at Gov. Landon.

* * *

Even in its campaign literature, the Earl Warren ticket makes Hearst and Gov. Merriam the issue—not Gov. Landon. Indeed, friendliness is expressed toward the Kansan. Illustrating this, there appears in a pamphlet of the Earl Warren ticket, explaining its objectives, the following questions and answers:

"What is Landon's attitude toward the Hearst-Merriam ticket pledged to him?

"He neither affirmed nor repudiated it.

"Are all Landon people in California for the Hearst-Merriam ticket pledged to Landon?

"Why should people who are for Landon vote for the Earl Warren uninstructed delegation?

"Because to vote for the Hearst-Merriam delegation using Landon's name would place the Republican Party in California in the hands of the Hearst and Merriam interests. On the other hand, true friends of Gov. Landon are members of the Earl Warren uninstructed delegation and his interests will be given fair and just consideration.

"Is the Earl Warren uninstructed delegation secretly pledged to Herbert Hoover?

"By no means."

* * *

Thus, as the fight draws near its close, it becomes clear that the issue projected, even by those in direct opposition to the Landon-pledged delegates, is not Gov. Landon, but William Randolph Hearst and Gov. Merriam.

The Kansan by the peculiarities of politics has been made the pawn in a violent Republican factional fight in California. Of course, should the Hearst-Merriam ticket win, their victory would be Gov. Landon's—but their defeat is not necessarily his defeat; it might be a victory for him in demonstrating that Hearst is a greater handicap than a help to him.

Boiled down, the California battle is in reality, first, a journalistic fight, with Hearst against the Los Angeles Times, the San Francisco Chronicle, the Oakland Tribune and several other Republican newspapers, all of which resent the Democratic Hearst attempting to dictate the Republican nominee and some of which feel friendly toward Gov. Landon; secondly, it is a battle of the old Republican organization against Hearst trying to dominate affairs in their party; and thirdly, it is a fight between Mr. Hoover and Gov. Merriam, between Mr. Hoover and Hearst, and also between Mr. Hoover and Gov. Landon—but the last aspect is not the factor which gives heat to the battle.

Dempsey's Restaurant Robbed, Suspect Held

New York, April 30 (AP).—A cashier in the barroom of Jack Dempsey's restaurant, on Eighth avenue, opposite Madison Square Garden, was robbed at gunpoint of a cash box containing $145.50 late today. The robber marched George Garfinkle, the cashier, through the room while 20 unsuspecting patrons drank at the bar.

A suspicious bartender cried out as they neared the door. The robber turned and ordered all to remain in their places. Outside he took the cash box from Garfinkle. A prizefighter, protege of the former heavyweight champion, ran for police. They arrested a man a block away who identified himself as John Downing. They said that they took from him the cash box, still intact, and that they found a loaded pistol in his possession.

Dr. James Whitney Hall, Noted Psychiatrist, Dies

Chicago, April 30 (AP).—Dr. James Whitney Hall, 76, medical counsel for many of the leading railroads in Chicago and defense alienist in the Loeb-Leopold murder trial, died here yesterday. He specialized in neuropsychiatry and forensic medicine.

Dr. Hall once testified before a House committee in Washington that insanity had increased 1,000 per cent in Chicago because of "poison hootch."

Man Who Quit Cruisc For 'Insults' Returns

San Pedro, Calif., April 30 (AP).—A. T. Simonds, Boston manufacturer, who left the round the world cruise liner Reliance, at Manila, because of what he termed insults from fellow passengers, arrived today, with Mrs. Simonds, on the liner Malolo.

Simonds attributed the insults to an interview he gave in Singapore, in which he said "no nation should agree with Germany on anything because Germany regards all agreemeans as scraps of paper." Simonds said Nazi sympathizers on the German liner made things unendurable for himself and his wife. They planned to leave tonight for Boston by train.

Ickes, Hopkins To Get Aid Plan Of Beiter Bloc

Successful in their attempt to see President Roosevelt and present their plans for earmarking $700,000,000 out of the proposed $1,500,000,000 new relief appropriation, House Democrats, led by Representative Alfred F. Beiter, New York, announced yesterday that at the President's suggestion, they will outline their program this morning to Relief Administrators Ickes and Hopkins.

Beiter and his committee of seven, including Representatives Dies, Texas; Dempsey, New Mexico; Kramer, California; Dobbins, Illinois; McFarlane, Texas; Lambeth, North Carolina, and Randolph, West Virginia, oppose spending the entire relief appropriation on non-permanent WPA projects. They are backed by a House petition signed by 154 House members.

They advocate earmarking a substantial part of relief funds to be spent by Public Works Administrator Ickes on his more permanent, but allegedly more expensive, program. Specifically, they seek an "arrangement" to take care of 6,130 municipal projects pending in the Public Works Administration, for which no money is available.

"We oppose the idea of spending the entire new relief appropriation on work relief as set up under Administrator Hopkins," Beiter said. "We believe that at least a part of the money should be spent on permanent improvements, even though it does cost a little more."

Completed Projects.

The plan approved by Beiter and his followers provides that the Public Works Administration, under the supervision of Secretary Ickes, shall certify to the President PWA projects to employ the required number of men, and at the same time, projects that can be completed in the time required under the appropriation.

Further, they would have the President transfer funds from the appropriation sufficient to cover 45 per cent of the projects, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would be empowered to make loans on the remaining 55 per cent of each project. A proviso of the plan stipulates that the RFC shall be resorted to only in case private lending organizations decline to supply the 55 per cent.

The American Federation of Labor, through J. W. Williams, president of the Building Trades Department, has joined with Representative Beiter and his associates in urging the PWA program.

Must Accept Help.

Another development on the relief front yesterday was the announcement by the Works Progress Administration that the needy must accept help of farm or other private employment when it is available, else they will be removed from relief rolls.

With the return of the spring planting season, Administrator Hopkins said he expected that a large share of the 300,000 persons now being dropped would be absorbed in farm work. Another 400,000 are expected to find employment on PWA, highway and other Government financed projects.

British Questionnaire To Hitler Meets Delay

London, April 30 (AP).—A British questionnaire to be sent to Reichsfuehrer Hitler was unexpectedly delayed today when the cabinet failed to complete its examination of a draft of the document.

The cabinet will meet tomorrow for the third time in three days to study the memorandum, drawn up in tentative form by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

Authoritative sources said the questionnaire, which will seek clarification of points of Hitler's substitute Locarno peace proposals, thought obscure by the British, French and Belgian governments, will be conveyed to Berlin early next week.

Senate Passes Bill to Prevent Price 'Favors'

By the Associated Press.

A bill intended to bar the award or acceptance of price discriminations was passed yesterday by the Senate and sent to the House, where similar legislation is pending.

The Senate reversed itself by first voting down, among other amendments, one offered by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, to exempt industrial production from the scope of the bill and later voting to accept the proposal.

Majority Leader Robinson, of Arkansas, author of the bill, and other proponents told the Senate that the legislation was "complicated" and might best be smoothed into final shape in conference.

Provisions of Bill.

The Senate bill, as passed, would prohibit price discriminations between purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality; ban fake promotional allowances, brokerage fees and commissions, and give the Federal Trade Commission authority to limit quantity discounts in certain instances.

The Vandenberg amendment proposed that nothing in the bill should prevent discrimination in price by reason of differences in quantity in manufacturing.

Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, who assisted Robinson in the floor fight, expressed fear that if the exemption were made "we would run into difficulty at the Supreme Court."

Accepted After Conference.

The amendment was defeated, ater Vandenberg returned to the subject; Robinson and Logan consulted hurriedly and finally Robinson said he would withdraw his objection, expressing the view that the conference could study the proposal. The amendment then was accepted.

Acceptance of discriminating prices was proposed in an amendment by Copeland (Democrat), New York, which was accepted.

Robinson also agreed to adoption of an amendment by King (Democrat), Utah, to exempt the mining industry from the bill's provisions adding, however, "I don't like it" and again saying the conference could best take care of it.

Record Peace Naval Building Bill Introduced

House May Vote Tomorrow on 531 Million for Navy 'Second to None.'

By the Associated Press.

A peace-time record, $531,068,707 naval appropriation bill, formally labeled as aimed toward "a Navy second to none," yesterday was started through the House.

Authorizing construction of two new battleships at $51,000,000 apiece—provided any other signatory to the 1930 London agreement should start building such capital ships—and allowing for generous increases in the Navy's man-power and airplane strength, the big measure would bring the naval funds to be available in the 1937 fiscal year to $592,237,707.

Moreover, this added money—made up of $27,169,000 still available in relief allotments and $34,000,000 of current appropriations expected to be left—did not include another $13,000,000 in contract authorizations for airplane building.

Thus a $605,237,707 Navy program for the coming year would be possible.

British Program Noted.

Particular note was taken of the battleship building authorization, with its provisional clause, because of the announced intention of Great Britain to build two such ships. Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy, said on Wednesday that the British plans constituted sufficient justification for the United States to go ahead.

The new Navy bill, taken up under general debate and scheduled for passage tomorrow, would:

1. Authorize the commencement of replacements for the Arkansas, the Texas or the New York, "only in the event that capital replacement construction is commenced by any of the other signatory powers to the treaty for the limitation and reduction of naval armament signed at London April 22, 1930."

12 Destroyers Planned.

2. Provide funds for building 12 new destroyers and 6 new submarines, and for continuing construction on 84 vessels now building, to a total of $168,500,000.

3. Permit purchase of 333 more airplanes.

4. Increase the naval enlisted strength from 93,500 to 100,000 men by June 30, 1937—within 10,000 of full treaty strength.

5. Boost the Marine Corps enlisted force from 16,000 to 17,000 by the end of the next fiscal year.

6. Appropriate $5,000,000 for building up reserves of strategic war minerals—turned down last year by the Senate in the amount of $7,500,000.

The Appropriations Committee, which had listened to naval experts summarize maritime programs of others nations and heard charges of subversive activities "threatening the security of our fleet," insisted, however, that the amount recommended would be some $11,000,000 less than 1936 expenditures. This took into account larger carryovers than last year.

The committee also said a $31,000,000 larger appropriation was necessary for 1937 than would be needed when a treaty-navy was attained, because of the current shipbuilding program.

Rear Admiral J. K. Taussig, acting chief of naval operations, told the committee that virtually none of the other major powers had taken any steps to curtail naval expenditures.

Rain Cuts Short Blossom Fete At Winchester

15,000 See Coronation of Queen; Program to Be Completed Today.

By Elizabeth K. Read.
A Staff Correspondent.

Winchester, Va., April 30.—The ceremony of the crowning of Queen Shenandoah XIII of the Shenandoah apple blossom festival, was cut short by showers today.

Immediately following the coronation of Miss Cornelia Larus, on the esplanade of Handley High School, in front of the natural amphitheater of the impressive colonial building, in which were crowded about 15,000 persons, the first rain began to fall.

As the bejeweled diadem was placed on her head by Senator John G. Townsend, of Delaware, and she was pronounced the thirteenth queen of the fertile Shenandoah Valley with its 11,000,000 apple trees now in pink blossom, the sun broke through a gray sky for a moment. Then the clouds began to gather more blackly.

Storm breezes blew her white satin skirts around her as she descended the long flight of steps from the school building to her throne in the amphitheater, facing the esplanade, where a pageant of 1,000 school children was begun immediately in her honor.

The rain fell more heavily, but she merely settled her new crown on her bobbed hair and pulled a raincoat around the gold mantle of royalty, with which she had just been vested.

Audience Begins to Run.

She lifted her face to the raindrops and smiled, ready to stay, though the rain was falling harder and the audience had begun to run for automobiles parked around the grounds. Newspapers were used for temporary umbrellas to protect new spring finery, but the queen and her court of 38 pink clad young girls from the schools of the valley sat watching the players continue with the pageant in the rain.

"Well, the rain is what brings the blossoms into fruit," was the queen's comment, as she pulled her raincoat a little closer.

Miss Larus, the 20-year-old Richmond debutante, who this afternoon became the newest crowned queen in the world, looked around at her attendants and smiled. Then, like the twentieth century girl she is, she shrugged her shoulders and spread her hands with a little gesture, as if to say, "I guess we stay in the rain."

Perhaps because the pageant is scheduled to be repeated at 11 a. m. tomorrow for the closing day of the festival, there was a hurried conference of officials, and the outdoor ceremonies for the rest of the day were postponed. This included the remainder of the pageant, and the aerial show at the Admiral Byrd Airport, near town.

When the announcement was made, the queen was as quick as any of her subjects in reaching shelter, for she gathered her train in one hand and ran with her maids of honor and her princesses in waiting to cars parked nearby.

But her coronation was as impressive and as full of charm as the fragrance of the apple blossoms that hangs over the valley. With pageantry, parade and joyous spirit thousands of people today paid tribute to the chief crop of the valley.

Promptly at 3 p. m. the ceremonies of crowing the queen, the high point of the opening day of the thirteenth annual festival, began. From behind the pillars of the facade of the school building marched the blue-clad military escort of the queen, troops from Massanutten Military Academy.

Then came the queen's chorus, the Glee Club of State Teachers College at Harrisonburg, Va., clad in green surplices. Then the dance of the pink petals—then girls in filmy pink skirts that swirled around them. Tiny Peyton Marshall, the crown bearer, with the diadem on a white satin cushion, walked stiffly through the portals, his attention divided between the responsibility of the royal insignia and the difficulty for his short legs to negotiate the flight of steps to the first landing, where the ceremonies took place.

Then the queen's attendants in their blossom-like pink, followed by the dignitaries who were to administer the queen's oath of allegiance to the Shenandoah, and finally the queen herself, her train held by two small girls, whose long skirts were a little difficult for them to manage.

The dignitaries of the occasion, Mayor Dr. C. R. Anderson, Col. D. M. Roszel, minister to the crown of the Shenandoah kingdom, Senator Townsend and the Rev. George Earl Owens of the Church of Christ, Winchester, grouped themselves around the youthful queen. Impressively they swore her to loyalty to the apple kingdom and pledged her to keep faith with the spring and the blossoms and to rule her domain with prudence.

Crown Placed on Head.

"Cornelia Larus, I am proud to name you Queen Shenandoah XIII," Senator Townsend said as he placed the crown on her head. The queen acknowledged her new realm by saying she would try to reign well over such a beautiful valley and felt honored by being chosen its queen.

Preceding her court, the new queen and Senator Townsend walked down the remaining steps and he handed her onto her golden throne. The court maidens grouped themselves around her and a special place of honor was given to the crown bearer near her feet.

Seated nearby were some of the leading citizens of the State, who gathered for the colorful yearly spectacle of honoring King Apple. Lieut. Gov. James H. Price, representing Gov. George C. Peery, who is attending the dogwood festival at Bristol, Va., to crown the queen there, was among those on the front row of the crowded amphitheater. Near him sat Senator and Mrs. William G. McAdoo, of California.

Others Watch Ceremony.

Henry G. Shirley, the State highway commissioner, and John P. Rhodes, commissioner of motor vehicles, were with Lieut. Gov. Price. Senator Harry F. Byrd, scheduled to attend the ceremonies, was unable to be present because of illness, but his brother, Thomas Byrd, was among those in the front row. His mother, Mrs. Richard Evelyn Byrd, sr., hostess to the Shanandoah's new queen, was seated among the honor guests, as were Senator Aubrey G. Weaver and R. Gray Williams, Winchester attorney prominent in the State.

The queen's parents—Mr. and Mrs. Lewis G. Larus—smiled over the advent of royalty in their family circle.

A bright and sunny morning preceded the showery afternoon and the usually quiet little town was in gala mood. Even before the beginning of the parade at 10 o'clock of 4,000 school children from all over Frederick County, this town was jammed with visitors.

Gay, Friendly Crowd.

It was a gay and friendly crowd that moved up and down the streets from early this morning, hurrying for food, demanding sleeping accommodations which already had been booked, and paying lighthearted tribute to the apple blossom season.

Three squares on the main street of the town were roped off from traffic for full play of the carnival spirit. An impromptu county fair had been set up on the main business thoroughfare.

Beneath the pink, green and white banners, the colors of the springtime in apple blossom country, hotdog stands stood beside the traveling ventriliquist's chair, the man who guaranteed a full pound of apple candy if he failed to guess a frolicker's weight, or that of a piano and banjo group. A church bazaar booth selling homemade cakes, candies and pies had a place beside the woman whose fingers worked like lightning making flavored spun candy, and a doll vendor and a pennant hawk shouted above the din, "Remember the kiddies at home."

Parade Opens Fete.

Through the streets moved dowagers gleaming with diamonds, farmers in faded blue overalls and wide straw hats, small girls in their best starched skirts and big hair ribbons, men in immaculate white linen suits, even a few gentlemen in frock coats and toppers and a generous number of men in uniforms of all kinds and descriptions, from those of the village band players to the stripes and gold braid of Uncle Sam's Navy.

The festival day began with ohs and ahs from a crowd of thousands that lined the streets ten deep in places, that hung from windows and crowded porch railings to glimpse the school children's parade that officially opened the celebration of the apple blossoms.

The parade of children, ranging from the littlest ones whose teachers had to guide them down the streets to the lanky ones of almost college age, marched by for more than an hour in paper costumes that swished and rattled in the sunny breezes. Their story was plainly told by their gay apparel. It was the tale of the coming of spring from the first green shoots and the early birds of the season to the days of the trees in full fruit.

The hsitoric streets of Winchester resounded to the march of young feet and to the sound of band music. First in line of march was a division devoted to the dead leaves and last snow drops of winter soon to give way to colorful spring. King Sol himself led the group showing the coming of the sun and following him were lines of children dressed to represent the first flowers and the early birds. Then Spring herself marched along, a queen almost rivaling the importance of the valley queen.

Clowns Delight Children.

The school children's parade has become one of the outstanding features of the yearly celebration, each season growing more elaborate and important in the schedule of entertainment for the visitors.

From a nearby traveling circus, ponies decked in the blossom colors were loaned and a band of clowns went through their antics to the delight of the children, not only those in the parade who turned their heads from in front of the clowns but those who lined the streets. As a compliment to the professionals in their midst, a number of the school children also were dressed as clowns and cavorted on bicycles and with little express wagons.

Tomorrow, for the closing day of the festival, additional thousands are expected to pour into Winchester. While 15,000 persons jammed the amphitheater, other thousands remained in the town and it was estimated by festival officials that the opening day had brought more than 25,000 to Winchester.

Tonight the queen and her attendants attended two balls in their honor. The annual reception of the princesses was given at the George Washington Hotel in Winchester and a dance in honor of the queen took place later at the Winchester Golf Club.

Liner Normandie Loses Propeller in Channel

Le Havre, April 30 (AP).—The French liner Normandie, returning from speed trials in the English Channel, lost one of her new 35-ton propellers today.

The liner went into drydock after her arrival here, while two tugs began dragging for the propeller, one of those lately installed in an effort to overcome vibration.

Franco-U. S. Trade Treaty Due May 2

Paris, April 30 (AP).—An agreement between the United States and France on a trade treaty is expected this week in official circles.

It will follow long negotiations, with an exchange of signatories likely on May 2.

French officials indicated today they would accept the latest United States figures for an apple and peach quota which was said to be the last outstanding difficulty.

The figures were not divulged, but they were said to be a compromise between what the United States asked France to buy and what France offered to import.

Weiss, Wendel Suspect, Tries Suicide in Jail

Necktie Hanging Prevented by Guards; Another Suspect Seized.

By the United Press.

New York, April 30.—Harry Weiss, the taxicab driver who lived in fear of death by bullets because of his part in the kidnaping of Paul H. Wendel tried to kill himself today with a necktie.

Guards, hurrying down the corridor of Brooklyn City Prison, got to him before he could hang himself. They immediately clapped handcuffs on him and posted a guard outside the cell.

Weiss came back from Ohio two days ago to surrender and confess his part in the fantastic kidnaping of Wendel, a disbarred Trenton attorney who was forced to "confess" that he murdered the Lindbergh baby at a time when New Jersey was ready to execute Bruno Richard Hauptmann for that crime.

He was in City Prison because District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan feared somebody—presumably the "higher-ups" who are alleged to be implicated—might make an attempt on his life. To make sure that Weiss stayed away from harm, his bail was fixed at $50,000.

Bookmaker Is Arrested.

New York authorities moved across the New Jersey line to Trenton today to make their latest arrest in the Wendel affair. Out of bed they hauled a man who takes bets on baseball games and the races and put him in jail to join the odd assortment of persons—arrested and missing—who allegedly are involved in the abduction and torture of Wendel.

The technical charge against Sol Marcus, 32, was that he was "an accessory after the fact." He is accused of conceiving and executing the kidnaping. Marcus denied everything, and said he would fight extradition to New York.

Mrs. Murray Bleefeld, wife of one of the men still being sought in the Wendel case, gave police the information which led to Marcus' arrest.

"Our information, Geoghan said, "is that Marcus supplied money to Mrs. Bleefeld, which she in turn sent on to her husband. We are searching for one John Arbutelli. We are told that it was his money that Marcus gave to Mrs. Bleefeld.

"I expect that the Kings County grand jury will hand up another indictment tomorrow."

Parker Still Fugitive.

Ellis Parker, jr., described by Weiss as the moving spirit in the Wendel kidnaping, still is a fugitive from justice. He is under indictment in Kings County, New York, on a charge of kidnaping and second-degree assault. He is the son of the chief of Burlington County detectives—the man who delivered Wendel to Trenton authorities and succeeded in delaying the execution of Hauptmann for three days.

Martin Schlossman is free on $7,500 bail, but also has been indicted.

Marcus is in jail in Trenton.

Arbutelli, proprietor of a small Trenton hotel, is being sought, but no charge has been placed against him.

Geoghan, jubilant over the whirlwind arrests he has been making, predicted he shortly would be ready to move against the "high New Jersey officials" who are alleged to be behind the Wendel case.

Capt. Clinton Ends His Life At West Point

Capt. James W. Clinton, 33, native of Washington and a mathematics instructor at the United States Military Academy at West Point, was found dead yesterday in his quarters of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, the Associated Press reported.

Save that he had been in ill health recently, fellow officers at the academy, could ascribe no motive for the shooting. In an announcement of his death here yesterday, the War Department said that his wife, Mrs. Dorothy L. Clinton, is the only survivor.

The son of an Army officer and grandson of another, Capt. Clinton was destined for an Army career almost from birth. His grandfather on his mother's side was Col. Daniel Lane Howell, who fought in the Spanish-American War and patrolled the Mexican border in 1917; while his father was the late Lieut. Col. James W. Clinton.

Capt. Clinton received his West Point appointment in 1921 from Missouri, being graduated in 1925. His first service was at the Presidio of San Francisco, Calif., with the Thirtieth Infantry. Later he served as aide de camp to Maj. Gen. Joseph D. Leitch, now retired, at Vancouver Barracks and Fort Lewis, Wash., and then on a tour of the Philippines.

Zioncheck Arrested Again

was accused of making when he was arrested in Washington recently.

Policeman Ellmore said Zioncheck became "very abusive" after he was stopped.

Nearly Run Down.

On the way to police headquarters, the Alexandria officer said, Zioncheck almost ran down his motorcycle while turning a corner.

Bailiff Parke Ticer, after booking Zioncheck for speeding and disorderly conduct, told him to post $200 collateral for his appearance in police court this morning.

The 35-year-old Poland-born Zioncheck found himself again embarrassed for funds.

Also he was loath to appear in court this morning.

He telephoned to Louis Weinstein, a professional bondsman of this city, who hurried to Alexandria and posted the $200 for him.

Then Zioncheck retained a lawyer—Maurice L. Rosenberg—who is Alexandria's representative in the Virginia House of Delegates.

Zioncheck appeared angry and nervous in the station, according to police.

"Can't you appear for me tomorrow morning and waive a preliminary hearing?" he asked Rosenberg.

Rosenberg said he would appear for him.

"My attorney will appear for me. I don't care wat the judge thinks about it; I am thinking about the law, and the law will permit me to be represented by counsel."

Bride Awaits in Car.

It turned out that Zioncheck, just after his arrival at the police station, had telephoned Police Court Judge James R. Duncan to ask for a continuance of the case. But Duncan declined to talk to him.

Zioncheck wanted to have his case tried before a jury in the Corporation Court. Hence, his insistence on a continuance.

When Ticer, who also talked to Judge Duncan, explained that he was expected to appear this morning, Zioncheck said:

"Remind the judge that tomorrow, May 1, is Labor Day for the Communists."

From a good source, it was learned last night that unless Zioncheck appears in Police Court this morning, his $200 collateral will be forfeited.

While Zioncheck was waiting for his release yesterday, Mrs. Zioncheck was sitting in the big roadster outside.

A short distance away, Zioncheck fairly jumped on the brakes. He has almost run headlong into another machine.

Message for The Post.

Zioncheck's message for The Post follows:

"Congressman Marion A. Zioncheck, with his bride, the former Rubye Nix, took leave for Florida this afternoon at 3:30.

"The Congressman, attired in a natty brown suit, and his bride in white spring ensemble, left their fashionable Harvard Hall apartment in secret.

"Zioncheck said Tampa would be their probable destination because of the excellent golf facilities where he could show the natives some real golf.

"He also stated that the warm Florida weather would do his bride good as she has been pretty cold here in the District.

"They intend to make their stay about two weeks and intrusted his three terrapins to his friend."

Frazier-Lemke Backers Force Inflation Vote

had allowed the WPA to be "used against me" in his fight for renomination, and that Senator Joseph F. Guffey, "boss" of the Pennsylvania Democratic Congressional delegation and chairman of the Senatorial Democratic campaign committee, had worked to defeat him.

It was the second time in a month that politics in relief had been laid to Pennsylvania's WPA. Stephen Raushenbush, Senate munitions investigator, recently charged diatribes against him were inserted in pay envelopes of some Pennsylvania WPA workers.

Berlin declared yesterday that WPA trucks, carrying campaign pictures of his successful opponent, Robert W. Allen, former Pennsylvania WPA director, hauled WPA workers to the primary polls.

Berlin boasted of his Administration record. He has voted in the past for only one measure not favored by the President—the soldiers' bonus. At one time previously, he said, he signed the Frazier-Lemke petition, then withdrew it.

Guffey Is Silent.

"Taking my name off that petition is one of the things that defeated me," he said. "I did it at the request of a leader, whom I won't name because I have supported the Administration. Father Charles E. Coughlin attacked me in my district, and the Administration allowed WPA to be used against me."

The Pennsylvania Democrat charged a brewery in which Senator Guffey was interested supplied 500 barrels of beer at rallies for his opponent. Senator Guffey declined to comment on Berlin's charges, although he said he had "tried to prevent a contest" in Berlin's district.

Berlin's reference to Father Coughlin recalled the active part taken by the Detroit radio priest recently in behalf of the Frazier-Lemke inflation measure, and his broadcast assault on Chairman John J. O'Connor of the House Rules Committee for not providing House right of way for the bill. O'Connor responded by declaring he would "kick" Coughlin from the Capitol to the White House if he repeated his statements in Washington.

Boland Predicts Defeat.

Representative Boland, who also has been a target for Father Coughlin's radio attacks, but who has insisted all along the bill has no chance of passage, reiterated this belief yesterday. He said he would like to dispose of the issue.

"I am very pleased that the Frazier-Lemke bill will come up for consideration," he said. "I am still confident that it will not pass the House."

Boland believes the most votes it can possibly muster would be 169. A poll conducted by the diminutive Democratic whip showed only 90 Democrats, 27 Republicans, 3 Farmer-Laborites and 7 Progressives would support the bill, while 42 members were "doubtful." Other members, Boland declared, all said they would vote against it.

Even should it pass the House, leaders believe it would stand little chance in the Senate, although it already has been reported by the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Representative Lemke, on the other hand, was optimistic.

"We will call it up on May 11," he said, "and it will pass by a 2-to-1 vote."

Delay to May 25 Likely.

May 11 is the next "discharge" day, but under the rules seven legislative days must pass before the bill can be considered. Thus leaders could delay consideration to May 25, the next following "discharge" day, by not meeting tomorrow, and sitting only fine days next week.

Carrying a $3,000,000,000 inflation limitation, the Frazier-Lemke bill proposes to refinance farm mortgages at 1½ per cent interest rate, with a further payment of 1½ per cent annually to amortize the loan. At this rate, it would take 47 years to liquidate the indebtedness.

The bill would finance the program by issuing bonds, secured by first mortgages on farm lands. The bonds would draw interest at 1½ per cent, and would be amortized at 1½ per cent annually. But if there was not a ready market for the bonds the Farm Credit Administration would deliver them to the Federal Reserve Board, which would issue in return not to exceed $3,000,000,000 in new currency.

Four members joined Berlin yesterday in completing the 218 signatures necessary to force a vote on the bill.

"My defeat influenced these others," commented Berlin. "I still have friends in this House, and I'm not half through with those boys."

Record Peacetime Deficit Revealed by Secretary of Treasury

Secretary Morgenthau before Senate Finance Committee where he testified that a Treasury deficit of $5,966,000,000 could be expected this fiscal year. From left, Chairman Harrison, Senator Couzens, Senator Keyes, Secretary Morgenthau and Acting Director of Budget Daniel Bell.

Morgenthau on Taxes

taciturn Treasury Secretary hammered away at the fact that the President had asked $620,000,000 additional in continuing revenue, and $517,000,000 more in "temporary" taxes to be spread over a period of three years—a total of $1,137,000,000.

He said the House bill provides the $620,000,000 asked, and "also provides for the first year of a three-year program for recouping the loss of $517,000,000 of processing taxes lost during the fiscal year 1936."

He warned, however, that "it does not provide any temporary revenues for the two succeeding years to make up the balance of $337,000,000 of temporary revenues desired."

He lost no opportunity to contend that the new taxes were made necessary by bonus passage and AAA invalidation.

Gives Potential Yield.

Morgenthau also brought out that the net additional revenue to be expected by June 30, 1937, the close of the next fiscal year, is only $490,000,000. This figure was reached by halving the $620,000,000 corporate tax revenue expected from a full year's operation, and adding this to the $100,000,000 new revenue expected from the "windfall" levy on processing tax refunds, and the $80,000,000 from extending six months the capital stock and excess profits tax.

"It must be recognized that the choice of an income tax (corporate) as the means for raising additional revenue necessarily involves a delay in realization of increased receipts," he explained, pointing out that the full additional annual revenue would not be collected before the 1938 fiscal year.

Stressing the continuing pick-up in Federal revenue in recent years Morgenthau took apparent pleasure in pointing out that revenue estimates since he has been Secretary have more nearly approximated actual yields than estimates of his immediate predecessors. Revenues for 1935 were underestimated by 4.6 per cent, he pointed out, and, for 1936 underestimated by only 1 per cent. For the four preceding years, tax yields were overestimated, he said, as follows: For 1931, 15 per cent; 1932, 7 per cent; 1933, 13 per cent, and 1934, 5 per cent.

Returning to proposed processing taxes, recommended by the President, but discarded by the House committee, Morgenthau said:

"I call this potential source of revenue to your attention again. I feel sure that the Department of Agriculture stands ready to supply any information you may desire on this subject."

Hailing the Administration's proposed dividend-forcing corporate earnings tax as a return to taxes based on "ability to pay," Morgenthau charged widespread tax avoidance follows departure from that theory. He estimated that, under the present law, income tax liability of corporations on the basis of 1936 earnings would approximate $94,000,000, and charged $4,500,000,000 of corporate income would be withheld from stockholders. Were this fully distributed, he said, the resultant additional yield would be about $1,390,000,000. He said the President was seeking merely "to put all taxes on business profits essentially on the same equitable basis."

Admits Deviations.

Helvering, after taking the stand, paid tribute to the "very painstaking and conscientious consideration" given the tax bill by the House committee, but on cross-questioning he admitted that on certain points—notably in providing a preferred flat 15 per cent rate for banks, trust and life insurance companies, the House had deviated from Treasury suggestions.

The Treasury asked, Helvering said, that the corporate tax be made "universal" in its application. He said, however, that the House bill "provides the basis for an excellent and productive revenue measure."

Haas, who undertook to defend the House bill against charges that it will foster monopoly, block business expansion, drive capital into tax-exempt securities and whittle down corporate surpluses to a dangerous point, did not finish his testimony, and will return before the committee today. Arguing that the bill does not discriminate against "small corporations," he was called to task by Senator Peter Goelet Gerry (Democrat), Rhode Island, who said Haas meant "corporations with small earnings" and big as well as small concerns are in that category. Haas agreed to the correction.

U. S. School Drops Nazi Scholarship

Williamstown, Mass., April 30 (U.P.).—Award by Williams College of a $1,000 scholarship to an exchange student from Germany will be discontinued because of the Nazi government's attitude toward such students, President Tyler Dennett announced tonight.

Dr. Dennett's announcement came after he received a report the Reich ministry of education had ruled that German students studying in American colleges must defend Nazi idealogy and Hitler.

"One of the indispensable conditions for study in an American college," Dr. Dennett said, "is an open mind. It seems unlikely that anyone who is officially committed to any political program to the point where he is not at liberty to change his mind would profit by what an American college would have to offer."

Mother of President Visiting Kin in Texas

Fort Worth, Tex., April 30 (AP).—Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, 81-year-old mother of the President, arrived here today for a visit with her grandson, Elliott Roosevelt.

She stepped down from the train with an armful of bluebonnets—the gift of the veteran conductor—and a few little gifts for Ruth Chandler Roosevelt, daughter of the Elliott Roosevelts.

She joked about her age with the conductor. "You're 77?" she asked. "I'd hate to tell you how old I am."

Gomez Sails for Cuba, Many Guards at Pier

New York, April 30 (AP).—Dr. Miguel Mariano Gomez, President-elect of Cuba, sailed for home today on the United Fruit liner Peten with a party of nine.

Elaborate precautions were taken to guard him. Ten detectives of the alien squad and a regular police escort accompanied him to the pier at the foot of West Rector street. On the pier and ship were other police, Department of Justice agents and 50 private detectives.

Dr. Gomez spent a month in the United States. In Washington he was the guest of President and Mrs. Roosevelt at tea.

King Fuad Buried In Colorful Rites

Cairo, Egypt, April 30 (AP).—King Fuad I was buried today after picturesque ceremonies in a tomb in a mosque the late monarch built over the grave of his mother.

Wailing increased as the cortege reached the mosque, where it halted while seven sacrificial bulls were slaughtered in the roadway in fulfilment of a burial rite dating from the Pharaohs. The meat was distributed to the poor.

Fifty women, draped in black from head to foot, set up a piercing funeral chant as the coffin was carried into the mosque. It was lowered into the tomb, while bearded patriarchs chanted from the Koran.

Fuad's heir and successor, his only son, Farouk, was not here for the funeral. The new 16-year-old king is en route here from London after spending half an hour with King Edward today in the latter's private apartment.

New Farm Bill To Replace RA Left in Doubt

White House Conference Fails to Decide on Tugwell Project Substitute.

By the Associated Press.

Uncertainty over the future of a secretly drafted bill that would virtually replace Rexford G. Tugwell's Resettlement Administration with a new and permanent corporation arose yesterday in the wake of a White House conference.

Chairman Marvin Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, left a conference with President Roosevelt to say that no decision had been reached on which, if any, of pending farm bills were to be pressed for passage at this session.

In that file of legislation is the resettlement measure, drafted as a substitute for the Senate's Bankhead farm tenant bill.

The proposed bill, which has not yet been voted upon in committee, would establish a Farmers Home Corporation to be managed by a board of three "officers, or employes" of the Agriculture Department, appointed by the President.

The Government would subscribe $50,000,000 for the corporation, but the board of directors would have power "to determine and prescribe the manner in which the obligations and expenses of the corporation shall be incurred, allowed and paid."

The corporation would have power to establish and assist establishment of farms and farm homes; to assist organization of farmers cooperative associations "engaged, or about to become engaged" in the developing, equipping or maintaining farms and farm homes for members, and to make loans, to acquire real estate and to improve any acquired property.

Seamen to Strike In Spain Today

Madrid, April 30 (AP).—A strike paralyzing Spain's entire merchant marine beginning at midnight was announced tonight by workers.

The strike, independent from observation of May day tomorrow, resulted when six syndicates allied with Spanish shipping charged operators with a failure to be "reasonable" about their demands for higher wages. The Fishermen's Union likewise is joining the walkout, called for an indefinite period.

Miners of Penarroya announced they are taking over great iron mines there and would work them "on a communistic basis," following the refusal of operators to rehire a number of miners discharged in connection with the October, 1934, revolt.

Alameda, Calif., April 30 (AP).—The China Clipper set a new mark today in flying the 2,400-mile leg from Honolulu in 14 hours and 57 minutes. The Clipper arrived here at 8:05 a. m. Pacific standard time, after taking advantage of strong tail winds. The previous best record was 17 hours and 2 minutes, set last December 4.

'Atom-Splitter' Is Developed After 7 Years

Giant Machine May Reveal New Data on Cancer, Scientists Told.

Atom smashing and long-range weather forecasting, two of the most fascinating challenges which physical science has accepted, retained the spotlight here yesterday as Washington's annual "Science Week" continues with meetings of the American Physical Society and the American Geophysical Union.

To the former group, meeting at the Bureau of Standards, Dr. M. A. Tuve described the design of a giant atom-smasher which, if constructed, will reveal new mysteries of the atomic world and possibly provide new information on cancer.

The design is the product of seven years' development by Tuve, L. R. Hafstad and O. Dahl, all associated with the Carnegie Institution's department of terrestrial magnetism.

A less optimistic outlook in long-range weather forecasting was presented to the American Geophysical Union by Dr. A. G. McNish, also of the Carnegie Institution.

Scouts Long Forecasts.

Dr. McNish scouted the possibility of predicting the weather weeks in advance and deprecated claims that weather runs in cycles, ascribing such "cycles" to the vagaries of chance.

"Various investigators for many decades," he said, "have attempted to discover cycles and relationships as a basis for weather predictions. Except when based on definitely known physical considerations, these relationships are used less for prognostication.

"Only by a comprehensive understanding of the basic physical principles underlying meteorological phenomena may an accurate forecast of the weather be made."

Operated by a voltage of 15,000,000 volts or more, the veritable cannon envisaged by Dr. Tuve would do as much for atomic exploration as the 100-inch telescope did for astronomy when it was installed in Mount Wilson Observatory a quarter-century ago, he said.

Is Seen as Practicable.

Experiments conducted with a smaller edition of the proposed apparatus, capable of a mere 1,200,000 volts, indicate the big gun would be practicable, Dr. Tuve asserted. Whereas the "little" gun has a 15-foot vacuum tube, the proposed machine wold have a vacuum tube 25 feet long.

Dr. Tuve also reported to the American Physical Society the results of experiments on atomic forces which involved precise measurements on the repelling forces which tend to separate two single fragments of hydrogen atoms when they come within one-ten-millionmillionth of an inch of each other.

The record-breaking measurements were carried out by Drs. Tuve, Hafstad and N. P. Heydenburg. They are considered of great importance in clarifying modern ideas regarding the structure of chemical elements.

Although atoms are too minute to be seized or pushed together, the Carnegie scientists succeeded in their measurements by observing the angles of deflection of individual hydrogen nuclei, or "protons," when they collide at high speed with other protons in a hydrogen-filled chamber.

Dr. J. A. Fleming, director of terrestrial magnetism at the Carnegie Institution and general secretary of the Geophysical Union, reported on recent observations of an unusual coincidence of solar and terrestrial phenomena.

Shortly before noon on April 8, he said, the institution's magnetic observatory near Huancayo, Peru, detected a sudden increase of the earth's magnetism coincident with the observation of a sudden outburst of activity around a group of sunspots.

Erratic Electric Currents.

The magnetic increase was accompanied by erratic electric currents in the earth's crust and a violent fade-out of radio signals ordinarily reflected from the upper layers of the atmosphere.

"Association of magnetic and electric activity on the earth with activity of the sun has long been known by scientists," Dr. Fleming said, "although the exact nature of this relationship has been incompletely understood. The opinion has been quite generally accepted that the terrestrial conditions are the result of streams of electrically charged corpuscles emanating from the sun in regions of sunspots.

"Much evidence indicates that these hypothetical corpuscles require several days to travel the 93,000,000 miles between the sun and the earth, a distance which light traverses in only eight minutes. The close agreement in time between the solar outburst observed April 8 and the associated terrestrial disturbances indicates that if a causal relationship between this solar outburst and the corresponding terrestrial manifestations exists, the radiation which caused these terrestrial effects must have traveled with the velocity of light and in this case could not have been material particles."

Dr. Fleming was honored at a dinner given by fellow members of the Geophysical Union last night at the Cosmos Club.

The annual meetings of the union and the physical society will continue today and a joint meeting of the International Scientific Radio Union (American Section) and the Institute of Radio Engineers will open at the National Academy Building.

Study of Alien Problem in U.S. Set Tomorrow

Place in Economic Life to Be Considered at Conference Here.

A conference of prominent Americans to consider the problems of the alien and his place in the economic life of the Nation will be held at the Washington Hotel tomorrow.

The conference was called by Read Lewis, director of the Foreign Language Information Service, who charges that the alien in the United States has been exploited for selfish political motives and harrassed by economic fear on the part of citizens.

Those participating in the meeting will be John G. Winant, chairman of the Social Security Commission; the Right Rev. Msgr. John A. Ryan, of Catholic University; Justin Miller, chairman of the Attorney General's Advisory Council on Crime; Prof. E. A. Hooten, Harvard University anthropologist, and other authorities.

Lewis said yesterday:

"At a time when it is difficult to meet the needs even of our own citizens, it is little wonder that the alien in the United States is the subject of bitter controversy.

"On the one hand serious charges are made against him. On the other these charges are denounced as contrary to our American experience and tradition. Where does the truth lie? It is the purpose of the conference to discuss and answer these questions."

Shouse Pleads For Adherence To Constitution

Asserts Any Change Would Establish New Form of Government.

By the Associated Press.

Princeton, N. J., April 30. — Appealing for opposition to any constitional amendment which would depart from the "original purposes and ideals" of that document, Jouett Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, tonight asserted that such a change would involve the establishment of a new form of government.

"We have heard in recent responsible utterences frequent hints of a return to the program of that recovery act which the courts destroyed," he said in an address before the American-Whig Cliosophic Societies of Princeton University. "We have heard new proposals of price fixing and control of wages and hours.

"It is with deep concern that we note in these suggestions no mention of a constitutional amendment to make them legal powers of the Federal Government.

"It is hardly conceivable that any attempt is to be made to restore methods of Federal control that already have been condemned. But if such restoration is contemplated it is within our right to demand that those plans be embodied in a definitely written amendment to the Constitution and that, in the usual course, the amendment shall be submitted to the people. They alone must choose."

Calling attention to the Supreme Court's invalidation of New Deal measures, and ensuing "protests from the President, members of his Cabinet and members of both Houses of Congress," Shouse asserted that the power of the courts must go unreduced, if constitutional guarantees are to exist.

"To destroy the balance of powers would be to destroy the Constitution and establish a new form of government, as foreign to the purposes of the original Constitutoin as it would be possible to conceive," he said.

McGrady Halts Miners' Strike Near Deadline

Union, Operators Agree to Continue Parleys on New Wage Scale.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 30.—At the request of Edward McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, anthracite operators and miners agreed tonight to an indefinite extension of the present working agreement to permit continued negotiations.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, immediately dispatched telegrams to workers telling them to remain at work.

The present working agreement was to have expired at midnight and a stoppage of operations, involving more than 100,000 miners, had been threatened unless the conferees representing miners and operators had been able to reach an agreement by that time.

McGrady, who flew here from Washington this afternoon to make a final effort to prevent the conference from ending in a deadlock, said:

"I have been assigned to come to New York and co-operate with mine operators and members of the United Mine Workers of America to try to find an amicable solution to the many problems confronting the industry and labor.

"I have made a request that there be no stoppage of work and that negotiations continue until a conclusion is reached. Both sides have agreed that they will co-operate to the fullest extent."

McGrady then announced that the scale committee, would meet at 11 a. m. tomorrow and "we hope to stay in continuous session." He said he would remain in New York until an agreement is reached.

The contract, under which the miners have been working for six years, was to have expired March 31, but was extended an additional month to permit further negotiations.

The scale committee has been in session here since February 24.

Airline Expanding Service to Capital

A new world's record for air transportation is contained in the announcement yesterday by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, general manager of Eastern Air Lines, that the company is inaugurating today a schedule of 15 round trips daily between New York and Washington. This is the most frequent air service ever provided by an airline between any two cities.

With this service, a person can call for a reservation at any time of the day and leave his home or office immediately to catch the next plane. The express flying time between the two cities will be 80 minutes. The Philadelphia service will be increased to 12 planes daily. The Baltimore service will be increased to six. Three round trips daily will be operated to Richmond.

A native of New Tripoli, Pa., Rupp was a graduate of Muhlenberg College, where he also received his law degree in 1902. Since 1905 he practiced law in Allentown.

He was chairman of the Pennsylvania Democratic State Committee in 1920-21, and Democratic candidate for the United States Senate in 1920 and 1932.

Formerly the president of the Pennsylvania Trust Co., he was at the time of his death a trust officer of the Lehigh Valley Trust Co. In 1930-31 he was grand exalted ruler of the Elks.

Munich (Friday), May 1 (U.P.).—Eleven military aviators were killed when a huge army bomber crashed near Ulm on April 25, it was revealed belatedly today. The accident occurred during night maneuvers. Cause of the crash was not known. The local press did not mention the accident.

Lion Kills Trainer; Boy Think It's Act

Paris, April 30 (U.P.).—While hundreds of visitors to the annual Foire du Trone Fete, held at Place de la Nation, were passing by within easy call, Charles Bosser, 10, tonight watched a lion fatally wound its trainer, thinking it was part of the act.

The lion sprang on Charles Hulin, 26, and seized him by the neck as soon as he entered the cage inside a large circus tent for a rehearsal.

Hulen broke the beast's grip momentarily and shouted to the boy, "call for help."

Only then did the fascinated boy realize the attack was not part of the lion tamer's act. But before he could act the lion sprang again and sank its teeth into Hulin's neck.

A policeman heard Hulin's screams, rushed into the tent and shot the lion through the head. Hulin died a few minutes later.

Sterilization Is Urged For Race Purification

New Haven, Conn., April 30 (AP).—Dr. Earnest A. Hooton, prominent Harvard anthropologist, advocated tonight purification of racial strains in this country by sterilization.

"Racial purity is desirable and attainable in one sense only," he said in an address for delivery at a public meeting here in connection with the annual meeting at Yale of the American Association of Physical Anthropologists.

"Every racial strain in our country should be purified by the sterilization of its insane, diseased and criminalistic elements."

Muzzle-or-Leash Rule For Dogs Put in Effect

From today until September 30 dogs on the streets of the District must be muzzled, unless held on leash, under a regulation approved recently by the Commissioners.

Warning that the regulation would be strictly enforced was given yesterday by Vernon E. West, acting corporation counsel. Unmuzzled dogs are liable to seizure and the owners subject to punishment in Police Court.

Highest Judges Score Wallace In Rates Slash

Dickinson Defends Order Cutting Service Fee in Stock Yards.

By the Associated Press.

Criticism of procedure followed by Secretary Wallace in ordering a reduction in service charges at the Kansas City stock yards was voiced yesterday by some members of the Supreme Court.

It took place while John Dickinson, Assistant Attorney General, was arguing in defense of the order which trimmed rates between 12 and 15 per cent.

Justices Brandeis, Butler, Roberts and Van Devanter asked a series of questions as to whether Secretary Wallace had delegated too much authority to subordinates and whether he had signed the order without knowledge of the facts developed during the inquiry.

Then Chief Justice Hughes asked Dickinson if he thought it would be legal for a Secretary of Agriculture, in the belief that it would be "good politics," to issue an order without knowledge of the facts and then let the courts determine whther the action was valid.

He referred to the contention of Kansas City commission men that Wallace had acted "arbitrarily" in that he had not been present when any testimony was taken or arguments heard and that there was no evidence that he had seen any of the data developed.

Dickinson insisted that Wallace was responsible for the order and it must be presumed he had studied the evidence. Questioned by Justice Stone, he contended the Secretry could delegate such administrative duties to subordinates.

Before this discussion started, Frederick H. Wood, new attorney for the commission men, asserted that Wallace's action was "ruinous" and "disregarded actual experience altogether."

A statement also was made for the commision men by John B. Gage, Kansas City attorney. It consisted of a complicated analysis of statistics concerning the industry and of the findings in lower courts.

The justices then put the case under consideration. A final decision will be announced before the summer adjournment in June.

Anesthesia Use Urged by Arab 1,000 Yrs. Ago

U. S. Scientist Translates Notebook Kept by Surgeon in Time of Caliphs.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 30.—A notebook written by an Arabian eye surgeon 1,000 years ago was published tonight as the first known reference to anesthetics.

Copied by hand in Arabic some 800 years before the use of general anesthesia was recognized by medical historians, the book described 143 eye disease remedies and advocated "putting the patient to sleep" before painful operations.

The author of the "oculists's memorandum"—Ali Ibn Isa—gave no instructions on how sleep should be induced but was positive anesthesia should be administered.

Two reasons for this seeming contradiction were advanced by the translator of the work, Dr. Casey Wood, former head of the Department of Opthalmology of Northwestern University Medical School. They were:

"Either because it was taken for granted that every intelligent surgeon of his day knew all about the method * * * or he did not wish to enter into details and thus encourage a bungler or an inexperienced anesthetist to trifle with a surgical procedure that was fraught with some danger to life."

Dr. Wood, who translated the book in the Vatican library in Rome, said it was regarded as the most original and complete early treatise on eye diseases.

Written when the Eastern Caliphate was at its height, the book prescribed remedies still in use today.

It described operations for cataract, trachoma, squint and headache, and advocated such well known remedies as white lead, zinc, ash, vitriol, opium, camphor, musk and amber.

Byrns Bets Snell Cigar On Length of Session

By the Associated Press.

Speaker Byrns predicted yesterday Congress would adjourn the first week in June—and to back up his forecast he has bet a 25 cent cigar with Representative Snell, of New York, House Republican leader.

"He wanted to bet a suit of clothes that Congress wouldn't adjourn until after the Republican convention starts," the speaker told reporters. "I told him I couldn't buy anybody a suit of clothes, so he suggested a nickel cigar. But I thought a 25 cent cigar was about right.

Graziani's troops, climaxing bitter fighting in which losses on both sides were heavy, occupied Sasa Baneh and Bulleleh on the southern front, leaving the way open for a decisive battle before Jijiga and Harar.

Graziani's victories at Sasa Baneh and Bulleleh do not mean the elimination of Dedjazmach Nasibu's armies as a danger to the Italian forces. Nasibu's positions at Jijiga and Harar are well fortified. The main bodies of his armies remain intact.

The duck hit the water so hard it was stunned. Gorsuch captured both.

Storm Troops In Rhine Area Worry France

By the United Press.

Berlin, April 29.—Occupation of the Rhineland by Germany has focused French interest on Fuehrer Hitler's Storm Troops and their potential usefulness in the military establishment.

France is interested in knowing whether Germany proposes to increase the number of S. S. (Black Shirts) and S. A. (Brown Shirts) in the Rhineland area. Of the two groups, the Black Shirts are manifestly better trained.

The Reich is believed to have 200,000 S. S. troopers who "protect Germany's domestic security." They typify Nazi Germany's ideal of manhood and are destined to be forefathers of future generations. S. S. men must submit the pedigree of their ancestors to superiors for approval before they are permitted to marry. They are hand picked with special emphasis on physique and blood. They must be Aryan.

Troops Pick of Nation.

The primary function of the Black Shirts si to protect Hitler. Twelve thousand of the biggest men in the corps are at his disposal day and night. Nazis boast that these black helmeted "emergency troops" can out-goosestep the regular army. The men admitted to the corps first must serve two years in the army. They undergo intensive training in the use of every weapon from a hand grenade to a tank or airplane.

Many members of the S. S. are used as guards at concentration camps. Only about 3,000 actually form Hitler's bodyguard. They wear the Fuehrer's name embroidered in silver on the sleeves of their uniforms. They line important streets when Hitler makes a public appearance. The special bodyguard surrounds the speaking platform when the Fuehrer addresses the Reich.

Bay State Ends Decree Exiling Roger Williams

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 30.—The 300-year banishment of Roger Williams from Massachusetts ended officially today.

Gov. James M. Curley, with the stroke of his pen, terminated the decree of the Bay State colony's general court which, in 1635 gave the outspoken radical of his day six months to leave.

His animosity to the Church of England and some colonial laws had won for him the enmity of many of the colony's churchmen and officials.

Williams disputed the right of magistrates to allow the King to seize land from the Indians without paying for it. Further, he denied the right of the magistrates to impose faith and worship.

Alarmed when his doctrines appeared to be spreading, the magistrates decided, quietly, to send him back to his native England.

Williams, forewarned, fled in the dead of winter. For 14 weeks he roamed the wilderness near Narragansett Bay. At the Seekonk River five supporters joined him. They went downstream and founded a colony. Williams named it "Providence" in commemoration of their escape from Massachusetts.

On Monday Gov. Curley formally will present to the State of Rhode Island a copy of the bill he signed today. Several State officials will accompany him to Providence for the ceremony.

District Plans Gala Welcome For Kate Smith

Plans for a turnout of the town to greet Kate Smith, Washington's singing girl, when she returns at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow, are complete.

At Union Station will be Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of District Commissioners; ranking officers of veterans' organizations; Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and thousands of her admirers.

Miss Smith is returning home to be guest at a gigantic party being given in honor of her twenty-seventh birthday and fifth anniversary on the air at Constitution Hall Monday night.

Hazen to Greet Star.

The eastern entrance to the station is being roped off and will present a colorful appearance as the bright uniforms of six American Legion bands and drum and bugle corps mass in military formation to receive the radio star.

Commissioner Hazen, in behalf of the District, will greet Miss Smith as she steps off the train. Then the ceremony will be conducted by the veterans' organzations.

Joseph J. Malloy, commander of the District Department American Legion, will make a brief address welcoming her on behalf of the legion. Then Edward K. Inman, commander of the District Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Dr. C. Hamilton Anderson, commander of the District Disabled American Veterans, will greet her for their organizations.

Escort Arranged.

Kate will be escorted from the station to her hotel by the guard of honor of the District Department of the Legion, composed of 40 legionnaires in legion dress uniform under command of Capt. James Pistario.

The arrival will be broadcast over WJSV, from 2:30 to 3 p. m.

Among the bands participating are the Sons of the Legion Drum and Bugle Corps; the Fort Stevens Sons of the Legion Drum and Bugle Corps and the Government Printing Office Post Band.

The birthday party, which will be held in Constitution Hall Monday night, is being given for the singer by the 1,500 employees of the Washington unit of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.

Board Favors Utility Over Federal Projects

Richmond, Va., April 30 (AP).—The State corporation commission ruled in favor of the Virginia Electric & Power Co. today in a contest with Farmers Rural Utilities, Inc., for prior rights in the Chancellor area of Spotsylvania County.

The commission ordered V. E. P. Co. to complete construction of a power line from Five Mile Fork to Chancellor "at the earliest possible date" in accordance with a petition of J. M. Steck and other residents of the Chancellor community. They requested service by the private company in preference to that of the Government financed rural cooperative.

Annette Gipson Fails To Break Air Record

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., April 30 (U.P.).—An attempt by Annette Gipson, of New York, to break the national women's altitude record for light planes ended in apparent failure today.

Descending at Municipal Airport at 6:14 p. m. (E. S. T.), after a flight of an hour and 59 minutes, the pretty brunette flier said her own instruments showed she reached an altitude of 16,300 feet, considerably short of the 16,097-foot record.

Virginia Choral Fete Opens at Richmond

Richmond, Va., April 30 (AP).—Programs of all-American music, an orchestral concert and a recital at the Virginia War Memorial carrillon marked the opening today of the Virginia State Choral Festival.

Musicians from many sections of the State will present a folk program at 3:30 p. m. tomorrow under the direction of John Powell, Richmond pianist-composer and an authority on folk music.

Sikorsky Ready to Produce Air Liners for Ocean Travel

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 30.—Igor Sikorsky, designer and builder of airplanes and flying boats, announced tonight his organization is prepared to produce giant airliners to meet every demand of oceanic flying.

"We believe it must be a flying boat with four to six engines, probably twin-deck, with a reasonable speed of from 160 to 180 miles an hour," he said in an address before the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences.

"The ship will have excellent interior living quarters, fully comparable with the accommodations on board a small sized steamship, comfortable staterooms and sleeping accommodations, a large dining room which would be used for meals and also as a lounge or dancing salon.

"The huge wings would include storage space for the fuel, various auxiliary mechanisms, extra luggage space and corridors through which the mechanics would be able to pass during the flight in order to inspect and maintain the power plant and various other mechanisms.

"All these would be feasible on airliners of from 40 to 60 tons. As soon as we reach 80 tons or more, the wings will become thick enough to permit the use of the space for staterooms and probably for a promenade observation gallery in the leading edge."

Sikorsky said problems of ocean flying, different than transcontinental flying, made it important that the seaboats be equipped to withstand "very severe stunts or any weather disturbances."

A crew of eight to ten men will be needed and a passenger list of at least 30 must be carried, he said.

Trolley Track Changes Begun At 14th Avenue

Re-Routing Construction Generally in Downtown Area to Follow.

Much of the noise will be removed from the noisiest street car crossing in the city by track changes which were under way at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest yesterday.

Changes to be made in the crossover there are a part of the general track changes in the downtown area ordered months ago by the Public Utilities Commission in connection with rerouting of cars and improvement of service.

Commission officials said that the alterations at Fourteenth street and the Avenue would eliminate much of the noises now made by cars banging through the old crossover.

When the changes have been completed Fourteenth street cars will run straight down Fourteenth to the avenue.

Other downtown changes to be made call for elimination of two of the four tracks on Fourteenth between New York avenue and H street, elimination of the stub end tracks at Fifteenth and New York avenue, and connecting the stub end on G street at the Treasury with the tracks on Fifteenth street.

The work is expected to continue through the summer. The removal of tracks and realignment of the remaining tracks on Fourteenth street between H and New York avenue is to be begun on June 15. It is expected the work will not be completed before October.

Bill May Ban D. C. Employes' Military Duties

Prohibition of Outside Pay May End Guard, Reserve Service.

District employes earning $2,400 a year or more are likely to be barred from voluntary military service, such as the District National Guard or military or naval reserves, if the House restriction on outside activities is retained in the 1937 District supply bill, it developed yesterday.

Reserve officers in the District, it is understood, have asked for an interpretation from the adjutant general's office.

Many Washington policemen would be forced to relinquish their military training, it is said, if the restriction becomes a law.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton, acting chairman of the House sub-committee, yesterday took the floor to defend the limitation.

He advised his colleagues to quit Congress and go on the District Supreme Court bench because of the remuneration they receive for teaching in law schools and other outside activities.

Representative Cox (Democrat), Georgia, commended the Texan for his efforts to bar public officials from engaging in private business or professional work.

Blanton yesterday asked The Post to correct an error in the statement printed Thursday that supreme court judges in the State of Texas receive only $4,000 a year. He said that they actually are paid $8,000 a year, whereas the circuit court judges get $4,500.

Labor Fronts In Europe Set For May Day

By the Associated Press.

London, April 30.—Workers of Great Britain, France and Spain tonight prepared for huge May Day demonstrations calling for a united labor front to smash fascism and prevent war.

The demonstrations came as nations of Europe, tense over the Rhineland situation and the Italo-Ethiopian war, are piling up more armaments.

The Communist Internationale in Moscow issued a proclamation to workers of the world and urged them to join a "united front" against fascism and war.

London's May Day organizers published a resolution calling for a world conference of labor in the interests of peace.

Preparations have been made here for the most extensive workers' demonstration against war since the 1926 general strike.

From four platforms in Hyde Park will rise four "May poles." For its only decoration each will have a red flag fluttering over the heads of Britain's extremist leaders.

Germany's Nazis set for their festivities a program of "special thankfullness" for Adolf Hitler and his "glorious army." The official slogan is "Rejoice, Be Glad You Are Alive."

In France and Spain strong police forces were posted at strategic points to cope with any disorders.

Moscow was decorated with masses of red bunting as millions prepared for celebrations to be climaxed by a gigantic military parade.

In Vienna, police took into custody a number of Nazi and Communist leaders and ordered cemeteries closed in a precaution against disorders.

Socialists and Reds To March Together.

New York, April 30 (AP).—Socialists and Communists, for the first time, will march together tomorrow in New York's May Day parade to Union Square.

Norman Thomas, twice the Socialist candidate for President, is chairman of the United Labor Day celebration. With Thomas and New York labor leaders, in reviewing the parade, will be two representatives of the Mexican Confederation of Workers, Victor Manuel Villssenor and Alejandro Carrillo.

Merit System Planks Asked By Voters' Unit

Women Warn Leaders of Both Parties Spoils Policy Must Go.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, April 30. — The League of Women Voters, in its long-standing effort to throw out the spoils system in Government, informed today the chairmen of the two major parties "this is the time for the electorate to speak and for the politicians to hear."

A committee working on future plans in the drive to put all Government employes on the merit system urged the convention to present a merit plank to the Democratic and Republican National Conventions.

"Believing that the spoils system is the greatest threat to good government in the United States, the league pledges itself to use the full force of its organization in an unremitting campaign against the spoils system and to establish in its place the merit principle," the league said in letters sent to James A. Farley and Henry P. Fletcher, Democratic and Republican chairmen, respectively.

American Club Women Table League Proposal.

Coral Gables, Fla., April 30 (AP).—Indorsement of United States membership in the League of Nations was shelved today "for further study" by representatives of American Club Women after prolonged debate failed to produce agreement on the controversial issue.

A resolution indorsing the child labor amendment was overwhelmingly passed.

At executive session tonight the council received invitations from Chicago and Kansas City for the general meeting of the federation in 1938 and from Tulsa, Okla., and Washington for the 1937 meeting of the council.

A Character Lacking.

Today is Child Health Day and in the playgrounds of Washington pageants will be presented to impress on the rising generation the virtues of the motto: "Mens sana in corpore sano." Sir Food and Lord Sun, working together with Dame Sleep, will demonstrate their power to repel the evil influences which are constantly undermining health.

From all reports, however, there will be no character to represent for the children the unnatural ally siding with the forces of disease in this city. If the allegories had included such a figure, he might well have been introduced as the type of Congressman who refuses to appropriate even enough funds to give beds to needy victims of tuberculosis here.

There is something of a mockery in today's celebration of Child Health Day in the District of Columbia. Diphtheria, childhood's scourge and one that can be made as rare as scurvy, is once more on the march here. So inadequate are the funds allowed the local Health Department that a private organization—the District Tuberculosis Association—has to bear the cost of inspecting more than two thousand boys and girls threatened by the white plague but unable to pay for an examination.

Again, the 93,000 children who attend Washington schools are dependent on the efforts of only 14 part-time physicians and 12 full-time nurses to protect them from the myriad diseases which prey upon adolescents. Last year's District appropriation would allow no more to be employed.

To End Airport Commissions.

The District airport site commission, of which the House appointees have now been named by Speaker Byrns, should regard itself as primarily a commission to end airport commissions. Long enough has the Capital muddled around with its dangerously inadequate landing field. Long enough has it watched other groups set out enthusiastically to settle the problem of a proper site, only to end up in a listless stalemate. It is due more to good luck than good management that no serious crash has yet emphasized the danger of these protracted delays.

Nevertheless, some good can be salvaged from the abortive efforts of these earlier investigations. Even if no satisfactory conclusions were reached, at least almost every pertinent argument has been brought out and listed. These should be of considerable assistance to the present commission. And although there is now no hope for immediate action on a new site, the easy review of past testimony should insure early consideration of a bill when Congress convenes next year.

With the chairmen of both District committees named to the commission, and with most of the members already well-informed on all the issues involved, Washington can look forward with confidence to a conscientious and fair report that will offer no excuse for longer shilly-shallying.

Of Suspicious Origin.

Conferees on the District bill may properly consider the advisability of permitting municipal employes to accept outside work for pay. The question which has been raised by the House Appropriations Committee may be argued pro and con with a good deal of logic on both sides. If public sentiment is overwhelmingly opposed to the committee's restrictive provision, it is chiefly because of the motives behind that proposal.

It is not an ideal arrangement to have officials drawing sizable salaries from the local government and supplementing their income from other sources. In this day of unemployment, there is too much doubling up of work on the part of a few individuals. On the other hand, who is better equipped to conduct a moot court than a judge who is active on the bench? The contact between students of the law and prosecutors, as well as judges, is certainly desirable from the educational viewpoint. And there is no evidence that such teaching activities detract from the value of official services.

There is, however, a more important point in the local controversy. The clique in the House responsible for the attempted ban upon "outside jobs" was actuated by a desire to penalize certain municipal employes who dared to arouse community support for more adequate appropriations. Originally this provision was aimed at the "damned doctors" who insisted upon telling the people that public health in the District has been disgracefully neglected. Any piece of legislation with such an origin is certain to be suspect.

Since the issue has been raised, the House sub-committee has properly summoned individuals affected to testify. That action was as justified as Representative Blanton's attempt to conduct a private inquisition on the subject was indefensible. If the sub-committee goes to the trouble of thoroughly analyzing the situation, it will undoubtedly see the dangers of arbitrary action. For any inflexible rule in this field is likely to do more harm than good.

Shaping The Housing Program.

With the conclusion of hearings on the Wagner housing bill, a few general principles which should control the Government's activities in this field stand out clearly. The need for both public and private housing programs has been clearly established, in spite of the unreasonable attitude evinced by a few real estate operators. And the line which should separate subsidized slum reclamation from home construction as a private industry has been rather definitely drawn.

The hearings brought forth an emphatic demand for decentralization of any housing program undertaken. Experience of the PWA has conclusively proved that the Government cannot successfully assume the role of landlord. Officials, as well as private housing experts, joined in the recommendation that subsidies be made available only through local governments. To this the Committee for Economic Recovery adds the reasonable recommendation that Federal subsidies should be supplemented by State and city funds. Only thus will local authorities have a direct interest in economical construction and efficient management of subsidized housing projects.

One other point stands out sharply: subsidies should be limited to slum-reclamation projects. That safeguard against competition with private housing activities was specially emphasized by Secretary Perkins. As the bill now stands, it would permit the use of Federal funds in the housing of families with incomes up to $2,500 in some areas. Obviously, that would jeopardize its two principal objectives, for encouragement to private building (and consequently employment) would be lessened, and benefits would go to the relatively well-situated at the expense of the underprivileged slum dwellers.

In this connection another important principle has been stressed by the Committee for Economic Recovery. Its public-housing program, released during the Wagner bill hearings, would permit only rent subsidies. These annual grants would be fixed by law and would extend over a long period of years, thus avoiding any large immediate outlays. Great Britain's program of slum replacement is operating on this principle with remarkable success. As contrasted with the policy of making outright grants for construction of low-rental dwellings, its advantages are readily apparent.

No argument should be needed to secure the amendment of that section of the bill permitting Federal "demonstration projects." Under that clause the patent blunders of the PWA housing division might be enacted all over again.

Numerous difficulties will undoubtedly be encountered in getting the program under way if initiative is left to the States and cities, for many local governments do not have the authority to engage in public housing. Yet that is the only reasonable course to follow. Too many short-cuts have already led only into disappointing blind alleys. The current need is for a permanent program to be developed slowly on a secure foundation.

The excellent advice which has been made available to the Senate Labor Committee portends fairly extensive amendment of the Wagner bill. As a result, it may emerge as a genuine slum-reclamation measure, instead of a rather careless grant of authority which slops over into the field of private construction. If the committee is wise enough to restrict loans and grants to local public agencies, agreeing to build only for indigent groups, the way will be prepared for private industry to launch a major home-building program with private capital, as has been done so successfully in England.

Toscanini's Farewell.

For no Sultan of Swat, no Grandee of the Gloves, no hyacinth-curled matinee idol did 5,000 New Yorkers wait all Wednesday in a curb-side queue, and storm the gate when the ticket office opened. Athletes, crooners and movie stars may assemble their hordes of devotees. But they provide no parallel with the spectacle of 5,000 people lined up for hours in the fond hope of securing one of a few dozen standing-room admissions. And this, apparently, to see nothing but a little, gray-haired man conducting an orchestral concert.

To be sure, it was the farewell appearance of Arturo Toscanini with the New York Philharmonic Symphony. For 11 years that genius of the podium—slight, unassuming and modest to a degree—had led this orchestra through repeated triumphs of discipline and skill. Now, deciding to retire, he would offer one last program. And New York came forward with a rush which astonished the most experienced of Carnegie Hall functionaries. The house, at $200 a box and $10 a seat, was sold out four hours after the concert was announced, while on the day itself the crowd almost fought with the police reserves for a chance at the scanty standing room.

This is tribute, sincere and spontaneous, to Signor Toscanini. But he, who scorns all publicity, who resists speech-making and declines interviews, and who hews to his one line of musical interpretation, would be the first to see the deeper meaning. "I am only a conductor," Toscanini has always said when honors are pressed upon him. And as a conductor, leading his orchestra and transmitting through it the warmth and glory of a score to the listening ear, he would recognize in that crowd and that ovation only the great hunger of humanity for the inspiration and the solace of great music.

That hunger exists in New York, plainly enough; it is likewise here in Washington, as in every city where intelligent human beings congregate. That the satisfaction of this keen want should be denied by any purely secondary difficulties would be intolerable. For the National Symphony Orchestra the moral of Toscanini's farewell philharmonic concert is very clear.

That Expanding Deficit.

In his January budget message President Roosevelt assured the country that the finances of the Government were in "better condition than at any time in the past seven years." The deficit for the current fiscal year, he said, would amount to much less than originally anticipated. But the President's satisfaction with "this great improvement in the fiscal outlook" was short-lived. Yesterday Secretary Morgenthau informed the Senate Finance Committee that the deficit for the current fiscal year would probably reach the appalling figure of $5,966,000,000, and would approximate $2,675,000,000 in the fiscal year 1937.

The superficial explanation of this amazing expansion in the deficiency estimates is simple enough. Since President Roosevelt made his computation Congress has voted cash payment of the bonus and the Supreme Court has invalidated the processing taxes. If payments on bonus account are allocated to the current year and placed at the full cash value of the redeemable bonds, $2,237,000,000 would be added to the deficit estimate of $3,234,000,000. It would be further increased by about $495,000,000 through loss of processing taxes.

Thus, by a very simple process of addition, Secretary Morgenthau attains his record figure. And thus a bewildered public, having been led by the soaring optimism of the President to look for steady improvement in our fiscal position, is now plunged into a gloom which the Secretary of the Treasury paints as black as possible.

Secretary Morgenthau is patently eager to secure senatorial support for the reimposition of processing taxes. Consequently he presents a most forbidding picture of the present budgetary position of the Government. It is bad enough without deliberate efforts to shock the public by assigning the entire cost of the bonus payments to the current fiscal year. Those payments will, in fact, extend over a considerable period of time and will certainly fall short of the maximum outlay that might be made.

Since these extraordinary payments have to be covered eventually, it may not seem particularly important whether they are added to the deficit for the present fiscal year or "tacked on" to the deficit of the following year. But it is highly important that the people should be acquainted with the facts and supplied with official estimates that are designed to reveal the true position of the Treasury insofar as that is possible.

Instead of presenting a clear factual picture, however, our public officials have acquired a habit of varying the estimates to suit their convenience or the political purposes of the moment. Unquestionably the chaotic state of New Deal finances makes it possible to indulge in amazing juggling feats. Nevertheless, it is a dangerous game.

Additional revenues far in excess of returns from the processing taxes advocated by Secretary Morgenthau are urgently required. But the need can be demonstrated without trying to make the situation look any worse than it is in reality.

What Price Malthus?

W. L. McAtee, Biological Survey, Dept. of Agric., in the Scientific Monthly.

Superficially considered, the Malthusian principles seem very impressive, but they do not bear analysis. It is manifest throughout nature, and even in the highly artificial case of humankind, that populations are not necessarily limited by the means of subsistence, and that they do not always increase where the means of subsistence increase. Malthus mentioned but did not dwell upon limitations of space. These are important, and in a broad sense controlling, but they also do not ordinarily depend upon subsistence.

Malthus' postulated geometric increase of population is not the rule in nature; it is merely a potentiality, rarely realized. Populations usually are checked far short of a subsistence limitation. Automatic restriction by lowering of birth rate in response to density and by a great variety of self-limiting phenomena, together with sweeping indiscriminate destruction of immature forms, involving little or no actual competition either among themselves or with adults, seem to be the principal factors involved in maintaining the stability of populations. These facts leave so little basis for the Darwinian theory of natural selection, largely inspired by the mistaken postulates of Malthus, that it is difficult to understand its popularity.

The more we learn about organic populations, the more it seems that there are automatic tendencies toward the preservation of numerical relationships. This automatic regulation is not rigid, the balance of nature is fluctuating, but it is always striving for equilibrium.

The Republican Nominee.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Until recently, it looked as though the issues between the two major political parties were to assume form and substance; that they would be clear-cut and plainly to be seen and understood by the average voter previous to the convening of the national conventions, but the advent of Senator William E. Borah upon the Republican scene has complicated the situation for that party.

However, the recent primaries held in Wisconsin, Illinois and Nebraska indicate beyond the shadow of a doubt that the Senator from Idaho would not stand the ghost of a chance for election to the Presidency if pitted against the incumbent.

It would seem that the only substantial hope for the success of the Republican Party in the coming November election rests on that party cutting free from all issues except one—that of Americanism. It must plant itself firmly upon the Federal Constitution, not in a narrow bigoted sense but in a broad and liberal one.

In using that much abused word "liberal," I do so in its basic significance, such as the Constitution employs it when it declares for liberty of thought, speech and action, and wisely provides that such liberty shall be regulated by law so that its exercise by individual citizens shall not permit it to encroach upon the equal rights of others. In fact, only by holding that the right to liberty must have a limited restriction can genuine liberty be enjoyed by man. That was the doctrine as laid down by Jefferson, advocated by Lincoln, and emphasized in speech and action by Theodore Roosevelt.

The Republican Party must not put forward as its candidate for the Presidency one who stands first on one foot and then on the other. Such a man would go down in defeat. It must not nominate a "pussy-footer," one who purrs and smiles, looks wise but does nothing, because he would not have one chance in a hundred against the smiling face, purring voice and captivating manner of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. It must not offer the Nation a candidate tainted with "New Dealism," because such a man would be no more than an imitator of the original "New Dealer" and would suffer the just consequences befalling all spurious imitations.

Believing, as do a vast majority of Republicans, that the basic principles upon which the "New Deal" has been constructed are unwise, impracticable and opposed to our existing form of Government, we must cut off its roots and destroy its malignant growth before it destroys our republic.

Culture By Conquest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No one can deny the force of your "Culture by Edict," but you rather fail to map the strategy which Mussolini ought to follow. When you aver that Rome did not inspire culture by conquest, you overlook the solid historic fact that Rome did achieve almost all her art by the deliberate overruning of Greece.

Bringing back the Peloponnesians as slaves, her soldiers sold the captives all over the place and thereby, without conscious volition, humanized and adorned the Roman Empire with Greek art and philosophy. Whatever beauty Rome ever had she owed to a military expedition: the Roman genius was military and legal, and not even her possession of Virgil and Catullus could match her infiltration by the conquered.

Perhaps you imply a similar infiltration into contemporary Roman civilization by the primitive African art now so esteemed by effete critics. Surely, however, it would be better for Mussolini to cast his sword about for the invasion of a country equal in heritage to ancient Greece! No such country exists today, but the Mighty Magister might imagine one from his own inner consciousness.

One priceless incident of the military mind has come down from the Roman conquest of Greece. A subaltern reported to the Roman general that some of the footsloggers were shooting dice on a Grecian painting, which, by the bye, was an ancient one. Whereupon Roman efficiency replied, tell the men if they damage the thing, they'll have to replace it!

Arlington County Taxes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Commissioner of Revenue for Arlington County announced in Sunday's papers that out of 20,000 registered tax payers, only 10,000 have paid their 1935 taxes due last December 6, which means that 10,000 Arlington citizens are now being assessed 5 per cent penalty on overdue taxes, and if these taxes are not paid by June 16, an additional 1 per cent is added to the penalty already in force from last December 6. This does not take into account the delinquent taxes which have been due the county for several years, collection of which is desired, but problematical in many instances.

At this time returns are being filed for collection of the 1936 taxes due about December 1.

Notwithstanding these facts, the judge of the Circuit Court of Arlington has recently entered an order for a special election on May 12, to decide a bond issue of $250,000 besides election costs accruing therefrom.

This action was brought about by a petition circulated among special groups and signed by about 3,000 persons. Therefore the citizens of Arlington County are forced to face the deplorable fact that we now have a county Government by petition instead of by Constitution. What is going to be done about it?

Higher Education.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We hear a good deal nowadays about there being too many young men and women "spending four years and hundreds of dollars striving for a bachelor's degree." The latest suggestion along this line comes from Dr. William P. Few, president of Duke University, partially concurred in by The Post editorial of April 27.

Dr. Few says stricter selection of students, higher tuition fees and more intensive training of promising youths will help the situation. With the last suggestion hardly anyone will take issue, provided instructors can judge which at that early age are the most promising students.

One who has observed young people from any but the most narrow point of view must realize that making the highest grades in preparatory school or college is no criterion from which one may select the most promising or generally intelligent student.

The second point that Dr. Few offers, that of raising tuition fees, unfortunately is not accompanied by any co-ordinate proposal to offset the discrimination this would be against persons of moderate or low incomes. The very thought is altogether un-American.

For many of our youth a more specialized training than the college academic course affords undoubtedly would mean a fairer start in life. But educators have failed so far to devise a type of school of higher learning where this specialized study may be pursued and which would carry with its diploma the same prestige and afford the same opportunities of social development that are afforded those who attend a college or university.

Certainly education is not an exact science nor a mathematical formula that remains fixed. It is a growing and ever progressing thing in which all thinking people have a part. In a democracy it is intended for all who want it. Any other idea would be as stupid as a return to the Middle Ages when only the clergy were educated.

Debate On Park Alterations Continues.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The lengthy lecture by C. B. R., in The Post of April 26, completely misses the point of the matter. Nobody objects to the removal and replacement of outmoded and dilapidated buildings; nobody wishes to keep an old house because some famous man lived in it.

What has aroused the wrath of the people is the wholesale destruction of the small parks all over the city. Of course they were run down and shabby, and in need of a going over, but surely it was not necessary to tear them to pieces and make them over into something resembling a draftsman's nightmare. They dug out the lilacs because lilacs do not grow well in this climate. Evidently the lilacs did not know that, for they have been growing and blooming for years.

The triangle at Pennsylvania and Eighteenth is typical of what has been done all around. It was a shabby little place, and the walks and benches were in need of renewal, but there were lovely lilacs and other shrubbery, and the park had been a breathing spot for apartment and rooming house dwellers for a long time. Now, down the center is a concrete walk, which, as one writer has well said is "as wide as the Defense highway." In the middle of the park is an enormous circle of concrete, the use of which nobody knows. The point of the triangle is cut off, and naturally, covered with concrete. The general effect is a huge expanse of concrete, bordered by some very small grass plots, or we hope they will some day be grass plots. The whole is surrounded by great concrete curbs that add to the general feeling of heaviness. It is hard to imagine sitting in such a place when the mercury is up around one hundred. C. B. R. says, "Let the city become more beautiful." If that be beauty, I say let it remain ugly.

I cannot see any connection between the vandalism in the parks, and the modernization in lower Pennsylvania avenue, which was necessary and proper. There are more eyesores that should be removed. I am writing this at the risk of being classed in with the Sob Sisters and Sentimental Brethren. Also, I am signing my name.

B. A. KELLEY.
Washington, April 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At a recent meeting of the West End Citizens' Association the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, that this association thank The Washington Post for its splendid editorial campaign to preserve the parks of Washington for the people of Washington.

ALMON C. BARBER.
Secretary.
Washington, April 22.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. J. Winstead, by fine irony, hits the nail squarer than a ton of righteous indignation and heated disapproval from irritated citizens, or residents.

"Concrete horizons" describes the new park scheme to perfection—is perfectly indicative of the wrong idea imported, "approved" and inflicted upon a hapless populace.

Each park merits a title of its own, just as it has had wished upon it a shrunken personality, as "Regimented Pastures," for east of the Lincoln Memorial and "Blighted Acres," to cover almost any other case you can name.

DAN K. MILLER.
Mount Rainier, Md. April 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: C. W. Allen, of Lanham, Md., has this remark to make in your issue of April 28:

Why cement? Someone is profiting heavily from the laying of these unnecessarily wide and heavy walks, these acres of concrete, heavy enough to bear trucks.

May I make reply that our only salvation lies in a Republican in the White House who will bring with him an official heavily interested in gravel. Failing this political upheaval, concrete will continue to flow over Washington as lava did over Pompeii and Herculaneum in the year A. D. 79.

Gen. Van Ness' Home.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of April 24 is the picture of a memorial tablet in the north court of the Postoffice Building. If that was the location of a home of Gen. John P. Van Ness, it should have been qualified, lest your readers get the erroneous impression that it was the location of his palatial residence near the log cabin of his father-in-law, David Burns, one of the original land proprietors of the District of Columbia.

The cabin and the mansion stood near each other on the present site of the Pan-American Building. I visited both buildings many times in the 80's. At that time the mansion had been converted into a tennis clubhouse. The buildings were just north of the stone lockhouse which still stands at Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue. Query: Did Gen. Van Ness ever have a home on the site of the Postoffice Department?

Taking Tea With H. G.

Post Office, Friday.

ITS a long while since this columnist took tea at H. G. Wells' house—so long ago that he was then living in Hampstead. Lately, the only times we've taken tea with him, the drinking has been done in Washington or New York—and, on the most recent occasion, H. G.'s beverage really was tea; it wasn't whiskey-and-soda.

So when, the other day, Mrs. Gilbert Phelps Hall—now of Washington—happened to mention to us that she and her husband had taken tea with H. G. in London while he was working on his pictured "Things To Come," we asked her for details.

And here's her written reply.

* * *

"Four-thirty," she writes: "the taxi careened along Baker street; block after block was clicked off. Everyone in London was rushing some place: it was tea time. Breasting such traffic, I was sure we'd be late—and if Mr. Wells were as meticulous as his precise, Lilliputian handwriting indicated, that would never do.

* * *

"Inside—up the elevator—down a long hall, almost as bleak as a hospital's—and we were at Mr. Wells' door. A white-coated butler, a copy of Esquire on the reception-hall table: Mr. Wells prides himself on his familiarity with America; if you mention the White House, he can tell you in a jiffy in just what year 'some barbarians' practically destroyed that building; he says he reads the New Yorker—'to keep up on Americanisms.'

* * *

"He was most informal and loquacious. From the minute we entered the room where he sat on the arm of one of the big chairs, he never stopped talking—always interestingly, usually historically, sometimes provocatively, and occasionally humorously.

* * *

"There were four in the party: the host, a Russian baroness, and we Americans. One of the Americans had whiskey-and-soda with the baroness; but Mr. Wells and I took tea. It was weak tea—the English change that adjective, in that connection, to 'feeble.' And Mr. Wells talked about his screen play.

* * *

"'I'm probably the only author in the world,' he said, 'who chooses his own actors and actresses and directs the production, too.'

"It was hard work. But you could see that he was enjoying it.

* * *

"For Hollywood, Mr. Wells apparently had nothing but respect. He is well acquainted with the place and was at that time planning another trip there to see what was being done in the way of technical developments.

"Working there was, however, another matter:

"'Oh,' said he, 'I could never work with those people. They know so much!'

* * *

"Talk of the architecture of the future as envisaged in 'Things to Come' led to talk of architecture in general. One of us had just returned from Salisbury and spoke of its 'magnificent cathedral.'

"'Oh, that little Cockney cathedral!' Wells exclaimed. 'You know, it was built only about five hundred years ago.'

* * *

"He didn't see any reason for architects always to erect buildings—why not dig buildings now and then?

"'Why,' he demanded, in the high-pitched, thin voice, 'should buildings shoot up toward Heaven? Why shouldn't we have enormous caves with modern interiors and air-conditioning?'

"'Would you,' somebody thereupon asked, 'do away with architects?'

"He snapped back: 'You said exactly what I thought you would say. But why,' he continued, 'should architects put all their attention on the exterior of buildings? Why isn't the interior more important?'

"And who could say 'No' to him?" . . .

Mrs. Hall thought that Chiltern Court, being of a date earlier than that of the World War, was hardly the place in which the author of "Things to Come" ought to live. And Wells agreed wth her. But, though he was going to move to Hanover Square, the house into which he was moving was a full hundred years of age.

"Don't you think it's a pity," he asked, "that a person as modern as I am has to live in an old-fashioned house?"

It was inevitable—oh, well, we suppose it was inevitable!—that somebody at this tea should ask H. G. about the chances of unknown authors. His answer was:

"I once wrote and published a book anonymously—and it was one of my most successful books."

The Lottery Proposals.

The Postoffice Department has outlawed several ingenious attempts to outsmart the law against the sale of lottery tickets. So presently the law itself will be attacked again in Congress by statesmen who have gathered great stacks of imported and domestic figures attempting to show that the national Government is paying at least a billion dollars a year for the luxury of a principle.

A billion a year is the sum that used to be mentioned as the amount which the Treasury would surely receive from the liquor business upon the repeal of prohibition, and I feel a little bashful about asking how this year's billion is coming along, for up to now the boon of repeal has not been apparent in the tax bills. Moreover, the farmer who was going to buy a new car and new store clothes for the family all around with the money which he was going to receive for his barley, hops and malt, thus starting a happy circle of prosperity, seems to have looked to other sources for his revenue.

In certain respects repeal has been a beautiful success, for the corner saloon is back in New York and Chicago, with other saloons between the corners, and it is a fine American privilege to screw the top off a bottle of square-face and drink defiance to the Anti-Saloon League in plain view of the cops in Indianapois, Ind.

But the taxes have given no perceptible relief, and the great masses of bottle molders, label printers and stickers, cappers, salesmen, truck drivers, cork designers, coopers, bartenders and bouncers who were to be returned to honest, if not necessarily useful, toil have made no impression on the problem of unemployment. Probably they were all employed already in the speakeasies and bootleg plants and merely carried on with their work as before.

* * * *

With the disappointment of repeal for a guide and warning, however, it might be well to view with skepticism the enthusiastic predictions of those who would place lottery tickets on sale in every postoffice and substation if Congress would only say the word. The principle at stake is hardly worth what it costs if repeal of the present lottery laws would bring in a billion a year or possibly two or three. After all, we have lots of principles, and we have sacrificed better ones for less.

Most of us think of prostitution as no fit business from which to derive dividends, but the Treasury was not at all squeamish about that when it came to a question of punishing Al Capone for his failure to shower down his income tax. I believe Mr. Capone included prostitution among his many interests and that some of the money which he didn't pay into the national kitty represented his percentage of the wages of sin and shame. If the Government does not draw the line at prostitution or extortion, which seems to have been another of Capone's works, then it would be a foolish affectation to spurn the receipts from an honest lottery of, by and for the people.

* * * *

But those who have visited the lottery countries have not been favorably impressed by the results. All over Continental Europe, in Cuba and Central America the lottery is a familiar institution, and the more urgent the salesmen and saleswomen as they canvass the crowds in the cafes and on the streets the more ragged and scabby the condition of the people.

In France, where the lottery was a great monetary help to an embarrassed treasury, the draw was conducted with great care and remarkable dignity. Yet fraud crept in, and, even though the frauds have been kept down reasonably well, France is not exactly to be envied by the United States and England, which still forbid lotteries.

The Germans and Italians have lotteries, but the novelty soon wore off, and people nowadays either ignore them or invest sparingly.

The Cuban lottery is familiar to all American tourists and business visitors to the island, but persons of experience shun the tickets in a belief that Americans are not allowed to win under any circumstances. And certainly the appearance of the Cuban people is no tempting testimonial for the lottery as a method of improving the condition of a country and its inhabitants.

I have made more or less merry at the expense of the Consul General of the Irish Free State in New York by citing the fact that the tickets on the Irish Sweep are peddled in this country with the obvious connivance of his government, contrary to our laws.

* * *

However, the Irish Sweep has a fine reputation for honesty and prompt payment without discrimination against the citizens of other countries, and if we must have one theirs would be a model worth investigating. Their trouble is that they can't spend away the profits as fast as they accrue. Yet Ireland, too, with the best sweep in the world, is not to be envied by the United States, and I suggest that we ought to save the lottery as the last baby to be thrown to the wolves of adversity.

Wiman, in his review of the firm's report for the fiscal year ended October 31, 1935, attributed stimulation of the farm equipment industry to "natural economic post-depression readjustment," and said the demand for farm machinery "should continue for a reasonable period of time into the future, unless this trend should be revised by a serious drop in the prices of farm commodities."

The Politics Of Peace

French Proposal Of An Inter-European Army Suggests Revision Of League To Make Covenant Universal, Not Continental.

By Livingston Hartley.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

While the French plan for a new Locarno settlement is not receiving much attention at the moment, the idea involved is being widely discussed. In essentials the plan represents an attempt to solve the European problem by European machinery. Its central features are a European commission inside the League of Nations, and far-reaching continental, or regional security, guarantees implemented by armed force.

This plan, if it ever materializes in concrete form, will open new vistas in international relations in two separate directions: first, in Europe, by providing a firmer foundation for continental peace; second, outside Europe, by encouraging a new development of the League of Nations.

The central purpose of the League is the preservation of peace, not merely in Europe, but throughout the world. The European peace problem, however, differs fundamentally from the problem of peace in other continents. Europe is a thickly settled area in which frontiers are well defined. It is highly industrialized, economically interdependent, and closely studded with great cities, soldiers, guns, tanks and bombing planes. Its national frictions are rendered acute and dangerous by these conditions, so dangerous that another war in Europe might cripple civilization in several great countries which have built our modern world.

As President Washington recognized a century and a half ago, "Europe has a set of primary interests." These interests were the principal consideration of the men who drew up the League of Nations Covenant, and designed it, in the light of the lessons of 1914, to prevent another European war. Since that time, however, 16 years of practical experience have made many people doubt the international machinery best suited to Europe is similarly suited to other regions of the world.

Europe More "Mature" Than Asia Or Americas.

Europe is far more "mature" internationally than Asia or the Americas. Mutual economic dependence and the fear of war make European nations ready to limit their sovereignty by accepting far-reaching obligations to preserve regional stability and peace. Europe is prepared to advance far more rapidly than other continents toward international integration.

The United States, which needs no outside assistance today to protect its own security, was unwilling in 1920 to accept the obligations of the League Covenant. The British Empire, more exposed to danger but partially detached from Europe, joined the League but refused to ratify the more automatic provisions of the Geneva protocol of 1920. Czechoslovakia, vulnerably situated in Central Europe, welcomed the protocol eagerly, and has long favored the creation of an international army to preserve European peace.

Certain provisions of the League Covenant, designed primarily for Europe, have not proved practicable as yet in other parts of the world. Article 10 of the Covenant is a mutual guarantee of frontiers, and Article 16 a mutual obligation to prevent the successful violation of those frontiers by joint force. These two principles would seem essential to the organization of European peace, and form indeed, the basis of the present French plan. But are they equally applicable to Asia and the Western Hemisphere? Let us "look at the record."

Covenant Was Ignored In Chaco And Manchuria.

These two principles have been violated in Manchuria, in the Chaco, and, most flagrantly of all, in Ethiopia. The European members of the League were unwilling to employ the sanctions of Article 16 in Asia and South America. The milder provisions of Article 16 were put into effect for the first time, in the African dispute, where not only geography but the circumstances of the Italian invasion made action by the League a more decisive precedent for future action in Europe.

The record suggests that the builders of the League went too far in applying the principles of Articles 10 and 16 to the entire world, since the practical result today is the absence of the United States and the withdrawal of Japan from a League designed to be universal.

If the League has failed on several occasions to fulfill these two guarantees in the last 16 years, it has succeeded beyond expectation in carrying out other provisions of the Covenant.

The League has settled over 30 international disputes since 1920 under Article 11, many of which contained real danger of war. Its usefulness in this function may be traced primarily to the meeting of responsible statesmen around a table, and the opportunity this meeting provides for the adoption of a common front.

The success of the French peace plan, and the constitution of a European commission with more adequate means to guarantee European peace, might open a new chapter in the development of the League. If the primary responsibility for European peace were to be relegated to the proposed commission, the League might lose its present preoccupation with Europe, and revise its machinery to meet more effectively the needs of the rest of the world.

One means to that end would be the modification of Covenant provisions designed for Europe which have proved in practice inapplicable to other continents. Such a change might strengthen rather than weaken the League as an effective agency in world affairs, the more so if it meant that the League would become universal.

Universality Demands United States Co-operation.

Universality would require the inclusion of the United States. Looking back in our own history, we see that the controlling objections of the Senate to membership in the League in 1919 were the far-reaching guarantees of Articles 10 and 16. We also see that the principle of consultation for the preservation of peace embodied in Article 11 formed a prominent feature of the Democratic platform of 1932.

Certain basic changes in the League Covenant might make universality possible. The main emphasis, for example, might be placed on Article 11, which has worked so well for 16 years. As experience has proved the guarantee of frontiers contained in Article 10 inapplicable, outside Europe, the positive obligation to "preserve" such frontiers might be removed from this article, and only the negative obligation to "respect" them left. Or Article 10 might be replaced by the text of the Kellogg Pact.

The sanctions principle also might be modified in a League no longer primarily concerned with the European problem. In dealing with the Far East, South America or Africa there would seem to be a real advantage in avoiding strict formulas, and in leaving joint action to the unfettered decision of the powers meeting at Geneva. That is what happens anyway, so the fact might as well be admitted.

Experience has proved that the prevention of war is political rather than juridical, and that in regions where the most vital interests of the great powers are not threatened by an outbreak of war, effective sanctions are impossible.

Recent outbreaks seem to indicate that smooth and rapid co-operation between the United States and the League Council is a far more important element in the maintenance of peace in regions remote from Europe than the legal obligations of the League members. The lack of such co-operation was largely responsible for the failure to restrain or restrict Japanese action in Manchuria in its early stages, and our preference for a unilateral policy left us "out on a limb" as the target for Japanese hostility. In the same way, uncorrelated peace moves by the United States and the League helped to delay for three years any successful effort to stop the Chaco war.

It would seem to many observers a set-back to world progress if the two main guarantees of the principal international charter were to be weakened or eliminated. Such a change in the League Covenant would certainly constitute an undeniable retreat on the juridical front. This retreat, however, might well prove wise strategy if it led to improved political co-operation by all the great powers in a universal League

Liberty in Peril, U. S. Bar Chief Tells Chamber

Ransom Says Tendency Is Toward Foreign Ideas of Government.

Picturing the growth of a tendency for "the past 20 years," which would result in throttling individual American liberty, William L. Ransom, of New York City, president of the American Bar Association, last night told the final session of the twenty-fourth annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce:

"European ideas of arbitrary government have already been taken up here by active minorities, and insistently and incessantly there goes forward the agitation of ideas and criticisms, the spreading of prejudices and resentments, the holding out of the lure that easy money and redistributions of property are now barred by our Constitution—all for the purpose of inducing a national mood of ready acquiescence in radical change in our Constitution and mode of Government."

Specifies Actions.

Addressing a glittering gathering at the final banquet meeting of the entire assembly, in the Willard Hotel ballroom, Ransom was heartily applauded as he discussed the growth of this "tendency to dictatorship." He illustrated with a list of actions as follows:

"The conduct of legislative investigations in such a manner as to destroy reputations, invade privacy, treat the innocent as guilty of offenses, which can be revealed by ransacking private and personal affairs, and deny all opportunity for a fair hearing;

"To whittle away personal rights and liberties supposed to be guaranteed by the Constitution;

"To applaud . . . the arbitrary use of powers of government . . . whatever directed against those who are supposed to rich, conspicuous or successful;

"To use the resources of government in vast and skillful propaganda in behalf of the policies of the Government;

"Destroys Opportunity."

"To manifest and incite impatience and hostility as to the courts whenever they tend to restrain arbitrary action by Government;

"To drive private capital away from private enterprise, prevent individual savings and investments, and destroy industrial freedom and opportunity, so that ambitious youth can find opportunity chiefly as servants of the Government;

"To strengthen the eager desire of many people to control the lives and property of other people;

"To establish the authority of a growing intolerance which seeks to deny freedom of opinion and freedom of speech, and to intimidate all opposition by means unfair and while these tendencies have been at repugnant."

Specifically, Ransom charged that work for years, "only their recent acceleration may be new."

He said such actions would lead to dictatorships such as those of Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin.

Cites Attacks on Court.

In particular attack on attempts to abridge the powers of the courts to enforce the Constitution, he said:

"These things may seem extreme and impossible to us now (referring to possible laws invading individual freedom but they do not seem impossible now to liberty-loving men herded in concentration camps of Germany, or to those who languish on the torrid slopes of the Lipari Islands, or to those business and professional men whose blood stained the snows of Arctic Siberia."

At a luncheon meeting earlier, Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, addressing the entire group, scored subversive activities in the United States, denouncing attempts by Communists to reach their ends in educational institutions and by "boring in" in labor and fraternal groups.

At the general afternoon session Roger D. Lapham, president of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Co., of San Francisco, had frankly admitted the failure of the steamship companies to handle the labor situation.

Sibley Re-elected.

His address, an outline of the labor situation on the Pacific Coast resulting from successive strikes of seamen, longshoremen and other groups, discussed at length the implications of the admitted failure to control labor activities there, and ended with a prediction that unless this "definite trend" is shortly curbed, "you may be faced in your industry with what we have faced and are facing on the Pacific Coast in the shipping industry."

Harper Sibley, Rochester, N. Y., large-scale farmer and banker, was re-elected president of the Chamber in accordance with Chamber tradition that the presidency be retained for at least two one-year terms, and his designation has been predicted for several weeks.

Vice presidents also were re-elected as follows:

David F. Edwards, president, Saco-Lowell Shops, Boston; T. Guy Woolford, chairman, Retail Sredit Co., Atlanta, Ga.; Felix M. McWhirter, president, Peoples State Bank, Indianapolis, Ind.; George W. Holmes, president, First National Bank, Lincoln, Nebr.; Joseph W. Evans, Evans & Co., Houston, Tex., and Philip J. Fay, Nichols & Fay, San Francisco.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., April 30.—There's one thing about the apple blossom festival that its queen, Cornelia Anne Larus, of Richmond, does not like.

Because of her selection as ruler of the two-day celebration, her friends at home call her "Queenie."

"I hope they don't keep that up or I'll regret I ever was queen," she said today. "I could'nt go through the rest of my life with a nickname like that. I just don't answer when anyone calls me 'Queenie,' but it hasn't seemed to stop them."

May Day

Old Songs And New.

The very name of this month brings a smile of happiness and a glow in the heart. May is beautiful in itself and even more beautiful in its promise. If ever a month has in it the very spirit of youth, it is May. When I was a small boy in the West Middle District School in Hartford, Conn., our excellent music teacher was Irving Emerson, and the school song-book was certainly one of the best ever compiled. It was called "The Song Land."

One of the songs was "Oh, the glorious month of May!" and we sang it with terrific gusto. Another song was "Oh, merry goes the time when the heart is young," where one of the lines was "Then every month is May," or something like that.

If one happens to be in Paris in Maytime, when the horse-chestnut trees are all in bloom, it is interesting and delightful to observe how the season is reflected in the faces of the people on the streets. They beam with happiness.

* * * *

From the earliest dawn of literature in England, the coming of May has been celebrated with festivities. Here are some May songs, modern and old.

By Bliss Carman:

Here's to the day when it is May
And care as light as a feather,
When your little shoes and my big boots
Go tramping over the heather.

Oh! that we two were Maying
Down the stream of the soft spring breeze:
Like children with violets playing
In the shade of the whispering trees.

By Bayard Taylor:

When May, with cowslip-braided locks,
Walks through the land of green attire.

By Milton:

Hail, bounteous May, that dost inspire
Mirth and youth, and warm desire!
Woods and groves are of thy dressing,
Hill and dale doth boast thy blessing!
Thus we salute thee with our early song,
And welcome thee, and wish thee long.

And from the sublime to the ridiculous, there is an old west of England rhyme:

If you would the doctor pay,
Leave your flannels off in May.

* * * *

In England this is still good advice; a man told me he always took off his under-flannels on May 31, and put them on again June 1. But in America where the houses are warmed, I would suggest this original rhyme:

If your life wants cheerful annals,
Never wear your winter flannels.

Hull Warns of War Threat tribute by producing less wealth as the years go by."

Secretary Hull's address was straight-forward and unequivocal in outlining the serious situation confronting the Administration. He said, referring to his speech before the same body a year ago:

"I described to you the pressing needs of this country and of the world in the domain of international commercial relations; the difficulties that stand in the way of meeting these needs, and the dangers which are inherent in failure to solve the vital problems involved. The 12 months that have elapsed have brought these needs into still sharper relief.

"Trade Collapse."

"It becomes increasingly clear that no nation can achieve a full measure of stable economic recovery so long as international trade remains in the state of collapse. The whole post-war period has been characterized by an ever-increasing drift toward economic nationalism, enormously intensified during the past six years.

Stating that vast unemployment, economic distress, the impairment of financial values and other results of the policy of self-containment then breed internal strife leading to "tyrannical dictatorship," with "international friction, fear, envy and resentment" destructive of world peace, as additional by-products, the Secretary said:

"Each step in the armament race bristles with new menace of economic disorganization and destruction, multiplies fear for the future, dislocates normal constructive processes of economic life, and leads to greater and greater impoverishment of the world's population."

The white-haired Secretary stated firmly his conviction that "the world has adequate remedies at its disposal for overcoming the virulent disease which is now so widespread," referring to nationalism, which he later termed "the psychological madness that makes possible internal and external strife."

These included an attack on a "wide front" on the "major maladjustments" combining a "domestic and international program" in order to develop "expanding world prosperity" and domestic recovery, he said.

In outlining the Government's attack on the problem he said it was "based fundamentally on what to us is an indisputable assumption—that our domestic recovery can be neither complete nor durable unless our surplus-creating branches of production succeed in regaining at least a substantial portion of their lost foreign markets."

It was this very point that Sargent refused to grant in his address during the day, as he insisted on domestic recovery from within by concentrating chiefly on upbuilding the domestic market for domestic goods, minimizing the advantages of foreign trade and stressing the excess of imports over exports.

Hull, scourging trade barriers such as the Smoot-Hawley tariff act, which he called "that ill-starred action," said that the latter bill "helped to set into motion a vicious spiral of retaliation and counter-retaliation, and to start a race for a forcible contraction of international trade on a stupendous scale."

He said:

"The nations of the world must retrace their steps from that supreme folly."

He then discussed the mechanics of the trade agreements, how they were carefully planned and discussed over long periods, with the interests of all parties concerned taken into consideration.

He added:

"In such rehabilitation lies the greatest single hope that the world may be spared the tragedy of another destructive upheaval," and concluded:

"Great business organizations, like yours, have given us invaluable encouragement. With such inspiration to guide us, we shall go forward in our effort to bring peace and prosperity out of political tension and economic distress."

Harms Farmers.

Sargent, in denouncing the large volume of imports of foodstuffs to this country, said:

"It cannot be denied that every bushel of wheat, rye, oats, barley or corn; every pound of pork, beef, or butter, imported into this country, puts American dollars into the pockets of foreign farmers that ought to go into the pockets of our own farmers. When these imports reach such large proportions they necessarily add to the idle acreage in America, subtract from the income of American farmers, and decrease the purchasing power which the American farmer would otherwise have to spend with American industry.

"The importance of protecting the American market for the American farmer is not only because of the increased direct payment that would go to the American farmer for his products, but because this policy would react to the benefit of our entire economic structure."

or diminish the jurisdiction of the Federal courts; or to substitute the legislative will for the discretion of any Federal court."

Agriculture—The Chamber, after recommending joint committee efforts to outline a policy to protect agriculture in domestic markets and permit the "continued use of reciprocal trade agreements" advocated a "complete investigation of the effects of the trade agreements in generalizing concessions to other countries."

Foreign trade—The Chamber, asking "redoubled attention" to foreign policy problems, urged stabilization by international efforts to settle foreign exchange and reduce the present business "hazards."

Fair competition in distribution—The Chamber stressed that "More efficient distribution methods and the elimination of unfair practices will best serve the public interest and will ultimately produce the soundest prosperity for all engaged in business." A special committee will be appointed to study technical aspects of the problems.

Residential construction—Reporting an "encouraging renewal of activity in residential building," the Chamber urged termination of emergency measures, such as the Home Owners Loan Corporation, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Mortgage Co., and direct building activities of the Federal Government, and asked encouragement of activities of the Federal Home Loan Bank system and the Federal Housing Administration.

Federal taxation—The Chamber demanded reduction of expenditures both by Congress and the President "to those amounts needed for efficient accomplishment of purposes which are necessary." They sought "equitably distributed taxes" which do not by encroachments threaten the revenues of State and local governments." Of the pending tax bill, the resolution said, it "should have no place in the legislation of a period of economic recovery. The chief features are not designed as a means of taxation, but are attempts to regulate the management of American corporations at a time when in the interests of recovery and re-employment business enterprise should be free from arbitrary impositions."

Merchant Marine—The chamber's resolution termed Government assistance necessary to offset high shipbuilding and operating costs, the granting of "direct subsidies for construction and operation of American-built vessels in regular service on essential trade routes," and insisted that the "merchant marine should be privately owned and operated," with minimum Governmental regulation.

Voluntary Mergers.

Railroad Consolidations — The chamber, urging the preservation of the principle of voluntary consolidation of railroads, asked Congress to release the Interstate Commerce Commission "from its obligation to maintain a comprehensive plan of consolidation of all railroads into a limited number of systems."

International Air Services—A resolution urging Government and business encouragement of rapid air transportation to further international trade, was unanimously passed.

Water Resource Policies—The chamber's resolution on this situation said that primary responsibility for flood control projects should rest with the Federal Government only when such projects are on major streams and affect a number of States. Cost should be apportioned in accordance to benefits received, it was held. The resolution also contended that "the generation of electric energy for commercial use from water power in navigable waters is a proper function of private enterprise."

National Forestry Policy—The resolution approved by the meeting urged fostering of private ownership of forest lands through intelligent treatment by State and Federal Government in respect to taxation and other factors.

Prior to adoption of the resolutions the vast audience of business leaders had howled hilariously and given a rising ovation to a bitter critic of the Administration, Fitzgerald Hall, president of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway, of Nashville, when he said in speaking of the "Ship of State".

"It is true that she is listing badly; that she is consuming in her engines the produce of future generations; that she moves first this way, then that, without fixed guide or compass. But the fault is neither in her design nor her construction, and the remedy is neither to scrap or rebuild the Ship of State, but rather that the official crew be made to walk the plank."

Denounces U. S. Aids.

In a florid oratorical style, his voice often trembling with emotion, Hall had denounced "the voracious office-holding class," the "continued impairment of civil service," "the official terrorism of public investigations as now performed," and the "woeful lack of proper official personnel . . . which is threatening to wreck the greatest system of government yet devised."

Interrupted numerous times by laughter and applause, he thwacked the Administration and the entire office-holding class, calling the latter "inefficient, selfish, ambitious and cowardly as a whole," while he pictured businessmen, "individually and as a class, as completey outstripping professional politicians in intelligence, ability, character and patriotism."

During Hall's address on "The Federal Union," he paid tribute to the Supreme Court, saying its establishment constituted the greatest single contribution to the science of Government by the modern world! And what a record it has made! There, at least, a gooddess of justice reigns supreme!"

After denouncing the political system which allows party leaders to choose candidates, according to Mr. Hall, he said:

"One of the greatest hindrances to the American form of government is the practically complete domination of party machinery by officeholders. The truth is that the real menace to free America is its officeholding oligarchy."

Blasts Politicians.

He blasted the caliber of men in politics, saying "Incompetence, graft, and selfishness have been the rule rather than the exception," and deplored that fewer successful business men went into the field of Government. He insisted that there was no "breakdown" of the old institutions, but rather "the abuse thereof."

Hall, shaking his hand angrily, criticized Congress in a scorching arraignment, stating that "in despair at its own incompetence," Congress had delegated away most of its powers, had attempted to destroy local self-government, had undertaken the regulation of purely local affairs, from constructing a dog-pound in Memphis to telling farmers how many potatoes they can plant.

In a radio address last night, Joseph W. Evans, of Houston, Tex., Southwestern vice president of the United States Chamber, emphasized strongly that "the chamber is not fighting the New Deal. It in the past has opposed many policies of other administrations. It is not engaged in partisan politics. Yet, it must feel free to call attention to proposals that may come from whatever direction if they threaten to strangle the free operation of in comparison with their tumultuous

Promoter Tells Of Townsend's 'Deal' for Votes

Los Angeles Agent Says $12,000 Was Promised for Backing Merriam.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, April 30.—Political maneuvering and a vast promotional venture which accompanied the spread of the Townsend old age pension plan were described today in testimony before a Congressional investigating committee.

Pierre Tomlinson, 34, appearing before investigators as the man who "built up" Dr. Francis Townsend, father of the plan, told of a $12,000 "deal" between Townsend leaders and Gov. Frank Merriam's representatives through which the voting strength of the pension plan was to have been delivered for Merriam in his 1934 campaign.

The money was not paid, he said.

Townsend Put on Pedestal.

Earlier, Tomlinson, formerly employed by the Los Angeles Board of Education, told of his promotion campaign to put Dr. Townsend "on a pedestal."

"He gave me a big sales talk," the witness said of the meeting with Dr. Townsend which resulted in his employment.

"He assured me we could build a national magazine equal in circulation and revenue to the Saturday Evening Post, and all make a hatfull of money."

Three hundred employes worked with Tomlinson and C. E. Smith in the "promotional end," he said.

"Our function was to build up Dr. Townsend and set him on a pedestal as a man capable of leading such a big thing.

"We tried to keep him in the background as much as possible because of his tendency to issue statements contradicting statements we already had put out."

Club Scores "Racket."

Battle Creek, Mich., April 30 (AP). Two former officers of Michigan Old Age Pension Clubs testified at a congressional hearing today that they deserted the Townsend organization because they were convinced it was a "money racket."

The testimony was given by the Rev. David B. Moore, 60, of Traverse City, and Mrs. Juanita H. Jackson, of Jackson, before a small audience of elderly people who booed repeatedly at criticism of the $200-a-month proposal.

Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, concluded the hearing today.

Mrs. Gladys Brittain, secretary of a club at Niles, Mich., told of discovering a shortage in club accounts. She advised national and regional headquarters of the Townsend organization, she testified, but received no reply.

Two Men Freed As 'Kidnapers' Of Farm Girl

Woman Provides Alibi in Virginia Case for D. C. Man and Friend.

Loudoun County's two suspects in the "kidnaping" of Hilda Utterback, 19, were set free last night, putting the mystery right back where it was the morning the pretty 19-year-old Hamilton, Va., farm girl was found bound and covered with a mattress in a vacant house near her home.

"They are absolutely free forever of any connection with this," Commonwealth's Attorney Charles F. Harrison, in charge of the investigation, declared in announcing his decision to release one of the suspects, Hampton K. Townes, 37, a steamfitter, of 2138 K street northwest.

Second Freed Earlier.

The second suspect, Charles Henry Ball, 31, of 1911 North Wayne street, Clarendon, Va., had been freed earlier in the day.

On the basis of their own investigations it appeared certain that county police would be unable to link either Townes or Ball with the girl's disappearance.

Ball was released on the basis of an alibi established for him by Mrs. Robert Cooper, 35, of Leesburg, who told Harrison and E. S. Adrian, Loudoun County sheriff, that she had been with him from 9 p. m. Saturday, fully 30 minutes before the girl was supposed to have been kidnaped, until early Sunday morning.

She said Townes, accompanied by another young woman, was in the party and that they spent their time driving about the countryside.

It was established to the satisfaction of authorities, according to Harrison, that the other woman was not Hilda Utterback.

Townes, whose wife, Mrs. Mary P. Townes, lives in Washington, was brought into the case partly through a phone call made to the Utterback girl last Wednesday night and partly because his tan coupe had been definitely identified with a yellowish-looking car seen frequently in the vicinity of the Utterback home.

Townes admitted ownership of the car, Harrison said. He also told Harrison, according to the attorney, that he had known the girl for about a year and that they frequently had met.

Knew Girl, Is Claim.

Ball, described by Harrison as a "nice young fellow," admitted making the phone call to the girl. He turned the phone over to Townes, according to his statement to Harrison, and then both he and Townes talked and kidded with the young high school graduate.

Harrison said his investigations have disclosed that Townes has known Hilda Utterback for about a year and that they frequently had dates.

Ball, he said, called Hilda on the phone Wednesday night for Townes. Both men talked and kidded with the girl until Hilda hung up the receiver, Harrison said.

Jury Locked Up

the penitentiary for life. He might be found guilty by reason of insanity.

It was upon the insanity plea—the plea of a failing mind in a sick body, a mind that was blank and unable to reason—that the defense of Attorneys James A. O'Shea, Burnette Miller and Albert Goldstein has been based.

But the closing minutes of yesterday's trial were not those of the defense, but those of the Government, with Assistant United States Attorney Irving Goldstein attacking the idea that the prisoner ever was of unsound mind.

In his rebuttal argument, Goldstein brought into the sultry and packed little courtroom the ghost of Willie Mae Wood, a bride of but 17 days, who was all but beheaded in a room in the Houston Hotel before dawn last October 12.

Mrs. Wood, Goldstein declared, stood in spirit back of his chair and the chair shared by his associate in the prosecution, Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin.

"Reaguer sits behind his counsel," cried Goldstein, "and behind Mr. Heflin's chair and me sits the wraith of Willie Mae Wood, come back to demand vengeance."

Goldstein attacked the defense in its attitude toward the dead girl.

"They speak of treading lightly on the ashes of the dead, but that is obvious," Goldstein said.

"They want, really, to show you that Willie Mae Wood hadn't any right to live—that she was 'trash' while Reaguer was a leading citizen."

O'Shea closed the argument for the defense. He stressed the testimony of the alienists and physicians who have come to court to say that the 57-year-old prisoner, sitting in the shadow of the electric chair, was insane.

He pointed to the testimonies of the prominent Culpeper citizens and professional and business men who have described the "morbid" change that came over Reaguer.

"There are two Reaguers I want you to see," said O'Shea, adjusting his glasses.

"One is the jovial Will Reaguer of the old days. The Reaguer who said hello to everyone. The loving father and the kindly husband, the able business man, the leader in the life of his city.

"The other is the insane Reaguer—the man whose mind snapped under a terrible cerebral hemmorrhage and grief and drink. The man whose arteries were hard, and who was desperate."

'Hex' Murderer Hangs Himself In Buffalo Cell

Meat Cutter Who Beat 'Witch Doctor' to Death Takes Own Life.

By the United Press

Buffalo, N. Y., April 30.—John Tryka, who allegedly committed murder in an unsuccessful fight against devils and evil spirits, hanged himself in Central Park police station today.

He was being held for the murder of Adolphe Boettger, a dabbler in occult matters, who had been hired by the Tryka family to use witchcraft and herbs to deliver them from "devils in the stomach."

Police said Tryka, 34-year-old meat cutter, used a 14-inch wrench to beat Boettger to death.

No special guard was placed over Tryka after he was taken to the police station. He appeared to be calm and to have no regrets. A newspaper reporter asked police to have Tryka identify a photograph of Boettger. When they went back to the cell they found Tryka hanging from a bar. He died soon after he was taken down.

He had confessed the murder, according to police, and explained it as follows:

"When I got home yesterday from work, my wife told me Boettger had said she would not live unless we paid him some more money. I had already paid him about $400 to keep the evil spirits away.

"I got a wrench. My wife did not know about that, but she went with me to the room where Boettger did his work for us."

Police said Boettger's wife, Catherine, and his son, William, struggled with Tryka and were injured. Mrs. Magdalene Tryka was quoted as having said she knew her husband went to the room to beat up Boettger, but did not intend to kill him.

Tryka told detectives he had been visiting Boettger for three or four years, receiving "treatments for the spirits."

Navy Safety Award To Honor Moffett

A "Rear Admiral William A. Moffett Memorial Trophy" will be awarded annually to the battleship or cruiser aviation unit with the best safety record for the year, Acting Secretary of Navy Admiral William H. Standley, announced yesterday.

The trophy, a large silver plaque mounted on a walnut base, was purchased with contributions from naval aviators in memory of the late Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, former chair of the Bureau of Aeronautics, who lost his life in the crash of the dirigible Akron in April, 1933.

The plaque contains 25 small, individual shields on which will be engraved each year the name of the winnings unit. Each winner will retain possession of the trophy for a year.

Six members of the executive board continue to serve unexpired terms: W. C. D'Arcy, president D'Arcy Advertising Co., St. Louis; J. M. Dawson, vice president Tracy, Locke, Dawson, Inc., New York; F. B. Ryan, president Ruthrauff & Ryan, Inc., New York; Gilbert Kinney, vice president J. Walter Thompson Co., New York; Arthur H. Kudner, president Arthur Kudner, Inc., New York; Guy C. Smith, vice president Brooke, Smith & French, Inc., Detroit.

Sports Writer Speaks.

Frederic R. Gamble continues as executive secretary.

Among the speakers was Bill Cunningham, sports columnist for the Boston Post, who warned advertising writers not to "write down" to their public, and that an appeal to the masses could be made without resorting to "gutter language."

"In a sense," he said, "we sports writers are trying to sell sports to the public. We find slogans as useful as any advertiser does; for instance, the 'Four Horsemen' of Notre Dame, and 'Brown Bomber,' and many others. But the biggest men in sports writing haven't found it necessary to drop below a dignified level in their copy. You can use simple, attractive English and still get the necessary punch into what you write."

William L. Day, vice president of J. Walter Thompson Co., New York, took a contrary view. He told the audience that dignity and mass appeal do not generally go together. He presented a series of news pictures, contrasting those with "sex appeal" and those without it.

Models "a Dying Race."

Miss Marion C. Taylor, merchandise manager of the Conde Nast Publications, asked that advertising appeal to the intelligence of the readers and warned against any attempts to mislead.

The day of the professional model for advertising pictures is gone, Miss Taylor said.

"They are a rapidly dying race," she said. "Their place has been taken by the amateur now, the 'professional amateur,' but at least she has one virtue. She looks as if she belongs, simply because she does."

Miss Taylor made a plea "for more women in the agency field, women who can analyze Mrs. Consumer to you, women with an open ear and a trained mind, women who know how a table is set, what a bedroom looks like these days and that it is never referred to as a boudoir, and just how crazy hats can be and get away with it."

The afternoon session was devoted to a discussion of radio. Among the principal speakers was Lenox R. Lohr, president of the National Broadcasting Co. He foresaw an improvement in radio programs and an improvement in transmission, with television still somewhat in the future.

Radio Tests Slated.

"Radio has always been a changing art," he said, "and the future holds in store many revolutionary developments. Super-power, with its increased circulation, is undoubtedly before us and the possibilities of short-wave transmission not far behind. These will affect the present status of the art only by amplifying its usefulness. Other developments of our parent company, the Radio Corporation of America, will come out of the laboratory for field tests this spring.

"Television and 'facsimile' are to be welcomed, rather than feared, for they will make available to you further means of reaching the American public with perhaps an even more convincing sales message than is possible today by sound alone. As soon as it has demonstrated their usefulness, the National Broadcasting Co. will have these facilities available for your use.

"We will not attempt to predict the time of their expansion to a point where they become economically a commercial possibility, nor can I envisage the new problems which their advance will create, but I feel safe in saying that the present method of broadcasting will continue unaffected for several years to come and remain during this next period an unrivaled means of conveying a rapid and convincing sales message to untold millions of people."

Other talks on today's program were:

J. W. Garretts Will Present Brahms Cycle

150 Invited to Chamber Music Recital at Evergreen House Estate.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Garrett, of Baltimore, have issued invitations for a Brahms chamber music cycle to be played in the private theater of their residence, Evergreen House, from May 1 to May 10, inclusive. This is the first time that a complete series of the chamber music compositions of Brahms has been presented in America in the intimate surroundings for which they were designed. About 150 guests will be in attendance.

The artists appearing in the cycle are Sascha Jacobsen, Paul Bernard, Louis Kievman and Marie Roemael-Rosanov (the Musical Art Quartet), assisted by Frank Sheridan, piano; Victor Polatschek, clarinet; Nancy Wilson, violoncello, and Bernard Robbins, viola.

The cycle begins tonight at 9:30 with the performance of the C minor pianoforte trio and the F minor pianoforte quartet. Tomorrow night will be heard the F major sonata for violoncello and piano, and the C major pianoforte trio. Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock the G major string sextet and the A major pianoforte quintet will be played.

The evening program, continuing through the week, will present the A major sonata for violin and piano and the B major pianoforte trio on Monday, the C minor string quartet and the G major string quintet on Tuesday, the B-flat major string quartet and the F major string quintet on Wednesday, the A minor string quartet and the B minor quintet for clarinet and strings on Thursday, the D minor sonata for violin and piano and the C minor pianoforte quartet on Friday, and on Saturday the G major sonata for violin and piano, the E minor sonata for violoncello and piano, and the A minor concerto for violin, violoncello and piano.

The cycle will close Sunday afternoon, May 10, with the B-flat major string sextet and the G minor pianoforte quartet.

Jobless 'Campers' Quit New Jersey Legislature

Trenton, N. J., April 30 (U.P.).—The unemployed demonstrators who had camped at the capitol since a week ago Tuesday, went home today in defeat. The Legislature, besieged by the "hunger army" in an attempt to force passage of a broad State relief program, went home victorious—if their successful resistance to being "stampeded" was a victory.

The unemployed withdrew after the Legislature voted to return the relief burden to municipalities and created a Republican-controlled State board to administer relief funds when there are any to administer, but without appropriating or devising means to raise a single penny of relief. Assemblymen also voted to exclude the unemployed from the chamber.

Cards' Bases Loaded, 'Bar King' Falls Dead

St. Louis, April 30 (A.P.).—"Count" Henry Hoffman, 65, the "Michelangelo" of St. Louis bartenders, fell dead of a heart attack yesterday in the excitement of the Cardinals' seventeenth inning victory over the New York Giants.

The Count, as he was known to thousands of patrons, died when the bases were loaded and did not live to see the hit that gave the Cardinals their winning run.

Hoffman was called the kingpin of local drink mixers.

Quackery Warning Issued by Fishbein

New York, April 30 (A.P.).—A warning against charlatans and quacks was voice last night by Dr. Morris Fishbein, of Chicago, who said quackery had become a "big business in every sense of the word."

Dr. Fishbein told the Medical Society of the State of New York that well educated persons as well as the ignorant frequently were found among the followers of charlatans. In an address at the closing session of the society's annual convention, he said:

"The credulity of mankind in regard to new apparatus is astounding. All sorts of rays, electric shocks and vibrators are being sold to people as 'cure alls' when their uses in disease are exceedingly limited.

Dr. Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, said the most despicable charlatans were those who preyed on cancer victims.

Traffic Death Jury Disagrees At Annapolis

Washingtonian to Be Tried Again in Crash Fatal to 2 D. C. Citizens.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 30.—A jury trying Ernest B. Dodd, of Washington, for manslaughter, disagreed today and was discharged after being out for about three hours.

The court said Dodd would be tried again, probably on May 25. The charge arose from an automobile accident in which two Washingtonians were killed and another injured.

Dodd was the driver of a taxicab which crashed into a tree on the Generals highway near Millersville, September 15. He pleaded not guilty and was tried before Judge Linwood L. Clark and a jury. The case went to the jury at 2:30 p. m.

Mrs. Fanny Lee Arnold, 29, and George Frank Russell, 38, were killed in the crash.

Mrs. Irma Recla, 23, who was seriously injured, is in a Washington hospital. The party was en route from Herald Harbor to Washington when the crash occurred.

Freight Loadings Increase Predicted

Freight-car loadings in the second quarter of 1936 are expected to be about 9.5 per cent above actual loadings in the same quarter of 1935, according to estimates compiled by the 13 shippers' regional advisory boards and announced by the Association of American Railroads.

On the basis of these estimates, freight-car loadings of the 29 principal commodities will be 4,984,325, compared to 4,551,737 in the second quarter of 1935.

The largest individual increases are anticipated in brick and clay, grain, cotton, lumber and forest products, farm implements and iron and steel.

State to Drop Charge In Pen Slaying of Loeb

Joliet, Ill., April 30 (A.P.).—State's Attorney William R. McCabe announced last night he would not prosecute James Day for the razor slaying of Richard Loeb in Stateville Penitentiary, January 28.

The prosecutor said that when the 22-year-old convict is arraigned in Circuit Court Wednesday on a charge of murder, he would ask that the case be stricken from the docket for lack of evidence.

McCabe explained he would request leave to reinstate the case if evidence developed, or if his successor in office next December desired to go ahead with the prosecution.

County to Rule On Indictments Against Banker

Coblentz Is Acquitted of Misrepresentation; 2 Charges Pending.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 30. — Howard County's past and present State's attorneys will decide within a few days whether to press two false pretenses indictments against Emory L. Coblentz, acquitted here today on a charge of corporate misrepresentation.

C. Ferdinand Sybert, present State's attorney, said he would meet James Clark, former State's attorney who obtained Coblentz's indictments, to decide action on the false pretenses counts. They are the last of a series of charges brought against Coblentz, former State Senator, as a result of the collapse of his Central Trust Co.

Coblentz was acquitted on the corporate misrepresentation case by Judge Charles F. Stein, who heard the case in February. The jurist decided that the State had not proved Coblentz knew the actual value of his bank's securities. The prosecution contended that when the Central Trust Co. took over a bank in Ellicott City its balance sheet showed inflated values for the assets. The decision hung on whether Coblentz knew the values were inflated.

The false pretenses cases were brought on the acceptance of deposits in the Howard County bank when the trust company, which closed several years ago, was in shaky condition. One of the indictments charges Coblentz with obtaining $360 and the other accuses him of getting $316 from another man. A fourth Howard County indictment, charging Coblentz and four others with conspiracy, was nolle prossed last January.

The corporate misrepresentation charge was substituted for an earlier Howard County indictment which was declared faulty and thrown out. Coblentz was convicted in Cumberland on a change of venue on this earlier charge, but the Court of Appeals invalidated the indictment.

Leo and Roy Expect to Set Club Record

Mayfair Team Practically an Institution Now; Tour Aids Dancers.

By Chanticleer.

The return of Jane and Adam DiGitano to Washington and to the Heigh Ho Club carries with it a little observation of interest on tastes of all sorts of nationalities in dancing routines.

When the DiGitanos wound up a long engagement on Broadway they set out on a world tour in which they danced before audiences of many races. And they learned that, of all the routines in their big bag of tricks, none was so effective as the whirlwind creation they are featuring this week at Pete Macias' club. It really is breath-taking and you don't need much imagination to see what might happen if Adam should make a slight slip in his calculations.

Incidentally, next week ends the season at the Heigh Ho. After a vacation Pete and the band will be on view, as usual, at the Powhatan Roof. You'll see the DiGitanos nightly until the closing.

• • • •

Leo and Roy, entertaining at the Mayfair, expect to claim the record for a long-time engagement at this popular spot. They have been there for the proverbial 'steen weeks.

Out on Marlboro pike they know how to take advantage of their opportunities. When the first warm day came along, and Chef Russell's fried chicken came even more into demand, it didn't take Host Charlie Hunter more than a couple jiffies to move the summer tables and beach umbrellas to the terrace. But the formal outdoor opening isn't contemplated until about June 1.

The backbone of things theatrical at the Russian Troika are those two riotous sketches that open the revue. The first, "Duty and Circumstance," depicts a moment in the march of a Russian military unit, during which three privates take time out to flirt with three peasant girls. Ogling and all that sort of thing, in the Russian manner. The other is more serious, portraying a supper party for the famed Black Hussars on the eve of battle. All very colorful.

An indefinite holdover: That's the program for Billy Tinker and Charlette at the Dude Ranch. And for your dancing, Ralph Garren and his orchestra.

A brand-new floor show opens at La Paree today, with the exception of the little lovelies of the dancing chorus. Ah, yes, they remain—with new costumes and dance steps. Of course, you'll not forget that tonight is "College Night."

• • • •

The beautiful costumes worn this week by Janette Hackett at the Shoreham are causing no end of comment—they are that lovely. In case you don't already know, Miss Hackett is a premiere danseuse and the very essence of grace. Charlie Masters, a drummer with a soul, is adding the comedy touch by showing his versatility with drumsticks, using chairs and whatnot to drum on. Arthur Ball, tenor, lends a classical tone to the week's show. And Tom Osborne provides magic entertainment.

Shirley Gordon is being widely ballyhooed as the most attractive little something that has landed in the local nighteries in a season. Shirley goes through the entire manuel of dancing tricks—whirls, taps, twists and bumps.

• • • •

There is a rumor that a new night club, to be known as Coconut Grove, will open shortly at Fifth and K streets northwest. Another wafting on the gossip breeze brings the information that Moe Baer, former maestro at the Club Habana, is about ready to announce an opening for himself and boys at one of the local establishments. Well, it sounds reasonable. Moe knows music like Lee knew military tactics.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

Charles F. Wahl, legislative representative of the Canal Zone Central Labor Union, with which two lodges of the American Federation of Government Employes are affiliated, is back in Washington in connection with the Bland measure, an omnibus bill dealing with Isthmus affairs. Wahl, who was here earlier in the session, made the trip by air from Panama in 24 hours.

BAKER.

The interest of Government employes in the Bland bill is protection of the 40-hour week on the Isthmus. The bill is not clear on certain points in its present form, Wahl points out, and it is felt that an amendment assuring the 40-hour week is of vital importance.

The measure covers many points other than personnel relations, and, because of its omnibus nature, progress on it has been rather slow.

Biological Talks Scheduled.

Three Federal scientists will occupy the program of the 835th meeting of the Biological Society of Washington tomorrow night at the Cosmos Club.

Dr. Edward A. Chapin, National Museum curator of insects, will speak on "Beetles of the District"; Paul E. Garber, in charge of the Section of Aeronautics, National Museum, will talk about "Flying Creatures," while Donald Edward McHenry, National Park Service, will present "The Tufted-Eared Squirrels of the Grand Canyon National Park." All three lectures will be illustrated with slides, and the meeting is open to the public.

The Washington Central Federal Credit Union has inaugurated a series of informal luncheons to which members of all District of Columbia credit unions are invited. They will be held at the Harrington Hotel 12:30 to 1:30 p. m. on the first and third Friday of each month, beginning today.

Premature Gloating.

We all are familiar with the irrepressible type of player who, after seeing the dummy and discovering to his joy that he holds a tenace position over a key honor, gloatingly states to the world at large: "I wish I'd doubled!"

In a serious game such a statement might well be taken to task by the declarer on the ground that the speaker had given unauthorized information to his partner. Recently, however, in a "sociable game," in which the letter of the law was not invoked, I saw classic punishment inflicted on the premature gloater. This was the hand:

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 no trp.	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 spades	Pass	4 no trp.	Pass
5 no trp.	Pass	6 spades	[final bid]

West made his natural opening of the club jack and no sooner was the dummy spread on the table than East began to chortle. "I double!" he said playfully.

The declarer looked at him thoughtfully and then said, inelegantly: "O, yeah? Thanks for the tip!"

The club lead went to South's ace and three rounds of diamonds were played. After that the club king was cashed and the queen was led and ruffed with declarer's deuce of trump. Three rounds of hearts followed, ending in the dummy, and now the fourth club was led and ruffed with the eight of trumps. When West failed to overtrump the declarer started to laugh.

"O, you wish you'd doubled!" he sneered at East. "So do I—now!"

After which he gayly led the nine of trumps and played low from dummy. East won, but with only two cards left in his hand (the king and jack of trump) he had to concede the last two tricks by leading to the combination tenace in dummy and declarer's hand.

Today's Question.

Question: Will you be so kind as to advise the correct bidding on the two hands shown below? West was the dealer. Neither side was vulnerable.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

A Columnist's Mail Bag.

Dear Sullivan: I am sending you this clipping from my home town paper in Cape Town, South Africa. I know you will like this story very much: "Kasama, Thursday: A motor car, driven by Mr. J. Kitchen, of Abercorn, Northern Rhodesia, was attacked by a full-grown lion. It happened at dusk while Mr. Kitchen was on his way to his farm. The lion evidently thought the car was a buck as it sprang suddenly out of the long grass at the side of the road, and landed on the bonnet of the car. Seizing the top of the radiator in its teeth it reached around and wrenched one of the headlights in one paw, until the glass was facing upward. Mr. Kitchen accelerated quickly and the lion slid off the car. He drove on to his home, the lion following some distance, and there found that one headlamp was completely smashed, one mudguard slightly bent and the raditor dented by teeth marks." Charles E. Sturgis. 943 St Nicholas avenue.

Dear Sturgis: Believe it or not, he was waiting for a taxi. E. S.

Dear Sullivan: You are cordially invited to attend the frogs-legs dinner, inaugurating the 1936 season at Ben Riley's Arrowhead Inn, Friday at 7:30. As you know, Mr. Riley introduced this delicacy to American menus in 1897, and since then he has served an average of 40 pounds a day, five months a year. The 39-year total is approximately 4,680,000. Diamond Jim Brady was never satisfied with less than two portions (20 legs to a portion).

Regards, Martin Stern.

Dear Sir: If you consider moving this fall, the East Side apartments owned and managed by Vincent Astor should not escape your attention. We have apartments of from 10 to 14 rooms, either simplex or duplex. We also have apartments of 15 rooms, occupying an entire floor. Very truly yours, Office of Vincent Astor, John Carvington Yates.

Dear Mr. Yates: Tell Vincent for me that these would be netirely too stiffy. But I'd be interested in something intimate—like Madison Square Garden.

• • • •

Dear Edouard: Walked along that "gay" Broadway, of which you write last night. Four of the plays advertised are: "Bury the Dead," "Murder in the Old Red Barn," "Dead End" and "Murder in the Cathedral." It's just one big, happy street.

Joe Ricardel.

• • • •

Dear Ed: Thought you'd get a laugh out of our ad in a Brooklyn magazine: "Thomas H. Ireland—Undertaker—We bury the nicest people." Can we count on you? As ever, Tom Ireland.

• • • •

Dear Sullivan: You may be interested in learning that a portion of one of your columns found a place in the sermon I preached yesterday morning. Several members of the congregation (the Lynbrook Baptist Church) expressed an appreciation of the message you found in the dramatic events at Moose River, in which you summed up the futility of gold in the shadow of death. Though I am a minister, I trust that the horizons of my interest are not too limited. I often find things of interest and value in your column, though Broadway and Hollywood seem to be beyond the scope of much ministerial concern. After all, the essential humanity of most of us is pretty much the same, whether it is found in the "Roaring Fifties," or in a Long Island community. Sincerely yours, Nelson C. Munson (Pastor).

• • • •

Dear Sullivan: Did you see this ad in the Times? "Happily married couple wanted to lecture to Newlyweds Honeymooning in June at Searoom Manor. Couple must show proof of happy marriage for 20 years, and ability to please in-laws. Lecture to initiate newlyweds into the secret of 'Getting Along Well Together With Relatives.' Salary and expenses." I know just the couple they want, Ed, but I'll be hanged if I'll dig 'em up. The tombstones are too heavy. Gravely yours, A. P.

• • • •

Dear Sullivan: I'm going to ask you a question, and you've got to answer it without looking it up. Whose picture is on a $20 United States bill? George Hall.

• • • •

Dear George: What is a $20 bill.

• • • •

Dear Ed: Your readers might want to know: There is only one legit playhouse on Broadway, itself—the Manhattan, at Fifty-second. It houses a WPA production. And only one legit house on W. Forty-second street—the New Amsterdam. Rest are "burley" houses and two-bit movies. The old town's moving on.

Sincerely, Charlie Barnett.

Wounded Actress To Wed Playwright

New York, April 30 (U.P.).—Doris Dudley, beautiful 18-year-old actress, who was shot at the apartment of Sidney Kingsley, Pulitzer Prize playwright, said today she would marry him as soon as she got out of the hospital.

Police, who earlier listed Miss Dudley as an attempted suicide, revised their records and classified the shooting as accidental.

"Miss Dudley and I have done a great deal of target shooting together," Kingsley said. "Last night I happened to mention that I had a new gun. Miss Dudley went into the bedroom, where I had the gun in a case, to examine it. A few minutes later we heard a shot and found her lying on the floor. She must have dropped the gun in such a manner that it discharged."

Miss Dudley, slightly wounded in the chest, has been appearing in "End of Summer," starring Ina Claire. Kingsley wrote the Pulitzer play, "Men in White," and is the author of the current success, "Dead End."

On the Air Today

No one seems to be inclined to offer any authoritative reason for Bing Crosby's sudden decision not to sing with the Philadelphia Orchestra. These words are being written prior to the Thursday night broadcast and with due appreciation of the fact that some explanation may be offered in the program itself.

First word that Crosby would not vocalize to the symphonic strains of Conductor Stokowski's Orchestra came wholly unexpectedly Wednesday night from the company that produces the program. It stated simply that the exponent of crooning had decided his singing with the Philadelphia Orchestra would not be "fitting."

Now, obviously, everyone concerned had several weeks in which to consider this angle. Stokowski had stated, for the purpose of newspaper announcements, that he thought it would be a real thrill for the music-loving public—and Crosby frankly and enthusiastically admitted that it would gratify an ambition of long standing.

Why, then, kill it at the very moment it was ready? The answer would seem to be found in the fuss and stir fomented in the minds of the Nation's serious music lovers. Enough persons phoned me, following the first announcement of the recital, to give me a fair idea of what could happen to the program sponsors. When a dyed-in-the-wool serious music lover feels his finer sensibilities being rubbed the wrong way, he has a powerfully assertive way about him.

Yes, sir, without knowing what will be said on the program itself by way of explanation, I am inclined to believe that Mr. and Mrs. Listening Public convinced those in charge of the program that it would never do.

Today marks the inauguration of that new series of radio trips around the Nation's Capital, in which listeners over the country who cannot come to Washington this summer get the opportunity to see the city in a sort of synthetic way. Listen to WMAL at 10:30, and see how you check the city as you know it with the picture given on the air.

The Shenandoah Valley apple festival affords Frederick's WFMD a grand opportunity to do things in a big way. This afternoon, 3 to 5, WFMD will broadcast direct from Winchester, describing the festival for residents up ond down "the valley" who cannot be there. You can also get a picture of the ceremonies from N. B. C.'s broadcast, to be heard from WMAL at 4.

But it's a big afternoon for WFMD. Listen to the program on 900 kilocycles.

Mareline Ensign, guardian of the program scheduled at WOL, is a trifle out of sorts this week. It seems she listened to dozens of phonograph records to find a suitable signature for the WOL feature, "Fantastical Facts." She finally selected Benny Goodman's recording, "Good Bye." That was several months ago. Then along came WMAL's new "Night Watchman," and darned if they didn't pick out the same tune as the WOL signature! Yes, indeed, Miss Ensign is a little annoyed at things this week.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Think Wisely and Well Before Getting Engaged; Then Get Married Within Reasonable Length of Time.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been keeping steady company with a young man for five years. Two years ago we became engaged to be married. Shortly afterward I went away on a visit. While away I met a very nice man, with whom I kept steady company while there. I did not hear from my fiance until he came to the place where I was visiting to ask for the return of his ring. I gave it to him willingly. Then when I came back I started going with my fiance again, and although I wrote to the other man, I always discouraged him. My fiance gave me another diamond, our engagement has been announced and everything, but, Miss Haworth, I don't really love him. He has a terrible temper. He recently lost his position because of this. He is very jealous of me and has gotten into so much trouble because of his temper that it worries me.

Mary Haworth

* * * *

My parents are dead and I live with relatives. They are crazy about my fiance simply because he acted on the old saying: "First get in good with parents and relatives and then get the girl." Please advise me what to do. You see, the other man I met while away is planning on coming to visit me soon. I have got to make a decision. I trust you will guide me, for I have no one else in whom to confide. Thanking you, I am, HUMBLY WAITING.

* * * *

DEAR WAITING: Surely you don't need me to tell you not to marry a man you don't love; a man who is temperamentally so unstable that he can't hold a job. Don't let your relatives' fondness for the young man influence your decision in the slightest. They are not marrying him and they will not have to live with him. I don't believe you care any more for the second young man than you do for your fiance. I believe both of them mean no more to you than birds in the hand, as it were. I believe you would drop either of them the moment you saw a better matrimonial prospect on the doorstep. Try to increase your social contacts so as to meet a number of young men and think wisely and well before getting engaged again. Then, when you do get engaged, get married within a reasonable length of time and devote yourself to living up to your married responsibilities. M. H.

Seeks Travel Post.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Here I am again! This is the third letter I have written you in the course of the past month and since the others brought me much peace of mind I am wondering if you can help me in this instance as well.

If you will remember, I wrote you previously concerning my husband, a professional man, who advised me to keep our marriage a secret and re-apply for my present position so he may share in the benefits of my wages; and you advised me to divorce him as soon as possible. Because of your clear analysis of the situation I have been able to find myself, so to speak. By exercising will power I hardly think of him at all during the day, unless of course some one mentions his name or makes some remark. I hope in the near future I will be able to forget him and I think I shall.

* * * *

But, Miss Haworth, I should like to get away from this town during the coming summer months. I want to get away from these people who continually ask me, "How's Doc?" I want to be able to go somewhere and do something during warm weather, so that in the fall I can return to my work refreshed and with more vigor. I am well trained in commercial subjects, have taught them and have had much business office experience. But I do not want to work in an office.

* * * *

I should like to be a stewardess on an air-liner, but I am not a trained nurse. I should like to be a counselor in a camp, or I should like to travel. But I have no money. Is shorthand, typewriting or bookkeeping taught at camps? And how should I go about applying for such a position? I have had six years' college training and am well qualified.

Do you have any suggestions that I might follow so that my summer vacation will be months that I can recall as pleasant memories, instead of sitting home and reminiscing over the dreary, morbid winter that has passed?

B. F. B.

* * * *

DEAR B. F. B.: By writing Vogue's Camp Bureau, in care of the Conde Nast Publications, Inc., New York City, you may obtain a list of summer camps for girls. Write to these camps and find out what your chances are for securing employment as counselor or instructor of shorthand, typing or bookkeeping. Since you have no money, I don't know how you can travel, unless you find a position as companion or governess with a family which travels. The only way to find such a position is to put yourself up as an applicant, through listing yourself with employment bureaus in the nearest large city; through answering advertisements in metropolitan Sunday newspapers, and through placing an advertisement for such occupation in such papers. Since you are not a trained nurse, I believe you will have to discard the idea of becoming a stewardess on an airliner. You might inquire of the steamship companies in your nearest city as to your chances of getting employment on a boat. M. H.

Duchess Selects Hats.

On a recent visit to Paris the Duchess of Kent selected some Suzy hats, including a chiffon toque trimmed with wings; also a small canotier with pleated brim and burnt goose quill, which is among the Suzy successes. Likewise, she chose a Panama cloche and a large picot plateau with flat crown of camelias. Naturally, these are all black.

Selfish Wives Chief Cause of Trips to Reno

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Women with husbands, and women who want them, have sought her advice. Men whose wives "have never understood them," and wives who "work their fingers to the bone" for husbands who "take them for granted" have unburdened their hearts to Montanye Perry, the author, who under the pen name "Marion Lambert," conducted a personal-problems page on a national magazine for a number of years.

Receiving in that time thousands of letters from "the love-lorn and the housework-worn," Mrs. Perry had a rare opportunity to delve into difficulties confronting many persons and to discover a good deal about what makes some marriages click while others go on the rocks.

But what she knows about this subject has not been gleaned entirely from her experience as a problem-page editor. Before she ever took over the pen of "Marion Lambert" her articles on success in marriage had attracted wide attention when they appeared in leading magazines. More recently, her ideas along this line have been worked into novels. (She has written five. "Diana," the most recent, came from the press this year.)

Explains Failures.

Yesterday in the Washington office of her author-husband, Armstrong Perry, she revealed some of her conclusions about women in general and wedded women in particular, and told why so many modern marriages are unsuccessful.

Discussing mistakes many wives make, she pointed out, "Selfishness is one thing all of us have to fight. Many marriages end in Reno because the average wife disregards her husband's most trivial likes and dislikes. If he wants his toast browned on both sides, his egg boiled exactly three minutes or his easy chair at a certain angle under the light, why should these desires be considered merely foolish whims? After all, making a man comfortable goes a long way toward keeping the other woman out of the picture."

Mrs. Perry also stressed that mental comfort is just as important as physical contentment. "Men don't like to be responsible for a woman's happiness every minute in the day; they don't like to feel their wives are entirely dependent on them for company, for entertainment. In other words, they prefer to have some free time without having to keep in mind they are expected home for lunch at a certain time, or for dinner on the dot, or to take their wives out to dance or to the theater so many evenings each week. Wise are the wives who can amuse themselves, who aren't upset when their husbands fail to do something according to schedule, who leave their husbands entirely free for a good part of the time."

Secretary Angle.

Money causes more quarrels between married persons than any other one subject, Mrs. Perry believes. "But friends of either the husband or wife also make plenty of trouble," she said. "Almost any man will have one or two acquaintances his wife won't like, and the same thing works the other way around. The woman with her wits about her will put up with her husband's friends the best she can and try to like them—or at least refrain from criticizing them. And that too, works the other way around."

So far as Mrs. Perry has observed, modern mothers in-law break up very few marriages. "And the secretary angle of home-wrecking is not nearly so common as some novelists would have us think," she went on. "The clever wife today apparently doesn't have much trouble in coping with either her husband's mother or the girl who works in his office. During the time I conducted the problem page, I had surprisingly few letters presenting problems along these lines."

A much more serious threat to marital success is the martyr-wife "who works her fingers to the bone and isn't appreciated," according to Mrs. Perry. "The woman of this type generally puts her time and energy into work that could easily go undone. If she spends days and hours and weeks hemstitching curtains for her bedroom or crocheting an afghan or monogramming bath-towels, she may 'work herself to death' but not for her husband, and he shouldn't be made the victim of whatever ragged-edge nerves may result from such activity. If she wants to 'doll-up' her house—so it will be admired by women friends who come to play bridge—that's her own business, but so far as her husband's concerned, she could probably spend all that time to better advantage playing golf or tennis with him, or putting a new cuff and collar set on that dark dress she wears so often."

Mrs. Perry emphasized that marital success generally can be boiled down to two things—a sense of proportion and a sense of humor. "And if I had to choose between these, I'd say a sense of proportion is more important," she averred. "One reason the business woman is apt to be a more successful wife than her leisure-loving sister is that she has been trained to look at things from an impersonal point of view, to evaluate problems in proportion to their importance and solve them accordingly."

Honey Cooking Recipe Secrets To Win Prizes

Has honey found its proper place in your line-up of important culinary ingredients? Do you realize its value beyond that of a pleasant accompaniment for waffles, hot cakes and biscuits? Do you know that long years ago honey was the only sweetening agent known—that is was used in baking, and wherever sweetening was necessary in cooking?

If you possess any of these honey cooking secrets you will want to enter The Post's contest this week for favorite honey dishes. Cash awards will be made to the five women who submit the most outstanding recipes which use honey as an important ingredient. There will be five prizes—first, $5; second, $3; and the three remaining prizes, $1 each. Those submitting recipes awarded honorable mention will receive a one-pound jar of honey.

Send your recipe to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Post, today. All entries must be received not later than Saturday.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX.

ROBERT REAGAN, senior member of the firm of Reagan & Reagan, decided instantly that there could be no mistaking the genuine relief that shone in the girl's eyes.

Her joy was sincere. "Oh, I'm so glad, so glad. I was worried that something terrible had happened to June."

Mr. Reagan smiled. "Nothing terrible. Except that she ran out of money in Paris and applied to me to help her. Very properly, too."

"She's in Europe?"

"Yes. It seems that she hated the Bradleys and ran away from them. She was afraid to let her brother know. She thought he would make her go back to her uncle. You see, he has considerable faith in Joseph Bradley. After all, Joseph was his father's only living brother."

Then, apparently interested, and eager to get the whole story, Robert Reagan listened to Ruth's recital.

"I can understand it very well now," he said. "When Jim's father died, he made no provision in his will for his brother, Joseph. As you probably know, the entire Bradley family fortune was built up by Jim's father. Joseph was always a ne'er-do-well so far as money was concerned. James, sr., talked it all over with Jim before he died and asked Jim to provide for his uncle always."

"And Jim put his little sister at their mercy."

"Don't condemn too hastily, child," Robert Reagan reproved. "They had treated him well always."

Ruth nodded. "I know that's true and they made a good appearance."

Not Bright.

"I don't know about being bright. I talked with my brother over the telephone that night from Des Moines. He begged me not to come. He knew instinctively that something was wrong. But I wouldn't listen to him. I insisted on having my own way and now look what it's brought me to. Of course, I'm safe enough. But how about Jerry? And Jim?"

"Don't start reproaching yourself," Mr. Reagan advised, "that's the most profitless form of mental exercise that a girl can take up. "Now, I'm inclined to believe you, Ruth. The things you tell me somehow fit in with some of the things I have vaguely suspected."

"And you'll help me?"

"Of course, I'll help you. You may have to stay here a day or two yet. I mean to check over your whole story. If what you have told me is true, and I am inclined to believe that it is, then perhaps you're safer here than you would be any other place right now.

"You may not hear from me again today—yet I might be back again in an hour. I don't know. Just be patient. I'll do everything that I can."

Life seemed more endurable to Ruth after Mr. Reagan's visit. She made up the narrow bed very carefully and put the little cell in spick, span order, just as though it had been her own room at home.

Publicity.

Certainly there was a great deal in the papers about the Bradley case. A three-column picture of the Bradley home. Pictures of James Bradley, sr., of his second wife, June's mother, of his first wife, Jim's mother.

Abigail Murphy, the cook, was sitting up on her bed when Ruth came to the door of her cell with some food. Her face was swollen and her eyes red from much weeping.

"Please don't call me June," Ruth insisted. "Call me by my own name."

The poor lady actually sobbed at her words. "And now you acting this way—departing from your senses."

"I told the whole story to Mr. Reagan, Mrs. Murphy. He believes me. He's had a cablegram from the real June."

Mrs. Murphy dried her eyes suddenly. "I don't believe it. Where is she?"

"In Europe."

Mrs. Murphy got up suddenly, came over to the cell door. "Listen, honey," she said coaxingly, "what you need is a doctor and not a lawyer. You're gone daffy, honey, that's all.

"Now listen, honey, think hard. You remember old Abigail, don't you? Don't you remember, honey?

"You'd better eat your food, Mrs. Murphy. You're going to be sick if you don't. Is there anybody you want to get in touch with?"

"There's my little niece, Abigail," Mrs. Murphy said quite wistfully. "But I told Mr. Reagan to let her know, although I don't suppose there's anything the girl could do. She's poor, goodness knows, I've had to help her and her husband. They've got a new baby, you know."

"I didn't know," Ruth said, making conversation and glad to get Mrs. Murphy off the identity subject.

A queer light was dawning in Mrs. Murphy's eyes. "Listen," she said, catching at Ruth's arms through the bars, "You remember little Abigail? Why, sure you do. Mrs. Bradley let me keep her one whole month when her mother was sick. And she was a spoiled 'un, if there ever was one.

"I don't remember," June said, realizing the direction the conversation led.

"Show me your shoulder, dearie," the older woman coaxed, much as she would talk to an erring child. "There'll be a three-cornered scar right on your left shoulder."

Ruth bared the shoulder. "You see?"

Abigail Murphy sat down suddenly. The girl's white, alluringly smooth shoulder was without scar or blemish.

Washington Girls Guests At Princeton U. Parties

Upperclass Clubs Arrange Full Program for Week-End, Including Dances, Ibsen's 'Peer Gynt' and Many Athletic Events.

Many Washington girls are among the 600 from all sections of the country who are in Princeton this week-end for the annual spring house parties of the 18 upper-class eating clubs of the university.

Continuing the precedent started a year ago when the Princeton Triangle and Intime Theatrical organizations, operating with the Sarah Lawrence Dramatic Association, presented "Holiday," the Intime this year has combined with actresses from Miss Finch's School in New York to produce Hendrik Ibsen's "Peer Gynt."

A full program of athletic events, with varsity encounters in lacrosse, tennis and track, also is scheduled today and tomorrow.

The house parties themselves will be marked by stricter supervision this year, self-imposed on the social affair by the inter-club committee. Special proctors will attend all dances and total expenses for each club have been limited to $350.

Dancing tonight will get under way at 10 o'clock and last until 6 in the morning, to be followed by breakfast parties in all the clubs. The dancing will be resumed at 9 o'clock tomorrow evening to last until midnight. Each club will hold its own house party, but a special "visiting" period among the clubs will exist from 2 until 4 tomorrow morning.

Elaborate Production.

The "Peer Gynt" performance will be one of the most elaborate productions staged by the Intime in several years. The cast consists of 23 Princeton undergraduates and 20 students from Miss Finch's. Included in the cast is Mr. Richard Baer, of Washington, who takes the part of "Peer Gynt" as an old man.

The entire production is under the direction of Mr. Lemuel D. Auers, '36, of New Rochelle, N. Y. An orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Peter DeWitt Hauser, '37, of Lansdown, Pa., will play suites 1 and 2 from Grieg's "Peer Gynt." Special folk dances will be presented by Mr. John H. Hines, '37, of Memphis, Tenn., and by Miss Barbara Strong, of St. Paul.

Mr. Howard Menand, of Menands, N. Y., is president of the interclub committee in charge of the week-end's activities, while Mr. Charles W. Edwards, of Santo Paulo, Calif., is secretary-treasurer.

Washington is well represented at the house parties. Miss Charlene Graddich is the guest of Mr. Harry Cranston, also of Washington, at the Charter Club; Miss Ruth Dove, the guest of Mr. Edward Reeves, of Maplewood, N. J., and Miss Ellen Boyden the guest of Mr. Thomas Parrott, of Princeton, N. J.

White House Fete to Honor Textile Girls

Workers From Alabama Mills Invited by Mrs. Roosevelt.

By Vylla Poe Wilson.

Probably one of the most interesting house parties in its history will assemble in the White House Sunday night as the guests of Mrs. Franklin O. Roosevelt in her capacity as member of the National Women's Trade Union League. The party, which will number more than 15, will include 7 young women who work in the textile mills of Alabama, and members of the New York delegation to the conference of the Women's Trade Union League, which will open in Washington on Monday. Lord and Lady Clifford, of London, also will arrive at the White House Sunday night.

The textile workers, who spend most of their time at the looms of the great mills of their native State, are to have a real holiday in Washington as winners of the Woman's Trade Union League convention scholarships. They will breakfast each morning with Mrs. Roosevelt during their visit at the White House. If they have no other engagements in connection with the convention they will dine with the Presidential family.

There will be a good supply of notepaper in their rooms and they will have the privilege of other guests of writing letters from the White House on White House stationery.

Despite the fact that this large number of guests is arriving at the White House on Sunday, Mrs. Roosevelt will go to New York to attend the birthday luncheon of her daughter, Mrs. John Boettinger. She will return on Sunday. If the weather is good she will go by airplane. Otherwise she will take the earliest morning train out of Washington.

Sir Arthur and Lady Murray, of England, who were in Washington during the World War and knew Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt then, arrived at the White House last night to be guests for a few days.

This morning Mrs. Roosevelt will be up bright an early, she told her press conference yesterday, to receive a May basket at the White House door from a group of children in celebration of May Day and National Child Health Day, this year sponsored by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

This afternoon, President and Mrs. Roosevelt will receive the members of the American Council of Education for tea.

Tomorrow morning Mrs. Roosevelt will attend a meeting at the Girl Scout Little House at 11 o'clock. She will dine at the International Students House tomorrow night.

Monday she will attend the luncheon at the Mayflower in connection with the conference of Regional and State Directors of the Works Progress Administration, which will be in session in Washington Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Mrs. Roosevelt will speak at the luncheon and probably will attend other luncheon and meetings during the conference. Monday afternoon she will give a tea for the members of the conference at the White House.

Dr. Edward Howard Griggs and Miss Marie Butts, of England, will be White House guests Monday night. Dr. Griggs also will be an overnight guest.

Tuesday Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the session of the Women's Trade Union League and the luncheon arranged by Mr. Phelps Dodge. The subject discussed will be juvenile crime prevention.

In answers to questions, Mrs. Roosevelt expressed appreciation of the corsage bouquet presented to her at her reception for the recent D. A. R. Congress. This bouquet was composed of four very large perfect white orchids. It was heavy, but Mrs. Roosevelt held it in her left arm while she shook hands.

Mrs. Roosevelt, at her press conference yesterday, had on a summery costume composed of a white flannel skirt and white chiffon blouse. She wore a dainty seed pearl chain with a pearl pendant.

Highness Prince Clary, uncle of the bridegroom. The ushers, who assisted in seating the guests but did not walk down the aisle with the bridal party, were officials of the State Department. They included Mr. Charles Lee Cook, Mr. Richard Southgate, Mr. V. Grant-Smith, Mr. Julius Culbertson, Mr. R. E. Schoenfeld, Mr. David Williamson, Mr. Samuel Rever, Mr. John Lord, Mr. Myron Hofer, Mr. David McK. Key and Mr. Julius Holmes.

The Ambassador of Belgium, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, and Princess Clary, who were official witnesses for the bridegroom, had their places inside of the altar rail with the maid of honor and the best man.

Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents on Observatory Circle, which was filled with a profusion of lillies of the valley.

The young couple was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Dunn, mother of the bride, who wore a gown of periwinkle blue crepe with a sapphire blue belt with hat to match, trimmed with a stiff veil and two pompons in the front, one of light blue and one of the dark. She carried a corsage of deep purple orchids, and Countess de Baillet-Latour, mother of the bridegroom, who wore a gown of beige chiffon, made on long simple lines and a large dark brown hat and a blue fox scarf.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Impetigo in Children.

Impetigo is one of our most annoying and stubborn skin diseases. It occurs in all parts of the world, and age is no barrier. In fact, it may appear on the skin of newborn infants and, in such cases, may be serious, as it can sap the resistance of the little patients to a marked degree. As children grow older the disease is fought with greater reserve, but it is none the less unsightly and, in many cases, it is difficult to eradicate.

There is no general agreement as to the cause. In fact, most of the pus-producing bacteria can be found in the scaly crusts, pustules and blisterlike lesions that develop on the skin.

The peculiar, yellow-green scabs, some of which may be stained with blood, are quite characteristic. At first the infection shows about the nose, the mouth, or on the forehead, although in some cases the hands, the trunk, the lower limbs or even the scalp may be the sites of the initial lesions.

The presence of another skin disease, such as acne, eczema, scabies (the itch or, in fact, any condition that lowers temporarily the bacteria resisting power of the skin—may predispose to impetigo. Occasionally enlarged glands or boils will follow the infection and the victim be acutely ill.

Contagious Disease.

Its contagious character has long been recognized. In fact, it may go through a family, a schoolroom or a neighborhood, attacking a large percentage of the children and an appreciable number of adults. Because of its rapid dissemination prompt treatment is necessary if spread to other children or to other members of the family is to be avoided. Infected youngsters should not be in school and should, of course, be under the supervision of a competent physician. Whenever the disease breaks out in nurseries or in the maternity departments of hospitals, watchful care must be exercised to detect new cases and each new victim should be separated as far as possible from the uninfected mothers and babies.

The caustive organism is most tenacious and persistent and may not yield to ordinary methods of cleansing, such as scrubbing floors, walls, bedsteads, the sterilization of mattresses, etc. The complete renovation of the room will probably be required. This means that walls, ceilings, floors, and all articles of furniture should be painted following a thorough cleansing. Fresh air and sunlight should then be allowed to reach the quarters for several weeks before they are used again.

The disease may be transmitted from an infected person to a well individual through direct contact or through using common towels, wash basins, clothing, or any article that has come in contact with oozing crusts or scales. While the child should be cautioned under all circumstances not to finger his mouth or nose, this is of special importance in the presence of an epidemic.

As the days grow warmer and longer, playgrounds, if not carefully supervised, may become seeders and incubators. From a single source the disease may be transmitted to a score of others as, for example, when a child takes a bite of an infected youngster's candy bar. Although it is sometimes called a filth disease, it may manifest itself in members of a family where cleanliness is enforced strictly.

Mercury Salts Efficacious.

Most physicians find that solutions of some of the salts of mercury or mercury ointments will be required to destroy the organisms. The crusts may be softened by using compresses wrung out in hot boric acid solution. A dusting powder made of calomel may be used. Ultra-violet is valuable.

In older children and in adults the prognosis is excellent, as practically all cases, if properly managed, yield to treatment. Here is a disease which the first rule of good hygien—cleanliness—will help us to avoid.

Among the speakers will be Senator Benson, Farmer-Laborite, of Minnesota; Senator Frazier, Republican, of North Dakota; Dr. J. The Marine Band and the Sons of the Legion Drum and Bugle Corps will play at the memorial to the war dead at 2:30 this afternoon. The highlight of the ceremony will be a poppy processional, led by the Sons of the Legion and the Juniors of the Auxiliary, climaxed by the heaping of garlands of poppies on a white cross in front of the memorial.

Typical of the many health pageants and festivals that will be staged at schools and playgrounds will be the marionette show, to be given at 4 p. m. at the Twin Oaks Playground. Here, a "poor little rich boy" will be shown pining away in a luxurious apartment because of his inability to get out and play in the sun.

Roundups Scheduled.

King Arthur, his merry knights and the fine ladies of his court will be on deck in the form of "health characters" at the play, to be given at Mitchell Park Playground, while the Chevy Chase Playground will hold a May pole festival with folk dances.

The Edmonds School examinations will be conducted from 1 to 1:30 p. m., and the Fillmore School "roundup" tomorrow morning.

That Child Health Day was being celebrated this year for the first time under the auspices of the Federal Government, through the Children's bureau of the Labor Department, was expressed in "child health day" messages of Dr. Thomas Parran, newly appointed surgeon general, Secretary of Labor Perkins and Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau.

Battle of Manila Bay Anniversary Is Today

LIEUT. COMDR. PATRICK HILL.

"You may fire when you are ready, Gridley."

Just 38 years ago this morning Commodore George Dewey gave that historic command which resulted in the destruction of the Spanish fleet in Manila Bay. The command marked the death of imperial Spain and the emergence of the United States as a world power.

The battle was recalled yesterday Lieut. Comdr. Patrick Hill, a gunner's mate during the engagement at Manila. Commander Hill, who retired from the Navy in 1931 after 44 years of service, lives at 3713 T street northwest.

"We entered the bay about midnight, April 30," said Hill. "Dewey was on the cruiser Olympia. There were two other cruisers, the Baltimore and the Boston, and two gunboats, the Concord and the Petrel. They were all of the China quadron.

"I was on the Concord, commanded by Asa Walker. We steamed in slowly. We knew the Spanish outnumbered us. Everybody was tense but we were going to do the best we could no matter was coming.

"We sighed the enemy about daybreak and opened fire at 5.000 yards. We circled three times, geting closer to the enemy each time. We closed up to about 3,000 yards for our last broadside.

"You couldn't see much because of the smoke. The Spanish were using cordite and we were using brown powder. We'd get all the smoke f.om the ship ahead of us in the line.

"When we completed our third circle the Spanish ships were in flames and we put out into the bay for breakfast while our officers held a council of war.

"Then we pu t back and gave the Spaniards assistance.

"The Spaniards were gallant gentlemen and good fighters who died by their guns. Their admiral, Patricio Montojoe, left his burning ship with their flag w.apped about him and directed the remainder of the fight from another ship.

"It was their poor marksmanship that lost them the battle. I think their methods of training were probably not as good as ours.

"Dewey was a capable officer. His orders were to sink the Spanish fleet and he carried them out.

"The memory of Dewey and what he did at Manila should be something for these latter-day heroes to shoot at."

Army, Navy Union Banks Security Act

"Those provisions contained in the social security act calling for a more solid foundation for social security and future economic development for the Nation's population and our commercial institutions must be supported by all factions in America to promote a return to prosperity," declared National Commander Robert Shrage, Army and Navy Union chief, in addressing newly installed officers of the President's Own Garrison, No. 104, local unit of the National Corps in the District of Columbia, last night.

Commander Shrage announced that the Army and Navy Union would actively support the enactment of social security laws in those States not hoving approved laws at the present time.

Two Children Found After They Visit Zoo

The combination of the warm weather and the attractions of the Zoo proved too much for a pair of 9-year-old school children yesterday. The children, Marjorie Reid, of 1918 Calvert street northwest, and Richard Layton, of 1419 Girard street northwest, took the afternoon off from Cooke School.

After parents had notified police they were found at 9 o'clock last night at the Connecticut avenue entrance to the Zoo, by Daniel Layton, Richard's brother, who had spent the afternoon searching for them. They were on their way home, they said.

Soviet to Be Topic.

Members of the Phi Beta Kappa Association of the District will hear William C. Huntington, former commercial attache of the American Embassy in the Soviet Union, speak in Wesley Hall, 1703 K street, at 8 p. m. tomorrow. "The U. S. S. R. and the U. S. A. will be his subject. Lofton S. Wesley will preside.

Bars a Bar

For Thirsty Man, Now Behind Bars.

A Negro with an uncontrollable thirst broke the show window of the Empire Liquor Store, at 1718 Fourteenth street northwest, just at daylight yesterday.

He reached in his arm to extract a tempting bottle of "bottled-in-bond" but the bottle was too large to be drawn through the bars outside the window. Unpertrubed, the Negro unscrewed the top from the bottle and managed to empty the contents through the bars.

Two policemen happened along. And now Allen Smith, of the 1300 block Cedar court northwest, is taking his nourishment, not in liquid form, between other bars—those of the Second Precinct.

Medical Center Cash Is Sought By Navy in Bill

Supply Measure Asks for $3,500,000 to Replace Old Buildings.

An initial appropriation to begin construction of a $3,500,000 naval medical center in Washington is carried in the naval supply bill reported to the House yesterday.

The money is the first that has been recommended to Congress since the authorization of the project in an act signed on February 23, 1931. One hundred thousand dollars was alowed at that time, however, for plans. Since then there has been a repeated demand for replacement of the obsolete buildings that comprise Naval Hospital.

Rear Admiral P. S. Rossiter, surgeon general, told the House subcommittee that existing hospital facilities are inadequate, and that it would be inadvisable to spend any considerable amount of money trying to modernize the present plant.

The new naval medical center will have a capacity of 600 beds, Admiral Rossiter said, whereas the present Naval Hospital has but 178 in fire-resistant buildings.

The initial appropriation for the project, recommended by the subcommittee, is $295,000.

The sub-committee refused to appropriate an initial amount for the model basin authorized by Congress this session because the President has not yet signed the billfl.

Should the bill become a low before the naval appropriation bill is passed by both Houses of Congress, the initial item of $1,881,200 will be added.

Georgetown's Traffic Plea Draws Favor

Park Board Sympathetic K Street Viaduct Studies Started.

Sultan Minimizes Fear P Street Will Become Thoroughfare.

Georgetown's plea that its sequestered residential streets not be turned into traffic lanes was received sympathetically yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which pledged itself to preserve as far as possble the section's present character.

Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan, ex-officio member of the planning body, reported studies are under way to determine the feasibility of a K street viaduct which would remove a great portion of the traffic burden from Georgetown streets.

Such a by-pass is urged by most of the residents who have written the commission's chairman, Frederic A. Delano, within the past week in protest against plans to pave P street between Twenty-eighth street and Wisconsin avenue.

Delano read the letters at yesterday's meeting, heartily indorsing the arguments therein. His stand was supported unanimously by members of the commission.

Not to Widen P Street.

Col. Sultan asserted the District government does not intend to convert P street in Georgetown into an arterial thoroughfare, explaining that it will not be widened nor will any of the trees or sidewalks be altered. The old-fashioned Belgian cobblestones, which scores of citizens in the community have risen to defend, will not be removed, but will form the foundation of an asphalt road surface, said Col. Sultan.

Some of the commission members advised reduction of the speed limit on P street after it is paved as a precaution against speedy traffic.

Landscaping plans for the new Federal Reserve Building and the proposed Grand Plaza in the downtown triangle, east of the Commerce Building, were referred to Prof. Henry V. Hubbard, of Harvard University and a member of the commission, and T. C. Jeffers, of the planning staff. Revised plans for the Apex Building, authorized to be erected at Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue, also were transmitted to them for study.

School Building Aided.

The planning staff, headed by John Nolen, jr., was authorized to work with the Board of Education in co-ordinating the latter's five-year school building program with anticipated playround and recreation center development.

Preliminary plans for the children's summer health camp at Bald Eagle Hill, near Blue Plains, were approved. The camp, which will be maintained by the District Tuberculosis Association, is being erected as a WPA project and is scheduled for completion this year.

Members of the Senate and House Committees on the District and Public Buildings and Grounds were Delano's guests last night at a dinner in the Washington Hotel.

Motion pictures and lantern slides depicting the development of the National Capital in the last 150 years were shown to a large group which included, besides the Congressional delegation, Commissioners Hazen and Sultan, Budget Director Daniel W. Bell, David ynn, architect of the Capitol; Chairman Charles Moore of the Fine Arts Commission, the proposed development of the Gran Plaza in the downtown triangle.

Girls to Breakfast With First Lady

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said yesterday that she will breakfast each morning with the seven Alabama girl textile workers who will be her house guests next week and that an ice box will be left unlocked at night if they turn out to be "young-looking."

The girls who are winners of convention scholarships to the gathering of the Women's Trade Union League, are Eula Mae McGill, Polly Brown, Nell Morris, Mrs. George Davis, Clara Martin, Esther Burke and Mrs. Essie Courtenay—all of the adjacent mill towns of Birmingham, Huntsville and Jasper, Ala.

Mrs. Roosevelt has long been an affiliated member of the league. She will also have as her guests eight of her New York fellow members. The 15 guests, she said, will fill all spare sleeping space on the second and third floors of the White House. They will arrive Sunday night. The convention lasts through Saturday.

Senate Chided

Ickes Asks Order for Data Already Furnished.

Secretary Harold L. Ickes yesterday chided the Senate by asking for passage of a resolution demanding certain data which he already has collected.

Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, offered the resolution almost a year ago, it seems, to demand an investigation of allegations of communistic activities at Howard University. Anaicipatin passage of the resolution, Ickes made the inquiry.

Yesterday Senator Charles L. McNary, Republican floor leader, asked the Senate to approve the resolution in the absence of Senator Hastings.

He explained that Ickes could not submit his report, which has been drafted, until he reecives a formal demand for it from the Senate.

Police Return Man Accused Of Robbery

Bank Holdup Suspect Also to Be Questioned in 3 Other Crimes.

Police Believe Bean Is Linked in Cunningham Death 5 Years Ago.

Charles Thornton (Doc) Ash, alias Charles Ash, under indictment here for the $25,000 robbery of the Woodridge-Langdon Bank, was returned here yesterday from New York City to stand trial. He will be questioned in connection with three other major crimes committed here in 1931.

Bean was arrested in a Greenwich Village opium den several weeks ago by Federal agents during a raid. He was charged with violating the Sullivan act—carrying a concealed weapon—and the narcotic law.

Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass was sent to New York at the time of Bean's arrest to institute extradition proceedings. The charges were suspended in New York when Eppa L. Norris, cashier of the now closed bank, positively identified Bean as one of the bandits who robbed the vaults in the bank October 12, 1932.

The indictment under which Bean is held charges that the former Baltimore bootlegger with two other accomplices overpowered the watchman during the night and waited for employes to open the vaults.

One Suspect Slain.

Norris said he was confronted by the men when he entered the building, forced to open the safes at the point of a gun, and then herded into the cellar with three other employes.

One of Bean's alleged henchmen, Edward Dee, was shot and killed during a holdup in Philadelphia in 1935, when he attempted to rob a pay roll truck while dressed in a policeman's uniform. The third man never has been apprehended.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said yesterday Bean is under suspicion in the $1,700 robbery of a Western Union Telegraph office, 1105 Connecticut avenue; the hijacking of the Salvadoran Legation, and the murder of Jack Cunningham.

Thompson said Bean will be thoroughly questioned about the three crimes. In the robbery of the telegraph office, three men, unable to open the safe, carried it away. The strong box contained $1,790 in American Railway checks.

Bean has been sought by police for five years in connection with the shooting of Jack Cunningham, local bootlegger and police informer.

Killed at Apartment.

Cunningham was killed while entering his apartment in the 1400 block of I street northwest May 19, 1931. A revolver later was found on Lincoln road northeast, near where Bean was living. The gun was identified by Lieut. John Fowler, police ballistics expert, as the one used in killing Cunningham and in the hijacking of the Salvadoran Legation, then located in the 2600 block Connecticut avenue northwest. A week previous to the killing several shots were fired at Don Carlos Leiva, 51, the minister, who entered his home and surprised four men loading legation whisky into a truck. Leiva was struck over the head by one of the men when their shots went wild.

Cunningham is alleged to have been killed after he furnished information linking Bean to the legation crime.

Bingo Rule Change Asked by Civic Unit

The Trinidad Citizens Association, meeting at Wheatley School last night, voted to ask the district attorney to rule that playing bingo does not constitute gambling when the game is run by religious, charitable or fraternal organizations and not for personal profit.

The association adopted resolutions asking for construction of an eight-room elemantary on Bladensburg road near Mount Olivet road, nad for a branch postoffice near Fifteenth and H streets northeast.

It also was voted to request that fire plugs in the section be equipped with sprinklers to enable residents to get relief from summer heat.

Plan to Limit Buses' Loads Begins Today

People's Counsel Urges Patience Till System Is Tried Out.

Improved service will result from the load limits for buses fixed by the Public Utilities Commission, which becomes effective today, William A. Roberts, people's counsel, said yesterday.

The new load-lmilt order, he said, will expedite service for the following reasons:

"The lighter loading of the buses will permit passengers to leave the buses with less delay through crowded aisles; through movement of loaded buses will mean a saving in time in the elimination of stops, and better distribution of the passenger load will tend to equalize the distance between the buses and give a more orderly and more regular service."

Calls for Patience.

Specific limits are prescribed for each bus. The number of standees permitted varies in various types and sizes of buses. Drivers are forbidden to permit anyone to board a bus which already is loaded to the limit.

"It is very seldom that I call upon patient with the service of a pub- the people of the District to be lic utility," Roberts said. "However, this most important order will mean eventually improved service for bus riders, although the loads permitted by the Utilities Commission are very high in some instances. The limitation will mean that during rush hours the drivers of loaded buses will be obliged to go by passengers at stop signs without stopping the bus.

"It will be irritating to the individual who has been waiting to observe a bus pass by him but it is quite certain that the effect of the order within a short time will be greatly to improve service.

Safety Considered.

"The element of safety is most important and when buses are loaded beyond the maximum fixed by the commission there is danger of interfering with the driver in his operation of the vehicle. The individual therefore most adapt his requirements of the moment to the good of the great bulk of the passengers.

"Of course the new order will reveal shortages in service at some points and I can assure you that if you will llet me know of such shortages every effort will be made to have additional buses operated. It wil ltake some time before the improvements in riding conditions which are known to result from this type of operation will be experienced. I ask you to be patient in the application of the new order."

'Ann Harding Is Star of Screen Mystery Drama

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE WITNESS CHAIR." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Rita Weiman, adapted to the screen by Rian James and Gertrude Purcell, starring Ann Harding, with Walter Abel, Douglas Dumbrille, Moroni Olsen, Frances Sage, Margaret Hamilton, Maxine Jennings, William Benedict, Paul Harvey, Murray Kinnell, Charles Arnt, Frank Jenks, Edward LeSaint and Hilda Vaughn. Directed by George Nichols, jr. Reviewed Thursday afternoon.

Employing the flashback method of story narration first brought into prominence as the ideal technique for the visualization of courtroom procedure in the cross-examination of witnesses in mystery death cases by both the stage and screen versions of Elmer Rice's "On Trial," this tale of a midtown murder in a metropolitan office building confines itself almost exclusively to the happenings in the suite of the Whittaker Textile Co., and criminal court.

Mr. Whittaker is found dead under mysterious circumstances by the early morning cleaners intent on tidying up his office. A suicide note is found on his desk absolving his partner, one Trent, from all complicity in a $75,000 cash shortage and Trent's revolver is clutched in his right hand. The case is looked upon as a suicide by everyone but Poole, the headquarters deductionist. He is sufficiently convinced it is murder to take the case into court.

By the clever utilization of the flashback device for visualizing the events in the past being testified to by the witnesses, a strong web of circumstantial evidence is woven around Trent—motive, movement on the day of the tragedy and the time element all conspire to make him appear the murderer. And then it happens.

Has Comedy Moments.

"The Witness Chair," fortunately, or unfortunately, is one of those cryptic plays which may not be completely divulged without seriously impairing the enjoyment of future audiences. A courtroom confession that may, or may not, come as a total surprise, depending upon how closely one has watched the early sequences of the action, solves the crime by the same flashback device that has so successfully built up the false structure of circumstantial evidence. This confession, prompted by a great love, and concern for the welfare of a foolish daughter of the accused, has the added virtue of encompassing its own plea of self-defense and accidental discharge of the gun.

Instead of being a rigidly grim and relentless example of crime detection, "The Witness Chair" at times assumes all the gayety of a sprightly comedy. This vein of levity is carried through the action almost entirely by characters that are subordinate to the mother lode of drama—charwomen, office boys, under-secretaries and the like. From this ramification of the story there emerges a young man with a genuine flair for comedy. This blond youngster's name is William Benedict and this is not by any means his first adventure before the camera and microphones; it is merely his most successful.

Ann Harding, in the stellar role of Paula Young, plays with her customary restraint and never lets fall any telltale word or bit of business that might serve to rob the plot of any of its suspense or climacteric surprise. The story affords her no appreciable opportunity for original or distinctively creative work, but with the somewhat trite material at hand she manages to build a character that is self-contained, poised and as convincing as Miss Weiman's fiction will permit.

Many Newcomers Score.

Walter Abel, as the star's leading man, partially corroborates an earlier impression that the cinema is not his metier. His portrayal is lacking in both sponsaneity and warmth. If masculine honors must be bestowed, I should say that they should fall upon Paul Harvey and Murray Kinnell as the opposing attorneys in the trial sequences. Among many whose names are not too familiar to habitual screen-gazers, Frances Sage, Maxine Jennings, Charles Arnt, and Frank Jenks should receive a word of praise.

The supplementary attractions are numerous and varied. An interesting release of "Screen Snapshots" reveals a large number of stars in their off-screen moments; Ruth Etting stars in a brief musical romance of small-town adolescence, "Melody in May" and a natural color cartoon comedy, "Neptune Nonsese," discloses the fantastic adventures of Felix, the Cat, in quest of a bowlmate for his pet goldfish.

The Pathe News is the final auxiliary of a feature that adds no great luster to Miss Harding's already luminous reputation.

About The Showshops

IN years to come many young men will look back to night before last and be sure that "the best show in town" on Wednesday evening, April 29, 1936, was the one provided by General Chairman Sidney B. Lust and his committee for the thirteenth annual Fathers and Sons banquet of the Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. I am not sure that they will not be right.

NELSON B. BELL.

There were impressive elements of value, beyond those afforded by any mere parade of talented artists across a stage, in the overflow assemblage of fathers and sons that gathered to do honor to this fine occasion. There was evident that splendid community of interest between fathers and their sons that bespoke a bond of sympathetic interest and companionship that will endure down through the years; a confidence, pride and affection that made of this evening of high delight a genuine love feast.

At tables that crowded their way off the main floor into every available inch of space in alcoves and balconies, the youngsters and their dads shared the pleasure of an endless procession of entertaining novelties that left no moment vacant from 6:30 to 11 p. m. Bill Robinson, Lester Cole and His Texas Rangers, from the Earle; one of Sidney Lust's juvenile amateur shows; boxing bouts, wrestling matches, feats of legerdemain, singers, raconteurs, impersonators, whatnot, provided a continuous flow of fun and frolic.

To name all of those who participated would require a page of this reliable family journal. Among the guests of honor occupying the dais, that extended the length of the ballroom, were celebrities from practically all fields of sport, headed by Clark Griffith, owner of the Nationals; representatives of the cloth, radio, the various departments of the press, the theater and other lines of activity.

Prizes were awarded the youthful essayists who had written on the topic of "What My Father Means to Me;" prizes were awarded also, by popular acclaim, to the youthful artists who took part in the amateur show; favors were distributed to all of the lads who attended, and autographs were signed at the guest table until there must have been bad cases of writer's cramp.

Those grown-up youngsters will be right when they look back and are sure Wednesday night's was the "best shown in town." It was, not so much by reason of the superior quality of the entertainment, but for the fine spirit back of the whole happy enterprise.

Congratulations to Dr. Abram Simon and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld for the fostering of an institution of such far-reaching good; to Mr. Lust, Allen V. DeFord, president of the Brotherhood; Adlai Mann, master of ceremonies, and all the others concerned, for a tremendous job magnificently done. I deem it an honor to have been among those present.

Yesterday's unexpected caller, who dropped by the drama desk practically on the fly, was Sam Cummins, the international impresario, who owns the American rights to the motion picture, "Ecstasy," now playing capacity business at the Belasco Theater and, of course, scheduled to remain on Lafayette Square for at least another week—probably more. Mr. Cummins has plans in the back of his mind that will be of prime interest to Washington when the time arrives to make them public. In the meantime, "Ecstasy" is attracting such overwhelming patronage that a special midnight performance will be given this Saturday, beginning at 11:30 p. m. Employing striking methods of photographic symbolism, the picture relates a tragically tender story of a beautiful, young, neglected wife, impersonated by Hedy Kiesler. Because this subject once was banned from exhibition in this country, children under 16 years of age are not admitted.

Since curiosity always is aroused in the minds of those who have not seen it as to what screen personalities might be included in any given issue of the popular "Screen Snapshots," I hasten to report that the release now on view at RKO-Keith's and referred to in another column on this page, among others, gives glimpses of the following:

Quite a list for one short-reel, if you ask me—or even if you don't. And if I have omitted anybody, sue me!

Preston Foster, husky star of "The Last Days of Pompeii" and more recently Carole Lombard's sparring mate in "Love Before Breakfast," has solved the high cost of something or other. Mr. Foster has ceased to be a landlubber and has gone to sea with a vengeance, according to wire report from the West Coast. On Wednesday, Mr. Foster closed his town house and moved his family, two servants and all that luggage aboard his power cruiser. His plan is to live on the boat at least until September 1, perhaps longer. "I believe it will be cheaper," he is said to have remarked, "and I know it will be more fun."

Quite so. If I lived by the sea, I'd try it myself, if I had a power cruiser, two servants and all that luggage!

Contrasting word comes from two distinguished stars on the Hollywood side of the continent.

Delayed by the illness of Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, the motion picture, "Gram," in which she was to have been co-starred with May Robson, will not be made until later in the year. The grand old lady of Wagnerian opera, and one of the stage's most beloved figures, recently suffered an attack of influenza.

Billie Burke, on the other hand, has just signed a new long-term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Miss Burke, as everybody must know, is the widow of the late Flo Ziegfeld, whose career is being celebrated on the screen at the National Theater by M-G-M's incomparable production of "The Great Ziegfeld."

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Candid Camera Shots.

Hollywood, April 30.

The other evening I sat with John Barrymore, Elaine Barrie and her mother . . . Barrymore is one of the most entertaining persons in Hollywood, and with a sense of humor. He told about the first Barrymore-Barrie fight which was on every front page . . . It was a warm summer's night at Elaine's house in York, all the windows were open . . . Elaine Barrie wanted to rehease a scene from Eugene O'Neill's play, "Welded," because she was to have an audition for a stage job the next day . . . The play is about an actress and a playwright who are always fighting.

• • • •

For example, one of the milder speeches, which Elaine Barrie screamed, is: "I have to fight. You're too severe. Why can't you understand and be generous—be just" . . . The neighbors reported the fight, not knowing that Barrymore and Miss Barrie were shouting O'Neill's lines at each other . . . Barrymore said: "Everything we do is copy" . . . One evening Mrs. Barrie went to the neighborhood delicatessen to buy a herring . . . The next day the delicatesen owner had this sign across the window: "Barrymore herring."

• • • •

George Raft has a sunray lamp in his dressing room. He is getting a sun tan for his role of the Florida gambler in "Yours for the Asking" . . . The walls of Pat O'Brien's dressing room are covered with photos of his friends. He believes he has many friends . . . Harry Cohn, dining at the Beverly Brown Derby, is studying the menu. He's puzzled. He looks up at the waitress and says: "I always get myself into situations."

• • • •

• • • •

Robert Benchley and Sam Hoffenstein, sitting at the same table at the Clover Club, talking and laughing, but not appearing to be listening to each other . . . Lew Brown betting $25 chips, and his former songwriting partner, Buddy De Sylva, standing behind him, betting $1 that Brown makes the point . . . The favorite croupier at the Clover, who, when he hands you your chips on a big winner mutters: "When a winner, go buy a dinner."

• • • •

Bill Grady, the casting agent at Metro, is a character . . . He keeps a book in which he reviews every picture he sees . . . Grady does this to keep tab on the various performers, and knows about their work when they are mentioned for a job . . . His reviews are different from any critic's, and his comments tasty . . . Irving Thalberg read one and has asked to read all . . . Speaking of a certain actor, Grady wrote: "He said yes in a scene and took his makeup off" . . . And about a novel, Grady commented: "It's the best badly written book I ever read."

• • • •

Fred MacMurray, while waiting on the set, draws pictures. He is a fine cartoonist . . . Whenever Director Van Dyke goes to the Trocadero, he orders gin and plain water. The waiters have come to call gin and plain water a Van Dyke cocktail . . . William A. Brady went over to Wallace Beery's table at the Derby and said: "You don't remember me, but you once worked in a show for me for $5 a week" . . . Beery answered: "If I was getting that today, the Government couldn't get a penny from me" . . . It's funny. But when a person says, "I'm going to the Coast," it means that the person is going to Hollywood . . . Although New York is on the Eastern Coast, no one ever says that they're going to the Coast when they're bound for Manhattan . . . A tailor on Hollywood boulevard displays the latest styles in men's clothes by boasting that Greta Garbo wears them.

• • • •

Drama Guild

"THE DETOUR." The Drama Guild of Washington presents the drama in three acts by Owen Davis, directed by Dr. L. W. Currier, with stage settings by Joan Bates. At Pierce Hall, April 29, 30 and May 1. Reviewed Thursday evening by W. A. Whitney.

The Cast.

Stephen Hardy .....Harry A. Westcott
Helen, his wife .....Helena Cook
Kate .....Virginia Pond
Tom Lane .....Clarence W. Moore
Dana Lamont .....William Milton
Dora Lamont .....Amy Verhoff
Ben Glenny .....L. W. Currier
Weinstein .....Frederick V. Rand
Jake .....Howard Frederick

An inspired group of actors last evening placed the Drama Guild of Washington once more in the forefront of local semiprofessional acting units, by presenting Owen Davis' "The Detour" with a spontaneity and fire which has been conspicuously absent from its recent productions.

A drama of frustrated ambitions, of a family on a detour, figuratively and literally, the Davis play presents considerable opportunity which last evening was grasped with uncommon precision and skill.

Excellently cast throughout, members of the cast stand forth as especially good—Virginia Rand and Harry A. Westcott. Both these players, who have been seen in earlier guild productions here, top anything they ever have done. Miss Rand, as the daughter, who would like to be a painter—to achieve the career her mother had earlier wished for herself—but who finds she has no talent, gave a nicely turned interpretation; one which was precise, without being coldly curt, and forceful, without being too dominant.

Gives Authentic Reading.

Mr. Westcott, who has heretofore been addicted to blustering through a part, delivered a quiet reading which lent uncommon authenticity to his work.

Helena Cook, as the wife who wanted to be a great painter, but who became a drudging wife instead, was fine. Clarence W. Moore, as the swain, continued his forward march on local boards. As the free-speaking artist, who squelches Miss Rand's hopes of artistic success, William Milton gave a good interpretation, with Amy Veerhoff playing her small part as his wife, with quiet smoothness. Minor parts were creditably played by L. W. Currier, as the tax collector; Frederick V. Rand, as the Jewish furniture dealer, and Howard Frederick, as his son and helper.

While Joan Bates' two settings were quite below Guild standard, it did not matter much, for the acting and the elements of the drama—expressed and implied—quite transcended the physical investiture. The direction of Dr. Currier was excellent.

Nats Reclaim Game After Making 6 Errors; Defeat Tigers, 8-7

Myer, Powell Stage Rally In Ninth

All of Tigers' Tallies Are Unearned; Linke, Stone Heroes.

By Shirley Povich.

A ball game that they had seemingly tossed away with five wild throws in the early innings yesterday came floating back to the Nats in the ninth on the wings of a pair of solid base hits by Buddy Myer and Jake Powell.

By a score of 8 to 7, the Nats beat the Tigers for the second straight day, but there was great doubt as to how it would all end until Myer and Powell checked the fluttering pulses of 8,000 fans who had sat through nine innings of palpitating proceedings.

The Tigers had possession of the ball game in the fifth, when they led, 5-1, in the sixth, when they were out in front by 7-4, and made another serious effort to win it in the ninth when Goose Goslin banged a three-base hit to right centerfield with none out.

Linke Is Hero.

But at this point the Nats' defense, which all afternoon appeared kin to a sieve, blossomed as superb. Ed Linke, who had found his way into the game in the eighth when he had to help Henry Coppola get the side out, emerged as something of a hero, but there was no doubt of Leftfielder Johnny Stone's heroism.

With the Nats' infield playing in to cut off the run at the plate, the strategy was rewarded when Burns grounded to Myer for the first out. And then Bill Rogell hoisted a high foul fly into leftfield. Stone raced across the line to make a desperate catch of the ball, and Goslin then attempted to score from third.

But the Goose was victimized by one of the best throwing arms in the big leagues and was out at the plate on a brilliant double-play. Goslin argued long and loud with Umpire Kolls on the decision to no avail, as the ecstatic 8,000 booed.

Big Chad Kimsey, who had replaced Roxie Lawson on the mound back in the sixth inning when the Nats were engaged in tying the score at 7 to 7, was the victim of the decisive assault in the ninth, when it was the Nats' turn to strike toward victory.

Powell Scores Myer.

Myer whacked a double over third base with none out and stayed on second when Travis walked after a futile attempt to bunt. Washington hopes faded when Johnny Stone flied to leftfield, but they were resurrected with the crack of Jake Powell's bat. Powell slammed a single over the bag. Third Baseman Owen made no attempt to field it, and Myer trotted home with the run that won the ball game.

It was no fault of Buck Newsom's that he didn't shut the Tigers out in the six innings he pitched. Every one of the seven runs the Tigers made against him were of the unearned variety, inspired by the weirdest spree of wild throwing of which a Washington team was ever guilty. Six errors the Nats made while Newsom was out there pitching.

For three innings it was a shutout affair and then the Tigers got a

Giving Burns a Pat on the Back

Cliffy Bolton gives Burns, Detroit first baseman, a big pat on the back in the sixth inning of yesterday's game between the Nats and Tigers. But it wasn't complimentary, for Bolton is successfully culminating a run-down between third and home plate when the Detroit sub was trapped off base.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

THAT man Jimmy Erwin was in again. Mister Erwin makes a fair living out of the prize ring—and I mean out of the prize ring. The business that goes on inside the ring is attended to by the various fighters in Mister Erwin's stable, notably Petey Sarron and Buck Everett. There are a few lesser lights among Mister Erwin's men, but it is Sarron and Everett who fight for the heavy dough in Erwin's stable.

POVICH.

Out of their earnings Mister Erwin takes for himself a third, thank you, maintains for himself an eight-cylinder limousine and generally does very well for himself, but he does very well for them, too. As their manager he has managed his lads into some very fine spots, indeed, and he also does a fair job of conditioning 'em for the same.

Mister Erwin, as a matter of fact, is batting 1.000 in the matter of landing top spots for his fighters in Washington. On every occasion, but one, when the gate receipts for a fight at Griffith Stadium have topped the $20,000 figure, one of Mister Erwin's fighters was in there fighting in the main event for a luscious share of the gate.

He had Tony Galento in the top spot against Marty Gallagher in that Police Benefit show in 1934, when 25,000 folks paid their way into Griffith Stadium, and in 1935 Mister Erwin's heavyweight, Buck Everett, and his featherweight, Pete Sarron, were in there as half of the two co-feature bouts against Bob Godwin and Joe Rivers. Twenty-three thousand saw that program, and now, with a $40,000 gate anticipated for the police show May 11, we find that Mister Erwin has maneuvered his man, Sarron, into the main affair again.

That, incidentally, was what brought Mister Erwin in. With World Champion Freddie Miller getting a $10,000 guarantee for the May 11 fracas with Sarron, and Erwin's man, also fighting for a nice guarantee, Mister Erwi was around putting on a little heat fo rthe battle. The heat, to Mister Erwin, means publicity in the papers, and he can do a very fine job at that, too.

Anyway, after Mister Erwin finished telling this department what great shape his man, Sarron, is in, and how little Petey is going to knock Freddy Miller right out from under his crown, Mister Erwin proceeded to tell, also, what a swell little lad this Sarron is.

Honest, there's something between Erwin and Sarron that's deeper than any mere fighter-manager bond. Erwin loves that little guy. He wants to see Petey win that title so badly he's in a mood to break down and weep if Sarron doesn't leave the ring with that crown on the night of May 11—and nothing short of a carload of onions flung in Erwin's face would move Erwin to tears.

He's nursed Petey along in the featherweight division for nigh onto ten years now and he's convinced that the little Syrian is the swellest boy who ever drew on a glove and the best fighter in his class for the last five years. He picked Petey up out of the Birmingham Boys Club as the best-looking prospect he'd seen in 20 years of dabbling with fighters, and those 120 fights Sarron has won in 128 starts attest to Mister Erwin's pugilistic acumen.

He makes you listen to stories about Petey; how the little Syrian lad stood on Birmingham street corners at the age of 6 and 7 peddling papers so the folks at home could eat with some degree of regularity; how Petey started in fighting as an 80-pounder at the Birmingham Boys Club and went up in the weights until he went to the finals of the United States Olympic trials in 1924 and lost a disputed decision to Fidel Labarba, who represented America in the flyweight division.

He tells you how Petey never forgets that boys club down in Birmingham; how he fights in at least one show a year for its benefit; how for the last three years he has distributed Christmas baskets to the needy in Alexandria, where he makes his home; how he bought stock in the Alabama Power Co. out of his ring earnings to insure his financial future; how he supports one sister and her family and sent another through college; how, all together, he's a swell little guy.

Kinda makes you wanta pull for Petey out there in the ring pitched over home plate come the evening of May 11.

Yankees Score Victory Over Indians

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 30.—Monte Pearson, former Cleveland pitcher, today held his old mates to four hits as the Yankees downed the Indians, 8-1.

Johnny Allen, secured by the Indians for Pearson in a winter trade, was belted for nine hits in the six innings he saw service on the Yankee mound. Allen had boasted that he would make the Yankees sorry for the trade.

The win gave the Yankees a clean sweep of the three-game series.

Seventeen bases on balls were handed out during the game, Pearson giving seven and ten being issued by three Indian hurlers—Allen, Al Milnar and Dennis Galehouse. Milnar had taken the mound in the seventh inning, but gave way to Galehouse in the same frame. In his big league debut, Milnar gave five bases on balls to give the Yankees two runs.

Joe Vosmik saved the Indians from a shutout when he hit a home run in the third.

2 Longshots Addle Derby Picture

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Louisville, Ky., April 30.—Mud that was fetlock deep at the Churchill Downs oval, a pair of workouts by relative long shots that had the railbirds gasping and signs of a record post-depression gathering combined tonight to complicate the fast-approaching drama of the sixty-second Kentucky Derby.

There's still no doubt that Joseph E. Widener's Brevity is "the horse to beat," 7-to-5 choice in a field of 16 probable starters and very likely the class of the assembled 3-year-olds primed for the classic of the Blue Grass country.

But the reaction, inevitable when there's so outstanding a favorite, has already set in. What with the weather threatening to turn a few hand springs, the "hunches" taking on serious aspect and conflicting reports from the feed box spreading all over the crowded premises, there's nothing either strange or inconsistent with this situation.

It's part and parcel of the biggest horse racing merry-go-'round in America—the Derby, incidentally, and not, as so many suppose, the "Darby." It will go right on whirling until late Saturday afternoon, by which time most every expert will have a severe headache, loud speakers will be wafting the tingling strains of "My Old Kentucky Home," and upward of 60,000 folk will be yelling themselves hoarse.

Anything may happen, before or after the pick of the 3-year-olds spring from the stall-gate at the head of the quarter-mile stretch, but the finish is likely to be short and sweet—all Brevity, in fact.

The weather, which has a habit of playing dirty tricks on Derby crowds and contenders alike, again may have a hand. The track was sloppy today after hard rains. More showers are forecast for tomorrow, with Saturday's prospects still in doubt. The Downs oval dries out so rapidly that current conditions mean little or nothing. If there's enough more rain, however, to keep the racing strip slippery, there will be a big swing to Grand Slam, the Bomar Stable's bid to keep Detroit in the sporting spotlight.

Detroit Backs Grand Slam.

Wet or dry, the Motor City contingent is backing Grand Slam at the prevailing price of 8 to 1. It's generally agreed, however, that the colt's only real chance for victory will be in the mud.

While most of the Derby horses had only exercise gallops today, Morton L. Schwartz's Bold Venture and William Dupont, jr.'s Gold Seeker, only filly nominated, were clocked in workouts that furnished fresh fuel for speculation. Bold Venture stepped off six furlongs in the impressive time of 1:13 1-5, thereby justifying his price, 6 to 1, and giving the boys another "beat Brevity" peg for argument.

Gold Seeker, although a 20-to-1 shot and conceded no chance of being in the money, reeled off the mile in 1:43 and continued to the eighth pole in 1:57 1-5 under heavy restraint. This, the railbirds insisted, was not the kind of a workout to be dismissed lightly, even with the long-standing prejudice against the chances of a filly in the Derby taken into account.

At this time last year the crack filly, Nellie Flag, was the talk of the town, rated the best of her sex since Regret won the 1915 Derby. Nellie Flag finished fourth, after being treated in very unchivalrous fashion by rival colts in the early stages of the race. The disillusionment of the experts, however, was such that they refuse to take Gold Seeker seriously this year.

All of which may be further reason for suggesting that Gold Seeker will spring this year's surprise, particularly since the filly demonstrated in Maryland recently that she has real racing class. Among others, she beat Teufel and Grand Slam.

The chances of the entry of the Milky Way Farm's owned by Mrs. F. C. Mars, of Chicago, were considered improved by the announcement tonight that "Uncle Mack" Garner, who knows all the "angles" at the Downs, will have the mount Sangreal, which is coupled with The Fighter. This apparently dis-

Chicago Turns In Triple Play; Boston Slams Four Pitchers.

Victory Secures League Lead for Cronin's Players.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 30.—A triple play failed to help the Chicago cause today when the Boston Red Sox protected their top-place berth by slamming four Chisox pitchers for a 16-4 victory. Appling, Piet and Bonura turned in the grand slam fielding gem in the eighth.

The visitors turned in a triple play in the eighth.

The gold-plated American League leaders clinched the game in the first inning with a five-run rally. Then they set off a seven-run blast in the second, pulled into a 14-4 lead in the third and added another pair of tallies in the sixth inning.

The Chisox scored all of their runs in the second. They drove starting Joe Cascarella off the mound after he forced in a run with a base on balls and George Stumpf cleared the sacks with a long two-bagger. There were two out when this outbreak occurred and Jack Wilson, after retiring the side, held the visitors scoreless during the remaining seven sessions.

Cochrane Added To Powell's List Of Tiger Victims

JAKE POWELL.

Add Manager Mickey Cochrane to Jake Powell's individual list of victims during the last two days at Griffith Stadium.

Cochrane, forced from the line-up in the sixth inning yesterday, reported from Philadelphia last night that no bones in his left foot were broken, but that he may be out of the game for as long as two weeks.

It was Powell who, on Wednesday, collided with Hank Greenberg at first base in a crash in which Greenberg suffered a broken wrist and was forced from the line-up for six weeks.

It was Powell, who yesterday sent a foul ball crashing down upon the instep of Cochrane and watched the Tiger manager carried from the field.

And it was Powell who sealed the defeat of the Tigers yesterday with the hit that won the game in the ninth inning.

Powell, the local boy who made good in the Washington outfield, literally sent the Tigers limping out of town at the end of the three-game series. Greenberg entrained earlier in the day for Detroit, where his broken wrist will receive treatment.

Abie Coleman Sonnenberg Victim

By George Considine.

Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg, former world wrestling champion, required only 18 minutes to outfumble Little Abie Coleman before some 2,000 customers last night at Turner's Arena.

The biblical text about perishing by one's own sword was faithfully borne out, when Coleman expended so much energy in missing his kangaroo kick that he fell easy prey to a tame body slam.

Strangely enough, it was Sonnenberg, who drew first blood (figure of speech). He launched a series of resounding rights to the heart—a series which continued until Coleman grew very woozy indeed.

Turns Upon Referee.

So woozy did the little one become after five minutes that he wobbled over and clamped a beautiful scissors on Referee Bennah Bortnick, while Dynamite Gus leaned nonchalantly against a ring-post and stifled a yawn.

Later Gus, after lolling in the caresses of a headlock, bounced off the ropes to perform the flying tackle, which has brought him fame and fortune and which revolutionized the ear-scrambling industry. But Coleman met the on-rushing Sonnenberg with a kick. And Gus fell through the ropes.

At the 12-minute mark Abie, for some unaccountable reason, took the upper hand and pitched the former champeen all over the rostrum. Abie couldn't stand prosperity, however, for he jumped crazily into thin air, fell heavily on his left cauliflower and played dead when Sonnenberg flopped him with a body slam.

No Bet—But Loses Shirt.

In what proved to be the best match of the party Ludicrous Len Hall, the perennial semifinalist, threw mountainous Harry Fields with a body slam after 23 minutes of unrestrained enthusiasm. Nobody ever bets on rassling matches, but Referee Bortnick lost his shirt just the same.

Amid a constant shower of peanuts, cigar butts and programs, Jim (Funny Mans) Cofield and Abe (Killarney) Goldberg fouled each other to a 30-minute draw.

Miller Here; Sees Tough Fight

By Bill McCormick.

Befuddled because Washington is not on daylight saving time, Featherweight Champion Freddie Miller arrived in Washington one hour ahead of schedule last night, but hung around Union Station until an elaborate welcoming committee, brass bands, etc., etc., arrived to herald his entrance to the Capital, where he will defend his title May 11.

In the midst of the longest layoff he has known since winning the 125-pound crown some three and one-half years ago, Miller announced that he now weighed only 128¼ pounds and felt greatly strengthened by the rest he has enjoyed since his last fight in Birmingham, March 20.

"That layoff was just what the doctor ordered for the toughest opponent I know of in my weight division right now," said Miller, who has fought as many as four times in one week. "The longest rest I've had since I won the title until now was two weeks, and after it I felt and fought better than ever before in my career."

Mrs. Masten's Net of 161 Wins Keefer Cup Golf Tournament

Mrs. Meckley Takes Gross Honors

Mrs. Hill, Defending Titlist Ties for Second at Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Platt, Mrs. Simons Also in Deadlock for Runnerup Honors.

By Dave Herman.

Mrs. Will Masten, petite Washington Golf and Country Club player, won the Keefer Cup golf tournament yesterday at Chevy Chase's course.

Going one stroke over the medal round she posted the opening day, Mrs. Masten turned in a winning net of 161 fashioned from gross scores of 94 and 95 and a handicap of 14.

She nosed out Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, Middle Atlantic and Maryland champion, by one stroke for the chief prize, although Mrs. Meckley with her medal rounds of 80—84—164 was awarded top low gross honors by a wide margin.

With only a 1 handicap to show, Mrs. Meckley's bid for the championship trophy was considered remarkable, for seldom do the low handicap players win such a tournament.

Mrs. Bishop Hill, of Chevy Chase, defending champion, put up a gallant fight to retain her crown. She tied for second with Mrs. Landra B. Platt, of the host club, and Mrs. Howard G. Simons, of Manor, who tied Mrs. Meckley for the first-day lead.

Mrs. Hill scored, 97-92-26—163; Mrs. Platt, 93-90-20—163, and Mrs. Simons, 91-96-24—163.

Fifth low net prize went to Mrs. L. O. Cameron, of Chevy Chase, who had 94-90-20—164; sixth to Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Manor, with 95-83-14—164; seventh to Mrs. H. R. Quinter, of Columbia, 93-93-20—165; eighth to Miss Marion Brown, of Manor, 93-89-16—166, and ninth to Mrs. Theodore Lonnquist, of Kenwood, 100-96-30—166.

Bethesda Wins, 8 to 6, From Eastern

Behind the steady twirling of Woody Putnam, who also knocked a home run in the third with the sacks loaded, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High won a surprise victory over Eastern High, interhigh favorites, 8 to 6, yesterday in the Eastern Stadium.

A seven-run uprising in the third inning that forced Coach Guyon to substitute his entire team, was responsible for the Bethesda victory and it was Putnam's homer that started the fireworks. The burly Bethesda pitcher fanned ten batters and kept Eastern's seven hits well scattered.

Carver, who relieved Hollidge in the third, fanned nine and limited the Lelanders to two hits the remainder of the game. Bartoo, with three singles, led the Eastern batters.

Baroni Wins No-Hit Contest by 10 to 3

Fat Frank Baroni, former Roosevelt High School star, turned in the first no-hit pitching performance recorded in the Washington Post Baseball Association this season yesterday, when he hurled Hibbs Company to a 10-3 victory over American Security in a seven-inning Bankers League game.

In another Bankers League engagement Hoffman, of City Bank, and Royer, hurling for National Metropolitan, hooked up in a spectacular mound duel which resulted in an eight-inning 2-all stalemate. Royer fanned 15 batteds and limited City to six scattered hits, while Hoffman allowed only five hits, although credited with only four strikeouts.

For the most part the "Beat Brevity" brigade is looking hopefully to the triple entry of the Wheatley Stable's Teufel and William Woodward's Granville and Merry Pete, all trained by "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons. Merry Peté is the mysterious member of this trio, a personal favorite of Woodward, who triumphed with Gallant Fox in 1930, and the Nox's son, Omaha, last year.

Twin Colts Are Born At California Stable

The same sire and dam produced twin colts a year ago. One died a few days later. Veterinarians said twin colts occur about once in every 10,000 births.

Treasury Bows Deeply (22-5) To G-Men

Mr. Edgar Hoover's baseball-playing sleuths wore out a half-dozen good bats, a complete set of bases (Model B-2, $3 per bag), the pitching arms of several alleged Treasury hurlers, and the patience of several hundred fans yesterday on the North Ellipse, where they nosed out Treasury, 22-5, in a seven-inning Government League game.

Treasury helped itself to a 1-0 lead in the first half of the opening inning, but immediately after found itself entombed behind a 7-1 disadvantage as Investigation batted around and launched its wear and tear processes. "Pepco" Barry got two singles in the inning.

College Links Play Starts Today

Princeton's six-man golf team, undefeated this season, goes into the first-round matches this afternoon at Columbia Country Club as the favorite to win the Southern half of the Eastern Intercollegiate Golf League.

With matches scheduled today and tomorrow in round-robin fashion, the Tigers, captained by Jack Malloy, and with Dick Lunn, of Chevy Chase Club, a former District champion, as one of their ace players, will square off with Penn State at 2 p. m.

Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania clash at 2:15 and at 2:30 Georgetown, the host team, engages Cornell.

Tomorrow's schedule follows: 10, Penn State vs Georgetown; 10:15, Pittsburgh vs. Princeton; 10:30, Cornell vs. Penn; 3, Penn State vs. Penn; 3:15, Pittsburgh vs. Georgetown; 3:30, Cornell vs. Princeton.

Georgetown, given only an outside chance of winning, will pin its hopes on Capt. Kenny Corcoran, Jim Lee, Dick Kreuzburg, Harvey Johnson, Charlie Bell and Lou Ferrari.

The teams arrived yesterday for practice rounds. A 72, two over par, by 17-year-old Johnson, of the Hoyas, was the lowest score reported.

Nationals Down Detroit Team, 8-7

1-0 lead when Kuhel made a wild throw that pulled Travis off second base and permitted Goslin, who had singled and stolen second, to score.

The Nats evened it at 1-1 after Dee Miles tripled and then the Tigers bounced back with four more in the fifth when they should have had none. With one out, Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis cut loose with wild heaves to Kuhel on ground balls and two Tigers reached base. Then Newsom pitched four straight hits to Gehringer, Simmons, Goslin and Burns that scored four runners.

Jack Russell pitched the sixth and literally pitched the Tigers into two more runs and a 7-4 lead. He pitched a single to Owen and on Lawson's bunt, Kuhel made a wild throw that left both runners safe. Fox laid down a bunt and the wild heaving became general when Russell threw the ball against the first-base boxes and both runners scored.

Back stormed the Nats to tie the score in the same inning. Travis got a double when Goslin dropped his fly to left center and Stone drew a walk. Powell got a lucky single on a ball that dropped between Goslin and Owen in an Alphonse-Gaston act and the bases were filled. One run scored on Kuhel's fly to right. Bolton was purposely walked to fill the bases and the rally sagged when Pinch Hitter Carl Reynolds tapped a ball back to the box and Stone was forced at home.

But it was on again in full cry a moment later when Dee Miles whizzed a single past Owen and Powell and Bolton scored with the tying runs.

G. P. O. Scores, 9-4, Over A. G. O. Nine

Paced by Buddy Loveless, who monopolized pitching and batting honors, the G. P. O. Federals yesterday defeated A. G. O. War Department nine, 9 to 4, in their Federal A. A. League engagement on the Ellipse.

In the Federal A. League, the Resettlement Federals pounced on Wilson, hurling for Loans and Currency, and transformed what had been a neck-and-neck battle into a rout, eventually winning by a 13 to 4 count. The victors scored eight runs in the sixth and final inning, adding to a 5 to 4 advantage.

Two Spills Mar Day at Pimlico; Genie Palatine Wins Feature

Jockey Tracy Is Taken to Hospital

Mid Valley and Fighting Cock Fall in Steeple; Paper Moon Wins.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, Md., April 30.—Mrs. A. S. Bowman's Genie Palatine was up in time to beat Alfred Gynne Vanderbilt's Parade Girl by a half-length in the feature Equitable Purse, 6-furlong event on the second day's program of the Maryland Jockey Club meeting here this afternoon.

Genie Palatine, ridden by Eddie DeCamillis, paid $9.90 and raced the six furlongs in 1:13 3-5.

Parade Girl, making her first start of the season, was heavily supported by the crowd of 6,500 present and ran a good race but the filly was plainly short and had nothing left when Genie Palatine challenged a sixteenth out.

Greentree Stable's Apple Betty set the pace down the backstretch with Parade Girl close up. Rounding the final bend, Mrs. Deering Howe's Again moved up with a rush as Parade Girl went into command. Genie Palatine then closed on the outside and as Parade Girl faltered took the lead to score without much effort.

E. R. Bradley's Bold Flirt, a long shot, was injured on the way to the post and was withdrawn when it was found that the filly had torn her right hind leg.

Mattapony, a daughter of Trojan, graduated from the maiden class in the opening sprint for juveniles to pay an $8.80 mutuel. Ridden by Harry Richards, Mattapony rushed up to take the lead from Glad Wings, but had to be ridden out to save the purse from Bergere, of the Vanderbilt entry. Glad Wings managed to save third money in the field of nine.

Paper Moon, steeplechasing for John Hay Whitney, won the day's jumping event, running a brilliant race under the guidance of Jockey C. Eagan. Reserved off the battle for the pace until the second time around, Paper Moon moved up gamely and disposed of World Series, in a torrid drive. The latter saved second money. Briar Blue came far back to take the show money. The winner was a $35.30 mutuel. A mishap marked the race. Mid Valley, leading the pack for more than a mile, tumbled at the ninth fence and Fighting Cock fell over him. Jockey W. W. Tracey suffered a cut head and body injuries and was rushed to the hospital in the track ambulance. S. Hirts, gentleman rider, escaped injury.

A miserable start marked the third race and resulted in Whiscenda winning the race. Gemwick and Ejector collided as the horses came out of the stalls and Bobby Marritt, Gemwick's rider, was thrown off. Carl Hanford pulled up on Ejector and the juvenile galloped in far behind the field.

Whiscenda scored a length decision over Brief, a long shot, which paid $42.50 to place. The winner paid $11.30.

Droll Story, the property of H. P. Metcalf, scored an easy victory in the fourth race for 3-year-olds and proved the first winner of the Maryland season for Jockey C. Reid. The gelding was rated off the pace of At Dusk, went to the front entering the stretch and easily was third. Droll Story was the favorite at $5.40.

Pomposity made it two straight for the A. C. Compton Stable in the fifth race, coming from far back to defeat Headin' Home and Finisher. The former Vanderbilt horse was given an excellent ride by Jockey Peters and paid $9.10 mutuel.

MATTAPONY had good speed from the start, raced GLAD WINGS into defeat early saved ground on the turns and withstood the challenge of BERGERE. The latter broke slowly, was forced to circle her field to enter contention and closed stoutly. GLAD WINGS had good speed to take command early, but could not keep up. INDIANA raced evenly throughout, but had no excuses. CHALPHONE lacked speed to keep up in the early racing, but closed full of run when settled in his stride. HALO flashed some early speed, but stopped. TRIPLE ACTION could not improve his position.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PAPERMOON, $35.30, $14.90, $8.30; WORLD SERIES, $6.50, $4.90; BRIAR BLUE, $14.30.

PAPERMOON, rated back of the leaders for a turn of the field, gradually moved into closer contention, wore down WORLD SERIES after the final fence, but was under pressure to the finish. WORLD SERIES, always well placed, moved into a short lead after the eighth fence, continued gamely to the end, but could not withstand the challenge of the winner. BRIAR BLUE, far back in the early running, moved up fast after one mile and finished strong. GREG ORMONT, in the thick of contention from the start, made a bold bid at the twelfth fence, but weakened thereafter. MEREDITH had good early speed and fenced stoutly, but weakened at the end. MID VALLEY fell at the ninth fence after showing good speed. FIGHTING COCK lost his rider at the ninth jump. BRAD made up some ground from a slow beginning, but ran out at the twelfth fence.

THIRD RACE—Four and one half furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start bad. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:22. Off at 3:28½. Winner, K. Bryson's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHISCENDA, $11.30, $6.50, $4.80; BRIEF, $42.50, $15.40; STORYTIME, $6.00.

WHISCENDA, quickest to begin and clear of interference, took a short lead in the early stages, responded willingly to punishment when reaching the homestretch, bore out during the closing furlong, but had enough in reserve to withstand BRIEF. Latter improved her position on the outside when in full stride, lost ground entering the homestretch, but finished gamely. STORYTIME forced a steady pace all the way and continued willingly under a hard drive. MAKING TIME, away in the first flight, lacked speed to get to the front, saved ground, but could not threaten seriously. WHITE SWEETS could not better her position. MOONBURN was away slowly. SPOTLESS raced very green and went wide all the way. GYPWICK needs education. GEMWICK was caught in a jam at the start and unseated her rider. EJECTOR was unable to break when GEMWICK broke in front of him and he was left.

FOURTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-old maidens and winners of one race. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:56. Off at 3:58½. Winner, H. P. Metcalf's b. g. (3), by Lord Martin or Abbott's Nymph—Big Sally. Trained by M. Smart. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 1-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:42, 1:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DROLL STORY, $5.40, $3.30, $2.60; LETTER BOX, $3.50, $2.40; PEZ, $2.70.

DROLL STORY, rated closest to the pace of AT DUSK for five furlongs, drew into command when leaving the backstretch, lengthened his lead through the stretch, but was kept under pressure to the end. LETTER BOX gradually improved her position in the early running, moved up stoutly on the final turn and closed with good courage. PEZ, always a contender, raced evenly throughout, but could not better his position. GAYLASS trailed the field in the early stages, bettered his position slowly, but could not menace the leaders. AT DUSK flashed early speed to set the pace, but stopped badly when headed. ANN VICTORY never entered serious contention. The others were outrun.

FIFTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:25. Off at 4:29½. Winner, A. C. Compton's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—POMPOSITY, $9.10, $4.50, $3.60; HEADIN HOME, $6.10, $4.50; FINISHER, $4.70.

POMPOSITY, slow to settle into his stride, steadily bettered his position, wore FINISHER down through the stretch and drew away at the end. HEADIN HOME had good speed to set the early pace, weakened slightly when racing with FINISHER on the lead at the final turn, but came on again gamely under good handling. FINISHER, always well up, took a brief lead on the final turn, gave way to the winner and was tiring at the end. HUT lacked early speed while trailing the field, but closed very fast in the final quarter. INDIAN NEWS flashed some speed, but could not keep up. MAJORITY RULE raced well in spots. MASTER LAD stopped. NAVAL CADET was left at the post.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GENIE PALATINE, $9.90, $3.90, $3.00; PARADE GIRL, $3.10, $2.90; CARVOLA, $4.10.

GENIE PALATINE, rated within reach of the leaders in the run through the backstretch, moved up quickly on the final turn and wore PARADE GIRL down in the drive. The latter, always close up, disposed of AGAIN to take a short lead in the stretch, gave way to the winner while continuing stoutly. CARVOLA broke slowly, gradually bettered her position and finished with good speed. PARAGUAY TEA, sluggish at the start, lacked speed to engage the leaders, but made up some ground in the final quarter mile. AGAIN had early speed, took a short lead leaving the backstretch, but flattened out at the end. APPLE BETTY stopped after showing early speed. BOLD FLIRT was injured prior to the race and was withdrawn.

SEVENTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-old maidens and winners of one race. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:32½. Winner, Samuel S. Sands' ch. g. (3), by Jean Valjean—Under the Rose. Trained by T. Bonham. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:41, 1:45 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACK PATCHES, $4.00, $3.40, $2.60; STACK ARMS, $5.30, $3.60; TRUMPS, $3.40.

JACK PATCHES, fastest away, immediately drew out into a clear lead which was lengthened as Dabson desired. He was never threatened and was in hand all the way. STACK ARMS disposed of MISS TWINKLE after a half mile, was no match for the winner, but easily held the others safe. TRUMPS raced evenly throughout, but could not make up ground. KTWO lacked early speed, but closed well. MISS TWINKLE had speed for a half mile, but stopped. SUMAC was outrun. CHANNING could not keep up.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:59. Off at 6:02. Winner, Miss Betty Bowman's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZEMBLA, $11.60, $5.20, $4.20; TAUNTON, $3.60, $2.80; PLAY OFF, $14.00.

ZEMBLA, going in her best form under improved handling, was allowed to settle in her stride before moving to her field, swung wide entering the homestretch to enter a forward position, rallied to severe punishment and closed fast to get up in the last few strides. TAUNTON, hard ridden to hold a forward position, took command leaving the backstretch, saved ground and held on willingly under a hard drive. PLAY OFF, in the thick of contention all the way, continued with good courage until the end. REPEAL weakened after making a bold bid at the final curve. DONA DULCIN was rushed off her feet and failed to stay when collared. NIGHT RAY was held safe. MARYS MAY was done early.

Frederick Game Group Elects First Officers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 30.—Clarence C. Carty, this city, was elected president of the Frederick County Game and Fish Protective Association organized here last night. T. Edgie Russell and Dr. David G. Everhart were named vice presidents; J. W. Humm, secretary-treasurer. The executive committee is composed of David C. Griffin, Henry Decker, Dr. Howard G. Taylor, James H. Falk, Frederick, and Dr. George Riggs, Ijamsville. J. Paul Delphey, Alvin Crawford and Dr. Everhart were appointed to draft quarter-mile championship and broke the record doing it. He was third in the quarter-mile at the "C" Club games in 1934, but improved enough last year to take third in the half mile. Mulligan thinks this lad has great potentialities.

Getting down to Vincent Healy, the lead-off runner, we find that he got his start in the New Jersey Prep School championships in 1932, when he finished second in the 220-yard sprint, whipping Eddie O'Brien, currently starring at Syracuse. By 1934 he was improved enough to win the national scholastic 220-yard title at Madison Square Garden and to win the 70 and 220-yards indoor championships of Jersey.

By 1935 he had sufficiently added to his speed to annex the 60, 70 and 220-yards national indoors championship, and to anchor the St. Benedict's Prep team in its record-breaking mile performance at the Penn Relays. This was improving on a 1934 performance that was good enough to lower the record for the first time in years.

This is the team that Mulligan is molding for next year's varsity events, the team that he predicts someday will overshadow the glamorous career of past Hilltop quartets that were considered the class of Eastern track.

Champions With the Proof

Frosh Relay Team May Return Hoyas to Track Limelight

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Borrowing the slightly frayed and tattered expression "let's look at the record," it is not difficult to understand why Georgetown's freshman mile relay team galloped away from its field in winning the national championship from a select list of opponents last week at the Penn Relays. From lead-off to anchorman, every member of the Hoya yearling quartet boasts a star-studded record that would augur well for their continued success in the hoofing game.

To begin with, it seems that every member of the crew is a record-holder of some degree. Smashing existing marks apparently is all in a day's work for Coach Jim Mulligan's pupils, for three are record-holders in various events.

Jim McPoland, anchorman, attended George Washington High School, where he helped hang up new relay marks four consecutive years. Briefly, his record shows that among other things he ran on the scholastic relay team that established a new mile record in 1933 and bettered this mark the following year. He won the New York City 440-yard championship in 1934 and '35; anchored the New York Athletic Club 1,000 meters team that hung up another record; finished third in the Brooklyn Knights of Columbus 500 meters and won the Anderson 500.

George Bogan, one of two former Tech High School lads on the team, won the District interhigh school 100 and 220-yard championships last year and the year before that, and also captured the Maryland interscholastic title for three consecutive years.

Leroy Green, his teammate at Tech, did not go in for track until 1934 when he won the interhigh

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

L. S. Corbin, sportsman's guide (phone Belle Haven 104 F 23) Quinby, Va., reports good fishing now in progress. Speckled trout, weakfish, hardheads and small channel bass have been caught with regularity since Sunday. Corbin predicts one of the best seasons in recent years, adding, "from all signs and indications this week will be the best that we have seen in many years considering the severe winter and prevailing northeast winds this spring. Yesterday my party landed several fine trout and croakers. Lots of drum (shoat) are being caught at the beach, 12 to 20 pounds." Capt. Corbin has three good boats and is fitted for deep-sea fishing. His first open dates are May 8, 9 and 10.

Cols. A. P. Shirley and W. D. Wrightston of the War Department, accompanied by Charles Gayetty, Gus Blagden and son, Gus, jr., and Gordon Turner, of London, England, returned to this city Wednesday morning with one of the best catches of channel bass made this season at Oregon Inlet. Seventeen weighed from 20 to 40 pounds each; two 40 pounders, one 37 pounds, the remainder 20 to 35 pounds.

These gentlemen had a very narrow escape and only the expert seamanship of Capts. Dewey and Sam Tillett, of Wanches, N. C., saved them. A member of the party described their experiences as follows:

"We had engaged two boats and were on our way through the inlet with boat No. 1 leading at a good speed when one of our party happened to glance back to see if boat No. 2 was making the same successful progress. Then we witnessed a sight that made our hair stand on end—a big comber had caught them while riding the crest of the wave and their motor sputtered, gasped and died before they had cleared that treacherous inlet.

"Everyone donned life preservers and we could see the others had already fastened theirs on as our captain whipped his boat about at full speed and headed in their direction—everyone in our boat had one thought in mind—could we get there before the next comber hit them, which was sure to swamp their boat.

"By clever manipulation the captain managed to get our boat within casting distance with a tow line, a miss meant failure. * * * We waited breathlessly as the line was sent through the air—an outstretched hand from the other boat managed barely to grasp the end of the rope and in the same motion whipped it around and made it securely to the tow ring—again we changed our direction, and, full speed ahead, took up the slack line, both boats getting under way just as the comber struck.

"They shipped some water, but managed to ride the top of the comber as our party headed for the open sea and a try for channel bass. We left for home with thanks and admiration for the Tillett boys."

A piston ring or valve had stuck in a newly reconditioned motor, causing it to stop.

Increased activity of all boatmen at Galesville, Herring Bay, Ridge, Point Lookout, Broome Island, Benedict, Crisfield, Neavitt, Piney Point, Shadyside, Kenwood Beach, Palmer, Governors Run, River Spring, Solomons Island, Tangier Sound, Tinghmans Island, Choptank River, Chesapeake Beach, Ocean City, Rehoboth Beach, Wachapreague, Messick and other Maryland and Virginia fishing resorts accessible to the Chesapeake and its tidal waters is most noticeable this season; the effect of an exceptionally good fishing season throughout 1935 has stimulated the desire on the part of most boatmen to provide better, safer and more fishable boats for the best season in years, weather being agreeable. Fish have wintered well.

The writer has visited many of these and other fishing resorts; has watched the remodeling, painting, reconditioning of boats that heretofore have been the subject of much criticism from anglers and rightly so—stalled motors, unclean cabins, poor, and in many cases no riding lights, out-of-date life preservers, no ice box or compass, and much blistered paint, etc.

Boatmen no doubt are beginning to realize the revenue which anglers contribute annually to the welfare of inhabitants along the water resorts and who demand safe and sanitary equipment at all times. It is encouraging to know that the boatmen are striving as best they can to meet these demands by increasing their fishing facilities year after year. This is bound to be of great benefit to angler and boatmen alike: better fishing, fair boat hire and improved service to both.

New York Tries New Strategy On Skeeters for Ducks' Sake

New York, April 30.—Wild ducks and the prolific little killifish—two of nature's greatest experts at mosquito birth control—are to be enlisted in a new kind of strategy to lengthen intervals between mosquito bites being launched for the first time at Long Island, N. Y., this spring.

And the new idea promises not only a unique means of relief from the pests, but it also promises settlement of a Nation-wide controversy between wild-life conservationists and public mosquito control agencies, according to the More Game Birds Foundatoin.

Conservationists have protested that the spending of millions of unemployment relief dollars on mosquito marsh drainage without due consideration of its effects upon beneficial wild life was creating vast "biological deserts." An enormous acreage of wild duck habitats has virtually been ruined by the work and the narrow steep-sided ditches have proven unescapable pitfalls for thousands of hapless ducklings, it is claimed.

Mosquito control experts have countered with the claim that no feasible plan to mitigate effects of marsh ditching on wild life had been discovered.

New Jersey to Open Fish Sanctuary

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cape May, N. J., April 30.—The first fish sanctuary in the world will be opened here next Sunday as the Cape May season of 1936 officially gets under way.

The sanctuary is an extended wreck, made to order. Fishermen claim the best place for deep-sea fishing is an old wreck and into the 72-foot depth of the sanctuary have been sunk disused barges, wrecks of boats, thousands of weighted cedar trees, metal tanks, old automobiles and many old railroad ties. Worms and other sea organisms accumulate there and offer rich and abundant food for the fish.

Dividend Voted On New Stock By Bethlehem

Initial Quarter Profit Is First Reported Since 1931.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 30.—Bethlehem Steel Corporation directors today ordered an initial dividend of 25 cents on the new $20 par value 5 per cent preferred stock and a payment of $1.75 on the old 7 per cent cumulative preferred shares.

Net income for the quarter ended March 31 was $603,065 against $2,396,026 for the final quarter of 1935 and a deficit of $607,298 for the March quarter last year.

Total income for the three months was $6,205,477, compared with $8,004,920 for the December quarter and $4,474,649 for the three months ended March 31, 1935.

The profit reported for the first quarter was the first for the initial three months of the year since the net income of $1,941,942 reported for that period in 1931.

The estimated value of orders on hand March 31 was $78,469,055, compared with $74,015,251 on December 31, 1935, and $57,202,828 a year ago.

Operations averaged 45.3 per cent of capacity in the March quarter against 43.9 per cent in the December quarter and 39.1 per cent in the March quarter last year. Current production is around 65 per cent of capacity against 40 per cent at this time last year.

The new 6 per cent preferred stock, which received its first dividend today, was recently distributed to holders of the 7 per cent preferred shares in liquidation of the latter's dividends arrears, amounting to around $21 a share.

Eugene G. Grace, president, said after the meeting: "Demand for heavy steel has been gradually improving. Railroads are buying a bit more both for track maintenance and new cars. Structural business is better. Oil companies are buying a little more for tank work. Merchant shipbuilding is also picking up. In other words, the demand is diversified and is coming from all sources."

Indiana Standard Oil To Spend $42,000,000

Chicago, April 30 (AP).—Edward G. Seubert, president of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, told stockholders at the annual meeting today that the company expected to spend $42,000,000 on additions and improvements this year.

Preliminary estimates indicate earnings so far this year are equal to or somewhat better than in 1935, he said. Sales are ahead of a year ago, despite bad weather in the early months, Seubert stated, adding that prices, however, have not been "quite so good" as a year ago.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended April 25 as approximately 7,860,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1935, 4,377,000 tons; 1934, 6,336,000 tons.

22 Revenue Districts Are Combed by 1,800 Relief Workers.

More than $10,000,000 has been found to be due the United States as the result of operations to date of the miscellaneous tax project, it was announced yesterday. This project was inaugurated during August, 1935, with a Works Project Administration allotment of $2,448,290.80.

Approximately 1,800 relief workers, trained and supervised by permanent employes of the internal revenue service, were assigned to 22 internal revenue collection districts, comprising 20 metropolitan areas. Intensive inspections were made of the books of furriers, manufacturing jewelers, sporting goods manufacturers, cosmetics manufacturers and enterprises subject to taxes on admissions and dues.

A report to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau by the commissioner of internal revenue, covering operations in individual cities for periods ranging from 33 to 35 weeks, summarizes operations to April 17, 1936, as follows:

Total collections and assessments	$10,351,614.94
Total collections to date	2,436,527.16
Total expense (salaries, rent and miscellaneous expenses)	1,370,780.66

Assessments and collections of $5,459,228.61, or more than half the total, were reported from the second and third districts in New York City. The Washington total was $50,983.86.

Canadian Financing.

New York, April 30.—Canadian corporation bond offerings continued to expand in April, bringing total Canadian financing for the first four months of this year up to $257,034,899, compared with $85,599,600 for the corresponding period last year, according to the Dominion Securities Corporation.

Actual Income Is 3.4% More During March

Average Pay Rises as Food and Clothing Prices Decline.

Minneapolis, April 30.—The average American during the last month had 3.4 per cent more real income than a month earlier because wages and salaries increased while food and clothing prices declined. His real income on April 1, 1936, was 4.4 per cent higher than the same day a year ago despite a steady rise in housing costs and a trifling increase in food quotations and general expenditures, according to the current consumers' study made by Investors Syndicate.

This gain in real income—that is, the difference between actual earnings and living costs—that took place between March 1, 1936, and April 1, 1936, reflects increases of 4.8 per cent in wages and 3.1 per cent in salaries, and declines of 1.6 per cent in food and three-tenths of 1 per cent in clothing prices during the period. Meanwhile housing costs continued their rise, being up seven-tenths of 1 per cent during the period.

Raw Materials Lower.

Lower prices for clothing during the last month reflected an easier trend in raw materials. Prospects of increased production caused the monthly decline in food levels.

Investment income was the only cash income item, between March 1 and April 1, to register a decline, being off 4.8 per cent. This trend results from a seasonal decrease in dividend declarations, which is tempered somewhat by the income from fixed obligations, a factor not much affected by seasonal variations. Compared with April 1, 1935, investment income was up 7.3 per cent, thereby showing the largest gain of any item in the cash income group and reflecting the trend of corporation profits during the last 12 months.

Wages and salaries on April 1, 1936, were 7 per cent and 4.7 per cent higher, respectively, than on the same day a year ago, thereby contributing importantly to the 4.4 per cent improvement in real income during that period.

Cotton Is Steady In Narrow Range

New York, April 30 (AP).—Cotton fluctuated narrowly today, closing steady, net unchanged to 2 points lower. Offerings were absorbed by trade buying and covering, but buyers showed little disposition to follow up advances. Closing prices showed rallies of 2 to 5 points from the lowest.

The Market

New York, April 30.—The stock market was treated to the unusual spectacle of a rally this afternoon, after prices had worked irregularly lower. While it lasted, the recovery was vigorous enough to replace for leading issues gains of 1 to 2 points for earlier declines of 2 to 3 points. High-grade bonds also did better. A turn also took place in commodities. September wheat rose a cent to 85½ cents a bushel. Stock sales of 2,300,000 shares were the largest in a month and a half.

Margin traders dropped off one by one as the erosion of prices loosened the roots on the cliffside to which they are clinging. They had some respite today after the customary late morning selling drive had subsided. Another dumping pressure came after the beginning of the last hour, but it was met with more bids than have been seen for a week or so and left the market in a better frame of mind and accounts in a somewhat firmer position, although many in Wall Street still feel that rallies should be used for further trimming of accounts.

Threat to Business.

Hearings before the Senate on the tax bill brought the evidence of Secretary Morgenthau of the Treasury and of another high Treasury official. Both upheld the measure, naturally enough, but neither was able to give any good reason for passing the bill, nor could either say anything convincing about the amount of revenue that might be raised. On the contrary, their evidence rested on the idea that the Government has been missing taxes through the alleged practice of some corporations to hold back part of their income from the stockholders.

Such an idea must be based on the assumption that it is good policy for corporations to pay out everything and therein lies the fundamental weakness of the bill. Complete distribution of earnings most certainly would soon bring ruin to business. The feeling in Wall street is much less optimistic that the proposed new system of taxation can be stopped in the Senate, and its passage will only add to the anxiety of the business world as to what lies in store for the country, especially in the event of re-election of President Roosevelt and his New Dealers.

Glimmer of Hope.

The worst of the whole mess is that at no time have the proponents of the tax measure paid the slightest heed to the suggestions that perhaps the best way to raise money is not to spend it. The old maxim that a dollar saved is a dollar earned is not in their brain-busting textbooks. Even so, it would appear that Secretary Morgenthau has hidden away in his mind somewhere a faint consciousness of cold fact, perhaps stimulated by an old-fashioned conscience.

In his testimony this morning the Secretary said, at any rate, that "the Treasury has been able to borrow readily the amounts necessary to finance the recovery program and has been able to obtain these loans at steadily decreasing interest rates. The continuance of this satisfactory situation, however, will depend upon the scrupulous adherence to an orderly program looking to a balance of the Federal budget just as soon as the needs of our people make that possible and thereafter upon a steady reduction in the public debt."

Well, anyway, as the homely phrase has it, "that's somethin'," and it would be much more if only the head of the Government could be infected with a similar idea. Then there might be some hope for the work of those who easily could show to any one who will open his eyes that "the needs of our people" right now make the balancing of the budget possible, and that if something be not done soon it will be too late.

Criminal Waste.

Another year like this one and it will be too late. As though the new tax measure and the bland indifference to any suggestion of cutting down on Government expenditures were not sickening enough, Secretary Morgenthau calmly predicted a budget deficit for the current fiscal year of $6,000,000,000. Not only is that the highest on record, even for this spendthrift Administration, but it is double that estimated by Roosevelt and Morgenthau a few months ago; it is double that of the Hoover Administration at the depth of the depression; it comes in a year that has seen considerable business improvement; it comes a full year after the date on which Roosevelt in his first budget speech promised that the budget would be balanced; it means the actual expenditure of $11,000,000,000 to $12,000,000,000. It forebodes nothing but ill for the country, no matter what the New Dealers may do hereafter.

Music.

Wall Street in the noon hour was treated to a celebration in front of Washington's Statue in honor of the first inaugural. An Army band was there, speeches were made, and the ceremonies ended with a charming bestowal of a wreath at the First President's feet by a maiden in flowing draperies who did a graceful pirouette or two on her bare toes. However, it required more than band music and a barefoot dancer to bring cheer to Wall Street with Telephone at 149 and Steel at 55. The crowd was large, but probably few of them thought much of the remarkable change in theory of government that has taken place between the first and the thirty-second Presidents, both rich land owners, but with a remarkable difference in political ambitions and in the character of their friends and advisers. Had Washington's statue come to life this morning it promptly would have turned back to stone on catching sight of the public debt.

Month's Decline.

April brought the first decline on monthly average to be shown in a year. The loss for industrial stocks as compared with prices at the end of March was 9 per cent, a setback suffered after prices had reached, on April 6, the highest level since 1931. The loss from that level to today's low prices was 13 per cent. The turn brought to a close the longest consecutive monthly advance in post-war trading. The rise from the low point of last year to this year's best was 72 per cent. Rails fell 11 per cent from the close of March. They reached their highest level in two years on the 13th, and the drop from that peak was 19 per cent. Their rise from the low of 1935 to this year's top was 106 per cent. Stocks as a whole advanced on only 11 days this month, most of that taking place in the first half of the month.

April Clearings In Capital Set Five-Year High

Volume for 22 Leading Cities Drops 14.3% for April 29 Week.

April bank clearings in Washington totaled $100,389,014, a gain of $22,941,059 over April last year and the highest record for the month since 1931.

For the week ended April 29, Washington clearings were $18,868,274.52, which compares with $16,025,833.10 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of 17.7 per cent. Compared with $22,380,821.05 for the previous week, clearings decreased 15.6 per cent.

New York, April 30 (AP).—Bank clearings for the last week of the month showed a falling-off from the total in the week preceding. The aggregate for 22 leading cities in the United States for the week ended Wednesday, April 29, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $5,152,120,000, against $6,011,214,000 for the same week of last year, a decrease of 14.3 per cent.

The total for the last week revealed a decline of $1,055,842,000, when compared with the figures for the week previous. A year ago, for the two similar weeks, a rise of $1,325,609,000 was recorded.

The Eastern cities sustained five of the seven losses which occurred in the figures for the latest week. These were Boston, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Baltimore and New York. Clearings at Pittsburgh continued higher and totals at Cleveland, Cincinnati, Richmond, New Orleans, Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis, Louisville, Omaha, Dallas, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle also were above those of the year preceding.

Burlington to Add Four Zephyr Trains

By the Associated Press.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, a pioneer in the development of fast, streamlined trains, plans to put into service four more Zephyr trains. The road applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for authority to issue $3,950,000 of 2½ per cent serial equipment trust certificates, part of the proceeds from which would be used to buy two streamlined, stainless steel 6-car trains and two similar 10-car trains, costing a total of $3,374,000.

The Burlington said that the streamlined trains cost less to operate than conventional trains, that faster schedules were possible and had "proved successful in reclaiming to the rails considerable passenger traffic heretofore moving by other agencies of transportation."

Balances Rise $64,000,000 During Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported tonight member bank reserve balances had climbed $64,000,000 during the week ended April 29, bringing excess reserves to $2,690,000,000.

The increase, which raised total balances to $5,506,000,000, was occasioned by a transfer of Government money from Federal Reserve banks to commercial institutions. This switch reduced Government balances in regional institutions by $61,000,000.

The inflow of gold again continued orderly during the week, adding $12,000,000 to the American hoard and bringing the total to $10,221,000,000.

The condition statement of reserve banks said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended April 29, as reported by the Federal Reserve Banks, was $2,473,000,000, a decrease of $9,000,000, compared with the preceding week and an increase of $5,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1935.

"On April 29 total reserve bank credit amounted to $2,472,000,000, a decrease of $3,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with a decrease of $61,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks and an increase of $12,000,000 in monetary gold stock, offset in part by increases of $64,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $6,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Member bank reserve balances on April 29 were estimated to be approximately $2,690,000,000 in excess of legal requirements."

Stock Decline Sinister Work, Collins Hints

Prices Do Not Reflect Business Headway, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 30.—A declaration that the immediate business outlook is "extremely favorable" was coupled by Kenneth Collins, department store executive, with a suggestion tonight that "sinister influences" might be depressing the stock market for political purposes. If such influences are at work, he predicted their activities would react as a boomerang.

Collins, vice president of Gimbel Brothers, Inc., told members of the association of advertising men he was no stock market prophet, but:

"When statement after statement showing vast improvement in profit is being issued, I for one cannot understand why the market should continue to go down.

"It is said that the market discounts the future. But I know of no business man, who has any doubt of the certainty of the upward trend of business for a fairly long term future.

"Busines news, trends, and indications for the immediate future are extremely favorable, and I am convinced that, in the present instance at least, the normal, sound business man is not going to be affected in his faith in the future of his business by anything as farcical as the present stock market.

"If by any chance there is a combination of sinister influences at work to depress the market for purely political purposes, I believe these influences are in for a terrific disappointment.

"And if one of their complaints is the injection of politics into business, then they have no right to inject business, through Wall Street, into politics, and you may be sure that if they are successful in making the public believe that business is bad, through newspaper reports of a falling stock market, the whole scheme is apt to work as a boomerang and they are likely to find the public blaming business itself for the drop in the market."

Collins predicted industry would show an increase of at least 25 per cent in net profits for the rest of 1936. "I predict," he said, "that this improvement in earnings will result in the general volume of production and sales of from 5 to 10 per cent. And I predict that when the year is viewed in retrospect it will have been found that advertising was the greatest single cause of this new prosperity."

Coast Artillery Veteran to Succeed Simonds, Who Goes to Coast.

Maj. Gen. Stanley D. Embick, now chief of the War Plans Division, will succeed Maj. Gen. George S. Simonds as Deputy Chief of Staff of the United States Army, the War Department announced yesterday.

Gen. Simonds is to be transferred at his own request to San Francisco to succeed Gen. Paul B. Malone who retired yesterday as commanding officer of the Fourth Army Corps.

A graduate of West Point in the same class with Gen. Simonds, Gen. Embick has spent most of his 36 years of service in the Coast Artillery. During the World War he was American Secretary of the Supreme War Council and was later attached to the Peace Commission.

A good part of his service has been spent in Washington. From 1903 to 1905, 1906 to 1911, and in 1914 he served here as assistant to the Chief of Artillery; in 1915 as recorder of the War Department Board of Review; from 1920 to 1923 as a student officer of the Army War College, and from 1926 to 1930 with the War Plans Division.

For his service on the American section of the Supreme War Council, Gen. Embick was decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal, the French Legion of Honor and the Companion of the British Order of St. Michael and St. George.

Gen. Simonds is scheduled to leave for California June 2. Before sailing, he is taking a 20-day leave of absence, during which time Gen. Embick will be acting deputy chief of staff.
